

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

GENERAL INDEX - - - - -	571

P R E F A C E.

THE Calendar of the Treasury Papers, of which the present volume is the continuation, extends from 1 January 1697, to the close of the reign of King William the Third, viz. 8 March 1701-2.

Attention having been drawn to the general nature of this Collection of Papers in the preface to the preceding volume, nothing more need here be said on that subject; but as some of the papers appear to the editor to be worthy of more especial regard, they are, in conformity with the plan adopted in that preface, here noticed under similar heads.

The minutes found in the Minute Books applicable to the papers hereafter calendared have, as in the former volume, been added.

It will be seen that the index has been prepared upon a different method to that in the previous volume, the object being to lead the enquirer more directly to the precise entry in the Calendar; besides which the reference in the index without turning to the Calendar at all, will be sufficient for the production of the document, by the officer in charge of the papers. In a few instances, however, where the entry is very lengthy, the reference to the page is given.

FINE ARTS.

The following petition, which is a beautiful specimen of caligraphy, was no doubt penned by the petitioner himself. (See Vol. LXXVIII., No. 6.)

“To the King’s most excellent Maj^{tie}.

“The humble petition of Thomas Baston.

“Sheweth,

“That yo^r pet^rs brother, John Baston, did raise and maintain a company of foot at his own charge for Yo^r Mat^{ys} service in the late rebellion in Ireland, which so incensed the Irish Papists, that they burnt eleven houses, plundered and totally ruined the estate of yo^r pet^r and his said brother.

“That yo^r pet^r with great difficulty, hoping in part to retrieve his said fortune, built a smal vessel, called the Whitehal ‘Yatch,’ which he also put in Yo^r Mat^{ys} service in the late war; but was afterwards taken by a French privateer, which so reduced yo^r pet^r and his family, that for a small subsistence he serv’d her late Mat^y, of ever blessed memory, as a clerke, under Mons. D’Allonne, her then secretary; in which time he did severall things for Her Mat^{ys} closset, both in writing and drawing with a penn, which gave Her Mat^y great satisfaction; but after Her Mat^{ys} decease he had no care taken of him, as her other servants had.

“That yo^r pet^r had Yo^r Mat^{ys} order by Maj^r General Trelawny to make a draught of the light house on the Eddy-stone, near Plymouth, which Yo^r Mat^y hath now at Kensington, and afterwards Yo^r Mat^y gave express order to yo^r pet^r to make a second draught of the said light house, much larger than the former, and according to the new alterations that was then made to the said house, with the draughts of several of Yo^r Mat^{ys} ships of war; which after much pains and six months’ labour, yo^r pet^r perform’d to general satisfaction, and deliver’d it to Yo^r Mat^y at Hampton Court three days before Your Mat^{ys} departure to Holland last year; for all which yo^r pet^r hath receiv’d no manner of reward or gratification, but is reduced with his wife and children to great want and poverty.

“Your pet^r most humbly begs Yo^r Mat^{ys} royal bounty for his said drawings, and that such provision may be made for him, in consideration of his sufferings, as may be for Yo^r Mat^{ys} service and the general benefit he humbly proposes by his said works.

“And yo^r pet^r as in duty bound shall ever pray, &c.”

BIOGRAPHY.

JOHN EVELYN, Esq.

Under date 6 March 1701-2 (Vol. LXXVIII., No. 64) is an interesting paper in relation to the well known John Evelyn, Esq. He had been a commissioner for the sick and wounded seamen and prisoners of war, and when he sent in his account (which must have been many years after the service to which it related), two items would not pass muster with their Lordships, who had not called upon him for a vivâ voce explanation, as he hoped they would have done. This produced the paper referred to. The first item was apparently for 40*s.* a day for travelling charges and other expenses, which their Lordships had cut down to 20*s.*; but he says 20*s.* a day was the stated price for a decent coach with four horses out of town, without any allowance for lodging and diet, a servant, and oftentimes a clerk, besides other contingent expenses. He had been obliged to go some hundreds of times to London, to visit hospitals, prisons, and other places, and was in perpetual danger in passing through the whole city. He was necessitated to wait on the old Duke of Albemarle, at the Cockpit, constantly once a week, and sometimes twice, to receive orders and to procure moneys from the receiver, and carry down slops, bundles of linen, and other accommodations, when ten thousand died weekly of the contagion. All the other Commissioners "shifted for themselves" [that is, they fled from the plague], and left him alone to take charge of the service. If he had deserted London and its infected skirts, or not supplied them personally, multitudes of poor sick and wounded seamen of our own, and prisoners of the Dutch, must inevitably have perished. Two of his marshals, employed at Leeds Castle and Chelsea prison, who had frequent recourse to him, died of the plague, and one came to him with the tokens upon him. The other item was for three-quarters of a year's pay after the war had ended, when his journeys and troubles still continued, and he had hoped that this would have been cast in as some recompense for his former services and expenses.

He also makes application for a fine of 150*l.* for making up the term of his lease for certain lands near Deptford [query Sayes Court], to be taken out of the debt due from the Crown to his wife's father, Sir Richard Browne, to whom the inheritance of that estate was promised by King Charles II., for his long service of 19 years abroad. His whole claim was for 6,685*l.* 10*s.*

COINAGE.

Persons interested in the value of gold and silver and coins of those metals will find much information in a memorial of Mr., afterwards Sir Isaac Newton, dated 28 Sept. 1701 (Vol. LXXVI., 36). The assimilation of the value of the French and English coinage seems then to have engaged attention.

COLONIES.

Some of the papers hereafter calendared, connected with the affairs of New York, are so exactly of the same nature as those printed in the volumes entitled "Documents relating to the Colonial History of the State of New York," published under the direction of the Governor, Secretary of State, and Controller of that State in the years 1853 and 1854, that there can be little doubt they would have been inserted in those volumes if they had then been accessible.

The valuable Board of Trade Papers from New York, to which reference is not unfrequently made in this Calendar, are preserved in the Public Record Office, and are bound in volumes or bundles.

LORD BELLOMONT.

But little apology is needed for the full abstracts of Lord Bellomont's letters, as they contain so much historical information. Some of them will be found printed in one of the volumes above referred to; but it is a very scarce work in this country. The letters occupy a prominent position in this Calendar, and it may be desirable to give some of the incidents gathered from them as a slight contribution to the materials for the History of New York at a critical time, as well as for the biography of one of its most energetic governors.

Lord Bellomont arrived at New York on 2 April 1698,* having been appointed Governor of the provinces of New York and Massachusetts Bay and part of the province of New Hampshire, on 18 June 1697, as may be seen in the Patent Rolls, 9 Will. 3, part 6, Nos. 3 and 5, and part 7, No. 10, and not, as Rapin says, in the beginning of 1695. The King, Rapin states, "thought him a man of resolution and integrity, and with those qualities the more likely than any other he could think of to put a stop to the growth of piracy, with which that province and the rest of the American Colonies were remarkably infested." Rapin, Vol. III., p. 396. That he found a difficult task before him there can be no question; but these papers will show that he prosecuted his duties with vigour, and that he was ever as ready with his pen to attack his enemies as to defend his friends. It will not be much wondered at that he raised up plenty of the former when he adopted measures which materially interfered with the profits of persons who had lived largely upon illicit traffic, and who now suddenly found a stop put to such a system. The dismissal of several of the persons who had been in the confidence of the late Governor did not add to the number of his friends.

* See Vol. LIII., No. 23. In a report of the Commissioners of Trade, of 22 June 1700, it speaks of his departure from England in October 1697. See Vol. LXIX., No. 40. He is said to have put off his departure until after the peace of Ryswick, and then was blown off the American coast to Barbadoes, &c. See Holme's American Annals, Vol. I., p. 468.

In the Earl's letter of 25 May 1688 (Vol. LIII., No. 23), he says that the trade of the port (New York) had doubled in ten years, and the city had grown vastly rich and populous, and increased to double the number of houses; and yet the accounts of customs had greatly decreased, and there had been a most general licentious trade with pirates.

The late Governor, Col. Fletcher, had connived (as Lord Bellomont says) at the corruption of his subordinates, and had combined with them to deceive the King and get as much money out of the province as he could (p. 212). Lord Bellomont urged that the Colonel should be censured in England for his administration,* to curb the insolence of his party. He says, when he (the Colonel) met with discountenance and punishment in England, the people there would be as tame as lambs. (See Board of Trade Papers, New York, Vol. IV., pp. 346 and 347.)

The new Governor found it unsafe to trust the sheriff, and was afraid to demand of him to call out the posse comitatus, although he required his assistance to rescue the officers who had been made prisoners when employed to make a seizure of goods in the garret of one Van Sweeten's house, because the sheriff himself had concealed

* There was an enquiry into the charges against him before the Lords of Trade, and a representation to His Majesty was made by them to the effect that he had encouraged pirates and neglected his duty, and done other acts worthy of censure. See Documents relative to Colonial History of the State of New York, Vol. IV., pp. 479-486.

goods to the value of 2,000*l*. The merchants at New York had evidently not been much accustomed to have their goods seized by the Custom-house officers, and were little inclined to submit to it; for when the new Governor ordered the above seizure to be made, whilst the officers were in the house, the owner and other merchants, whom he called to his assistance, fastened up the doors and windows, and kept them prisoners in the garret where the goods were, to the danger of their being stifled. (See 11 Oct. 1698, Vol. LVI., No. 78.)

One of the frequent causes of quarrels between the settlers and the natives is illustrated in a paper under date 16 Sept. 1698 (Vol. LVI., pp. 206-209). A Dutch minister of the name of Dellius, and three others, persuaded certain of the "Mohaack" Indians to convey to them absolutely, their whole tract of land, under the pretence that it was a conveyance in trust for their benefit. Their disgust was intense when they found it was a scheme for fraudulently depriving them of their land. Lord Bellomont's letter in this Calendar, gives a very graphic account of his conference with the Indians, and of the smart reproof he administered to Dellius in presence of the persons composing the conference. He told Dellius that the act was of such a scandalous nature that the like practice was not to be found amongst the worst of men; and it was so very surprising, in a minister of the Gospel of Christ to, a heathen people, whom he pretended to proselyte to the Christian faith. He assured the Indians he would do what he could with the King to get the grant revoked.* The interview and the present

* This grant was revoked at the instigation of the Earl by the Assembly of New York, as is shown by a letter from him to the Board of Trade, dated 29 May 1699. See the Collection of the Board of Trade Papers, New York, Vol. V., p. 529.

he made them, seemed quite to have retrieved their affection.

On 28 September 1698, the Governor had to suspend four members of the Council (see letter of 21 Oct. 1698, p. 230), as they opposed him in everything; he had previously removed Mr. Pinhorn, a judge (p. 206), from his place and from the Council. He further had to displace Mr. David Jamison, the clerk of the Council, and Deputy Secretary, who was a Scotchman, and had been condemned to be hanged in Scotland for blasphemy and burning the Bible; but had been transported to this province, and sold as a servant. He was also a professed atheist, and had two wives, but notwithstanding was first in the late Governor's confidence. Mr. Chidley Brookes, the collector of Customs, and Col. Bayard appear also to have given him a great deal of trouble.

In addition to the other difficulties of the new Governor on entering upon his duties, a Mr. Clement, who was to have gone out as his secretary, disappointed him, as he says, "dirtily;" so that he was without a secretary, and had to write with his own hand the drafts of his letters. He appealed to their Lordships for the support of the Government at home, or that they would recall him, and, as will be seen by the following entry in the Minute Book, he did not appeal in vain:—"28 Dec. 1698. A letter " to my L^d Bellom^t that my Lords have rec^d his sev^l
 " pacquets, & are extremely pleased wth his proceedings,
 " and that my Lords will putt the matters under exami" nation, and give all the assistance & encouragem^t that
 " is in their power."

Their Lordships do not appear, however, to have given him all the assistance he required, for in his letter of 2 Jan. 1701, he was badly in want of a judge and an attorney-general, as he says nobody understood the drawing of an Act of Assembly, and the Courts of Justice were managed at a strange rate. (See Vol. LXXII., No. 3.)

A favourite scheme of his Lordship was to supply our navy from America with materials for shipbuilding at 30 per cent. less than they could be obtained from other countries, at a saving of 20,000*l.* a year. (See Vol. LXXI., 16, and LXXIII., 7.) In this scheme so much of the colonial revenue, as well as his own had been embarked, that when he died, which was on 5 March 1700–1, the Council wrote that they were in the greatest consternation; there was no money in the public treasury and none for the forces, the Earl not having left sufficient for the subsistence of his family, nor for his funeral expenses. They hoped the next Governor would have the same honourable principles and zeal for the King's interest and the good of the inhabitants. (See Vol. LXXIII., No. 7, 6 March 1701.)

Under 11 Oct. 1698, an interesting paper will be found about the mal-practices of the Mr. Chidley Brook, above mentioned. (Vol. LVI., No. 78.)

The Governor resisted making the ports of Amboy and Burlington free (Vol. LIII., No. 23), as the merchants would transport themselves thither and carry away all the trade, to the destruction of the Government. See more on this subject under Trade and Commerce.

The following shows the respect in which the people of Perth Amboy held the Government and the King's authority. (See Vol. LXIII., No. 8.)

“Perth Amboy, June 27, 1699.

“May it please your Hon^{rs}.

* * * * *

I am now to inform your hon^{rs} that the ship ‘Nassaw,’ Capt. Shelly, comānd^r, lately came from Madagascar, & since run aground on Long Island shoare near York, landed some goods in this province, of which having some informaçon, Saturday 24 inst, I went & obtained a warrant from a justice of peace, & took wth me a constable in order to search y^e house where the goods lay in the town of Woodbridge. The m^r of the house abused the constable & denied my authority, & refused to lett the constable break open the door to search, which he would not suffer him to doe. I immediately got a warrant from the same justice to secure y^e m^r of y^e house, Matthew Moore, but he refused to go before y^e justice to ans^r his contempt, neither could I persuade the constable he had power to break open the door till I had obtained a third warr^t for that purpose, & till y^e justices of peace came themselves to see it done; where I found & seized 12 small bales or baggs of callicoos & muslins, & secured y^m in a chamber in the house of M^r Rich^d Powell, at Woodbridge, & lay there in the same chamber, & sent to Amboy for a waggon to carry them away, which came early Monday morning; people being so precise here that they will upon no consideration suffer a waggon to travell on y^e Sabbath day. On Munday about one or two in y^e morning, the house & chamber where I lay was broke open by about twenty persons disguised, armed wth clubbs, pallizadoes, & other weapons, of a prodigious biggness, myself threatened my life, & y^e goods forcibly carried away. I have not neglected to make all possible search & inquiry, but to no purpose, for y^e people here are all lawless, & have no respect to Govern^t or the King's authority, but publicly affront y^e magistrates & those who endeavour to execute the law.

(Signed) "CHARLES GOODMAN."

SIR WILLIAM BEESTON.

[Sir William] Beeston, [Governor] of Jamaica, complains that his salary is so mean that it costs him at least 600*l.* per annum to support the dignity of the Government. There were often strangers, Spaniards, Dutch, and French, with flags of truce, who created great charge to him, and he also says there was great want of shipping to carry away the produce of the island. (See 26 July 1697, Vol. XLVI., No. 87.)

There is a very curious and interesting letter (Vol. LII., 28), relating to this Governor, dated at Spanish Town in Jamaica, 13 April 1698, signed Richard Lloyd, who describes himself as "at present" the King's Chief Justice in that island, giving their Lordships an account of some things not previously communicated. The said Governor [Sir William Beeston, Knt.], was required to take an oath, pursuant to an Act of 7 & 8 and 8 & 9 Will. III., which was evidently distasteful to him, for he had put off taking it until he had incurred a penalty. On his refusal to take the oath, the Council sent home an account of what passed, at which the Governor was extremely nettled. He was furiously angry, and spoke to the writer in menacing language, and asked him what the attorney and he had to do, to ask him so many questions about the commission the other day in Council. He threatened them both very hard, and said he would see the paper they were sending home. The writer told him his power as Governor was too great. It was not convenient to let him see it, lest he might stop it. Upon consultation with his friends, the Governor called another Council, and took the oath. This sudden alteration made many think conscience had not so great a share in the first refusal. The writer further says, "Tis not easy to imagine how great a Gov^r thinks himself, when he is gott five thousand miles from England. This has already wished all y^e law books burnt, and in most things follows y^e dictates of his own reason before y^t of y^e law." In short, if he might compare him with y^e worst Govern^r that ever had been there, he might say of him that he was non melior sed occultior. There were divers persons in that country from whom considerable sums had been privately exacted, and yet they dare not make a noise about the matter, though some of them felt it severely.

HISTORICAL NOTICES.

CATHERINE SEDLEY.

The following letter (Vol. LXXVI., No. 60) is from the pen of Catherine Sedley, Countess of Dorchester, who had been a mistress of King James II., and played a considerable part in the history of her time. It is written in a very bold hand, and it would appear from the letter, if other evidence were wanting, that she was quite capable of taking care of herself and her interests. As is well known, she caused the Queen of James II. considerable unhappiness, and according to Burnett, the Queen in 1686 took means to shame her Royal consort out of his attachment. Burnett's account is that she called the priests to her aid, who on their knees besought the King to abandon this connexion, and he thereupon promised to see her no more. (See Burnett's History of his own Time, Vol. I., pp. 682 and 683.) His promise, however, was not kept.

"My Lords,

"I gaither from amongst you, for non spoke very plane, that after haveing solicited some teen years upon a promis, it begins to be a questune whether I had a promis or no. I don't see how the presant King and late Queen could refuse allowing a mentenance for a daughter of King Jamesis, esppecially a lady unmarryd whos portion was so gevin as not to be out of ye power of the Crown tell she arrived at the aige of eighteen. I have spoke of this matter often enough to his Majesty not to mistake him, noe more then it was possible for him to be insensable of the obligation lay upon him not to leave King James daughter eather to the charrity of y^e parish or to be a burdon to her mother's fortune, what I askt was noe more then was ever given. I shall onely instance a very late example, Mi^{is} Craufts had as much allowed her for the mentenance of y^e Lady Mary Tudor,* and afterwards it was allowd upon the same score to the countis of Marschall, both by King Charles and King James, and duly payd, S^r Stephen Fox, and all that waire then in the Tresury knows how those matters went; tis not the contenance of a pention now, but the arreare of what was promist me long agoe that I solicit for. DR. TITUS OATES.

Attention was drawn in the Preface to the former Volume to papers relating to the well-known Dr. Titus Oates. He here fully details the barbarous sentence which he partially underwent (Vol. XLIX., 32). Thanks to a good constitution and a skilful surgeon he survived to trouble the Treasury for several years. At times, according to his own account, he suffered from destitution, and had not clothes worthy to appear before His Majesty (Vol. XLIV., 60), but succeeded, as is shown by these Papers, and by other Treasury records, in obtaining what may be supposed to have helped to heal his wounds in the shape of various sums of money. He enjoyed a pension of 40*l.* a month from 1689 to 1692. He then endured some privation for the next few years, but besides minor sums 500*l.* were ordered by the Treasury on 15 July 1698, to pay his debts, and 300*l.* a year for his and his wife's life. (See Treasury Minute Book, Vol. VIII., p. 206). This was no doubt more satisfactory to him than the novel reversal of his sentence, proposed by the Lord President in the House of Lords, who said that the only reversal of his sentence he would assent to, was, that as he had been whipped from Aldgate to Tyburn, he should be whipped from Tyburn to Aldgate.

The letters from Mr. Blathwayt, the Secretary for War, to Mr. Lowndes give a clear insight into many of the matters that occupied the King's mind as to the financial arrangements for the army during the summer of 1697, when there was evidently a difficulty as to the supplies.

The following, to Mr. Lowndes, will be found in Vol. XLVI., No. 69 :—

“ Sir, “ Camp att Cockleberg,
the $\frac{1}{2}$ July 1697.

“ His Majesty having agreed with some undertakers, for the providing immediatly a magazine att Gand and elsewhere, consisting of two million of rations, on condition that that there be forthwith paid to them by advance, the sune of thirty thousand pounds sterl., and a deposite made att the same time in a third hand, of ticketts or tallies upon the malt, for thirty thousand pounds sterl. more ; to be made use of by them (in case they be not otherwise satisfied) in March next ; the interest of those tickets or tallies being reserved to His Majesty. And it being absolutely necessary that these conditions be complied with on our parts, His Majesty commands me to signify his express pleasure, that care be taken by the Lords of y^e Treasury, to make an immediate remittance of the first mentioned summ, and that y^e deposite of the tickets or tallies be likewise made, in the hands of a third person, as above mentioned for the satisfaction of the contractors ; without which, neither they nor any other persons, will undertake the making the necessary magazine, for the subsistence of our horse in their winter quarters.

"I am, S^r,

"yo^r most humble serv^t,

"WM. BLATHWAYT.

"The reason of this great advance and security, so much beyond what has been demanded for former years, is occasion'd by the loss of our credit, which makes it absolutely necessary that the foregoing conditions be complied with."

Mr. Macky [a coast surveyor at Harwich], says that in 1692 he made the first discovery of the descent designed by the French from Le Hogue, and on his information Admiral Russell went out and burnt the French fleet ; he also seized Mr. Francis le Rue at Harwich, coming from France with credentials from King James, and sometime after Mrs. Aldridge, with 112 letters in a double-bottomed box, all written from St. Germans, whom, with several others, he sent up prisoners with their papers to Mr. Secretary Trenchard. (See Vol. XLIII., 67.)

THE CZAR PETER THE GREAT.

Some curious particulars are afforded of the manner in which the Czar Peter the Great, and the persons who accompanied him passed their time, whilst on their visit to this country in the spring of the year 1698. Vice-Admiral John Benbow was then tenant of a house and gardens called Sayes Court at Deptford, which he held from the well-known John Evelyn, Esq. The Czar became the tenant of the Vice-Admiral, who let the house to him, as he says in his petition (Vol. LIII., 4), with all the furniture as it stood, "supposing it might be "a pleasure to his good master the King," and that the Czar "would have used his house, goods, and gardens

“ otherwise than he finds he hath, which are in so bad a condition that he can scarcely describe it.” The mischief done was very extensive, in fact, there is quite a catalogue of the destruction, much larger than it might be supposed by the amount, 350*l.* 9*s.* 6*d.*, at which it was then valued. Of this sum Sir Christopher Wren recommended 162*l.* 7*s.* to be apportioned to Mr. Evelyn (Benbow’s term [of three years] having nearly expired), 158*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* to the petitioner and 30*l.* to a poor man named Russell, whose house was ruined by the “guards.” The damage was of such a nature as must have resulted from the recklessness of persons leading the most disorderly lives. Indeed, these papers supply undeniable evidence (at least for this period of his life) for Macauley’s strong remarks in relation to the Czar (History of England, Vol. V., pp. 78 and 79), that “with all the high qualities which were peculiar to himself, he had all the filthy habits which were then common among his countrymen. To the end of his life, while disciplining armies, founding schools, framing codes, organizing tribunals, building cities in deserts, joining distant seas by artificial rivers, he lived in his palace like a hog in a sty; and when he was entertained by other sovereigns never failed to leave on their tapestried walls and velvet state beds unequivocal proof that a savage had been there.”

Amongst the numerous articles destroyed and injured were “Twenty fine pictures very much torn and the frames all broke, 10.00.00,” and “severall fine draughts and other designes relateing to the sea, lost, vallued by the Admirall at £50 0 0.” In a note at p. xi. of the preface to Memoirs illustrative of the life and writings of John Evelyn, Esq., F.R.S., edited by William Bray, Esq., F.S.A., “it is said that one of Czar Peter’s favourite recreations was to demolish the hedges by riding through “ them in a wheelbarrow ;” whether that were so or not, certain it is that in the “ Account of damages done to the “ building and fences by the Czar of Moscovy,” there is a claim of one pound for three wheelbarrows broken and lost.

The office of works was ordered to pay the whole amount.

Other sums of 1,500*l.* and 300*l.* had been ordered by the Treasury to be issued to the Cofferer of the Household in the previous December and January for the reception of the Czar and his court. (See Treasury Minute Book, Vol. VIII., pp. 83 and 85.)

Some idea may be formed of the amount of attention given by the King to the discharge of his administrative duties from three papers marked A., B., and C. (Vol. LV., No. 3) which were brought under his Majesty’s consideration on 18 July 1698. Mr. Lowndes evidently attended the King with them at Kensington. One of the three was read to the King, and another by him, as appears by memoranda at the head, in Lowndes’s hand, and in the margin are the minutes, made in the same hand, of what the King ordered to be done. Thus about 140 separate matters appear to have been considered and determined by His Majesty on this 18th of July 1698.*.

The following paper (Vol. XLIX., No. 17.) relating to an enquiry into the proceedings of the Excise Commission at which the King presided, shows the observations made by him as well as of other persons present.

It is entered also in the Minute Book on 29 Nov. 1697, Vol. VIII., p. 60, and is there entitled in the margin, “Hearing before the King about mismanagem^t in the “ Excise.”

* Amongst his arduous duties it is pleasant to find him sending to the Queen of Sweden a present of “Goddard’s drops,” to the value of 60*l.*, in addition to some of the “Countess of Kent’s powder.” Vol. LI., No. 6.

Some particulars of the fitting out by the Scotch of the ill-fated expedition to the Isthmus of Darien will be found under 27 June and 21 July 1698 (Vol. LIV., 17, and LV., 9). Their destination was evidently not then known in London. They sailed on 16 July 1698. (See the Darien Papers printed by the Bannatyne Club, p. 178.)

The paper of 27 June and its enclosure are here given :—

“ Leith, 18 June 1698.”

The following petition is from a person who was employed as a spy on the projected Invasion of England in 1695 (Vol. LXI., No. 33.) :—

“ To the King’s most excellent Matie is humbly presented the case of John Writtle, marrin^r.

“ That he was born and hath ever since lived on the coast of Kent ; was from his infancy bred up to the sea, and in the owling trade, in w^{ch} he hath had as great a share, and as master made as many or more voyages to and from France, as any man on that coast.

“That having wholly declined the same, as being convinced of its pernicious and destructive effect to the Government and his country, he was the first man that discovered the ways and means for suppressing the same, w^{ch} have been put in practice, and hath in a manner wholly destroyed those evils through the coasts of Kent and Sussex.

“That having given sufficient testimonies of his sincere affection to his Mat^y and this Government, w^{ch} in the year 1695 was designed to be invaded from Callis, &c., he was on the 5th of August 1695 recommended to the R^t Hon^{ble} the Lord Chancellor, as a fitt person to send over to France to give an acco^t of the designs and posture of the enemie, which he accepted to perform, and was promised to be very well rewarded, and had orders to follow the directions of M^r James Chadwick, deceased, then member for Dover, and son-in-law to the late Arch bishop^p of Canterbury, w^{ch} he did accordingly.

“And on the 11th of August 1695 went for Callis, betwixt w^{ch} and the 11th of Feb: next following, he went and return’d three times, running the aparent hazard of his life each time; being in with the intended invaders, by stealth gott letters out of parcells made up to be sent for England, by other hands, and brought them over with the first and most certain intellgence of men and things relating to the said intended invasion, to the very great service and satisfaction of your Mat^y and your ministers, as is well known to the L^d Chancellor, M^r Secretary Vernon, and others; all which he hath perform’d att his own charge, and therein expended w^t money he had or could borrow, as he also afterwards did, in the detection of the owlers and smuglers, their accomplices and abettors, many of whom (viz^t), Paine, Hunt, Nowell, &c., were by him taken, and with many others convicted,” &c., &c.

This was referred by an order in Council of 18 May 1699, to the Lords of the Treasury, which recommended him for some better employment as a recompense for his services. It is minuted:—“Read 22 Jun. 1699. My “Lords can doe nothing upon this.”

THE POST OFFICE.

Many papers will be found touching this important Government Department. An interesting report on the subject of foreign letters, dated 27 April 1699 may be read in Vol. LX. No. 77. Public opinion, so far as it was shadowed forth in the Post-master's Report of that day, agreed very exactly, not only with public opinion of our own day, but with its practical application in the cheap conveyance of letters. The report in question states that it had "been found by experience in the office here, that

 " the easy and cheap corresponding doth encourage " people to write letters, and that this revenue was but " little in proportion to what it now is till the postage of
 " letters was reduced from six pence to three pence." The loose manner in which the letters were collected for America is also worthy of remark, viz., by bags lodged by masters of vessels in the coffee houses, the depositors being at liberty to rummage and thereby become acquainted with the contents of the bags.

A petition of the mayor, aldermen, clergy, and others of the city of Exeter, for the extension of the Post from Bristol to Wootton-under-Edge, gives the following amongst other reasons for the boon :—

"There runs a post from London to Gloucester, thro' Cirencester, from whence there is a branch thro' Tedbury to Wotton-under-Edge, which is within 14 miles of Bristol. This post from London to Gloucester passeth through Abington, takes in there a post from Oxford: so y^t if a stage be establish'd betwixt Bristol & Wotton-under-Edge, w^{ch} would not cost above 30 pounds per ann., there would, according to y^e best computation y^t can be made, be above 150 pounds per ann. more advantage to y^e Post Office, by such letters as are now all convey'd by carrier. And experience hath shewed us y^t such posts as have been settled, tho' at first they may not yeild so considerable a revenue, yett they daily increase, in regard all people finding y^e speedy & safe conveyance by y^e post, do much rather choose to send their letters that way, then by carrier, when posts are known & regularly fix'd * * *.

They further say that, "From Cirencester to Exeter is about 90 miles ; between w^{ch} places is a great & constant trade for wool, and w^t letters are sent from Cyrencester to Exeter by way of London, go at least 220 miles: so y^t to have an answer to such letters, requires near a fortnight, & by y^e carrier it is y^e same; whereas if this by-post was establish'd, an answer might be had in 4 days, and y^e same may be s^d for y^e other towns, w^{ch} lye about these stages.'" (See about 16 June 1699. Vol. LXII., 21.)

SCIENTIFIC AND LITERARY PURSUITS.

The eminent philosopher and astronomer, Edmund Halley, conceived that he had discovered the true cause of the variation of the compass, and had obtained a small vessel from the Lords of the Admiralty to make experiments, in remote parts, proper to ascertain the theory of magnetical direction. On his petition for the very moderate sum of 100*l.*, the same was allowed, to make use of foreign ports, and take with him the required instruments, such as clocks, telescopes, &c. (See Vol. LVI., No. 31, 20 Sept. 1698.)

Among the many great and abstruse subjects which occupied the mind of this gifted man, this was evidently a favourite, for whilst a school-boy he is said to have made observations on the variation of the magnetic needle, and the subject occupied his thoughts a great deal in after life. (See Chalmers's Biographical Dictionary, Vol. XVII., pp. 71 and 75.)

In a paper under date 27 Feb. 1700-1 (Vol. LXXII., No. 57) there are notices of two eminent men, viz., Dr. John Wallis, the mathematician, who was one of the first members of the Royal Society, and Dr. Thomas Hyde, a learned writer and Oriental scholar. He was also Keeper of the Bodleian Library. The former was engaged in teaching the art of deciphering and the latter in instructing youths in the Arabic and Turkish languages. Both came to the Treasury for rewards for their trouble.

STATISTICS.

The highest rental which the lands of Roger o' Shagnassy would fetch in Ireland in the year 1697 was 2*s.* an acre. (See 30 Dec. 1697, Vol. L., No. 14.)

The Governor of New York on 21 Sept. 1698 (p. 212), writes that food and clothing were treble the price of the same in England, and again on 21 Oct. (p. 229), that land in the Jerseys could be bought at 5*l.* for 100 acres; and land in the province of New York cost 4*l.* 10*s.* per acre to clear, being all wooded.

In a proposal for raising 112,500*l.* per ann. by a duty on hats, the population of England and Wales is estimated at seven millions; each of whom would wear out a hat in a year. The paper is undated, but is probably a little before the year 1700. (See Vol. LXVI., No. 50.)

This estimate pretty nearly tallies with that given in Angliæ Notitia, or the Present State of England, in 1702, by Edw. Chamberlayne, LL.D.

TOPOGRAPHY.

The following interesting documents (Vol. LIV., No. 46) illustrate the topography of Westminster as well as the sagacity of the great architect, or rather surveyor of works, as he was then called, Sir Christopher Wren. The churchwardens and inhabitants of St. Margaret's, Westminster, petitioned to have the clock house and bell sold for the benefit of the poor; the parish being in debt about 2,000*l.* The King gave them what they asked. There is a warrant granting the bell and all the materials of the building to the churchwardens in the King's Warrant Book, Vol. 12, p. 530. They afterwards obtained a lease for 31 years, of the ground whereon the clock house stood, as it would seem, to erect a charity school for the poor children of the parish. (See Letter Book, Vol. 10, p. 258.)

"To the King's most excellent Majty.

"The humble petiçon of the Churchwardens and Inhabitants of St Margth, Westminster.

"Humbly sheweth,

"That the poor of the said parish have increased so much of late years that they are now indebted abt 2,000^{li}, the interest whereof is very burthensome to the inhabitants, who are so impoverisht that it will be impossible for them to pay the principall. But that (sic) would alleviate yo^r pet^{rs} in some measure therein would be by yo^r Ma^{ty} being graciously pleased to bestow on them the old clock house and bell thereof, called Great Tomm of Westminster, by which act of charity your Majty would put a great many people out of danger of their lives, who inhabit under the same, it being so decayed and ruinous; least by its falling downe it should destroy them.

"Yo^r pet^{rs} therefore most humbly pray yo^r Majty for reasons aforesaid, that you would be pleased to grant your warrant to the said churchwardens, to have the said clock house and bell sold for the use of the poor of the said parish.

"And yo^r pet^r shall ever pay, &c."

[Referred by letter of M^r W^m Lowndes to Sir Ch^r Wrenn], whose report follows.

"May it please y^r Lpp[^s].

"In obedience to your Lpp^s reference upon the petition of the churchwardens of St Margaret's, Westminster, praying a warrant to have the clock house and bell sold for the use of their poor, I have viewed, inquired, and considered of the same, and in pursuance of the severall parts of your Lpp^s reference; 1st, that I should give a trew state of the same; 2^{dly}, the value of what is desired; 3^{dly}, my opinion what is fitt to be done. I humbly certifie: 1st. That the houses or little tenements risen by connivance from booths, are so built about the tower, that it can neither be repaired nor pulled downe without a strong scaffold built over such slight houses to preserve them; these tenements being upon the wast of the Pallace, I suppose are part of M^r Hall's great lease; the present landlady of them is an old lady living in Northamptonshire, as I am informed, and the reversion in a laweyer. The present tenants, though forewarned very often of the danger, willingly runne the riske of their lives, because for that reason they pay litle or noe rent; but I suppose the Tower itselfe can be no part of the wast, and was alwayes esteemed by our office as incumbent upon us to repare, but by reason of the antiquity and these impediments, wee could do litle towards it. Yet about 18 years past a designe was given to King Charles, and seconded by the then Lord Cheif Justices and other eminent lawyers to new case it with ashler, and to put a lanterne upon it, to raise the bell higher, and to make a new clock; and as I remember, the estimate of this designe was about 1,500^{li}. It would have been usefull to the terme, and very ornamentall to this part of the town, but no order was then given.

"2^{dly}. As to the valew of what is desired, I question whither the materialls of the Tower will pay for the scaffold and dammages that may happen to the houses, and the charge of taking downe and carrying of rubbish. The bell I have viewed, and by guesse as it stands, and by compareing it with other great bells which I know, take to be two tunns in weight, which at 8^d p pound (the highest price I can, upon inquiry amongst the founders, find will be given for old metall) will amount to 149^{li} 6^s 8^d. It is a large but thin bell, of an excellent tone, and cannot prove to be neer three tunns, and if it should be three tunns, will amount at most to 224^{li}.

"3^{dly}. As to my opinion what is fitt to be done. Your L^{ps} are the best judges how the petitioners may be relieved as deserving your compassion; yet pardon your surveyour, if out of duty, he modestly aske whither it be better to pull downe a public building upon so small a consideration, or to repare it with advantage to the beauty of the towne, which would most certainly be done in any of our neighbour countries, who are more sensible then wee, that to adorne their towns, is a lasting benefit to the poor; but this is said with the utmost submission to your L^{ps} wisdoms.

"CHR. WREN,

"July 11th 1698."

TRADE AND COMMERCE.

In 1697, Sir Thomas Lane and Sir John Moore, Knts., William Penn, and others, on behalf of the proprietors of East and West Jersey, state that King Charles II. granted them the liberty to constitute maritime and other officers, and to make and elect ports in those provinces; and thereupon they had constituted the towns of Amboy in East Jersey, and the towns of Burlington, Salem, and Cape May, in West Jersey, to be ports for lading and unlading merchandise; and notwithstanding the provinces were no ways dependent, or part of the province of New York, yet the collectors there presumed to make all ships and vessels bound to the Jerseys come to New York to unlade or pay customs there, which they were advised was illegal, and discouraged the trade. They prayed to enjoy the liberty of their own ports for the lading and unlading goods.

The Commissioners of Customs in London, to whom the petition was referred, reported that the inhabitants of New York had granted a certain revenue to the Crown of England for the defence of that province, arising by an impost or custom on imported and exported goods, on Indian trading, on goods carried by Hudson's River to Albany, and excise of liquors retailed. The collector of those duties had demanded the same on all goods belonging to East and West Jerseys, coming within the river of New York, called Hudson's River, which, being about a mile and a half over, divides the Jerseys from New York, being, as he alleged, agreeable to former practice before his time. The Commissioners referred the matter to the Lords of the Treasury, as those duties did not come under their consideration; but their Lordships dismissed the petition on reading the report of the Commissioners of Trade. (See 31 Aug. 1697, Vol. XLVII., No. 46.)

Something may be gleaned for the history of the trade of the port of London from the papers in Vol. XLVIII., No. 41*b*. The wharfingers, land surveyors, and land waiters were charged with being in confederacy so to mix up the goods on the different quays between Tower Wharf and London Bridge, that the payment of the duty might be avoided, and so by smuggling for the merchants they would enrich themselves. Although all the papers are interesting, perhaps the following may serve best to show the nature of the charge that was made against them. It is docquetted "Memoriall to the Lords of the " Treasury touching a confederacy between the wharf-
" ingers, land-surveyors, and land-waiters." The Commissioners of Customs had less to object to the wharfingers than they had to the other two bodies.

" August 9th, 1697.

" It is well known that the lawfull keys are by virtue of the King's Commission, pursuant to an Act of Parliament, set out and bounded with posts placed at a convenient distance, not to hinder men's passing from key to key, but to prevent the rouling away or running of goods from off the keys where landed and intermix them with other goods of the same kinds upon the adjoyning keys, purposely to avoyd the payment of the duty, by which practice great frauds were formerly comitted by the wharfingers, who never were freinds to the revenue. And this was the true cause why (upon the execucon of that commission) those ports were so sett and ordered for y^e bounding every particular key, as above said.

" And it is morally impossible when the keys lye open for the landwayters to prevent those abuses, but especially upon great glutts of shipping, when the keys are crowded with business. And yet of late, by a generall consent of y^e wharfingers, all those ports and boundaryes are puld up, and the keys now lye open from Tower Wharfe to London Bridge, and they are all entered into a combination, and have united themselves into a body, as if they were incorporated, and have also agreed that what mony does arrive by wharfage shall be brought into one comon stock, and the profitts equally devided, by which they will have it greatly in their power, from the assistance they will have from one another, to smuggle for the merchants and enrich themselves out of the King's pockett; and this combinaçon is become the more dangerous by the friendship they have lately made with the surveyors and landwayters, who, according to their president, have also entered into a firme compact and agreement with one another, to devide all their fees at the water side, and seizures, equally between them; the sueveyors to have such a part and the landwayters such a part, so that whether they are appointed or not appointed, make any seizure or not, they are to have their shares out of the comon stock, and when the charges are deducted the rest is to be divided as above every month, which is against all former methods of the managem^t of the customes, removes all manner of checques at the waterside, and makes them all partners in frauds as well as in fees, and is together so strong a combination against the King's real interest and service, that in my opinion it well deserves a present remedy."

The East India Company, by their charter, had been compelled to export 100,000*l.* worth of English goods every year, the draperies forming part of the same, not being in demand in India, had to be sold in Persia, which was prejudicial to the Turkey Company. The report of the Board of Trade, dated 9 Aug. 1698 (Vol. LV., No. 26), recommended that they should be compelled to export a tenth part of the value of their exports only, in woollen goods, and that the draperies should not be vended in Persia.

It would seem that considerable quantities of corn, meal, biscuit, and bread were exported from England before the year 1690 to America; but from that time, instead of our exporting to them, they had a redundancy, and Barbadoes and the Leeward Islands were wholly supplied with corn from the northern plantations of

New England and Pennsylvania, and indeed it had become a settled trade. (See 17 Nov. 1698, Vol. LVII., No. 58.)

The same report and papers show that the slaves on their passage from Africa to the plantations were fed upon the substantial if not savoury food of beans, and the African Company were complaining that obstructions were put in the way of their obtaining the beans by the Commissioners of Customs, which would prove an entire obstruction to that Company in carrying on their trade, and a great prejudice to the plantations for want of their supply of negroes.

The following touches on the right of search of foreign ships visiting our ports. (See Vol. LX., No. 5.)

“My Lords,

“Whitehall, 6 March 1698–9.

“His Maj^{ty} commands me to acquaint you that the Lords Chief Justices and the Lord Chief Baron, with the Attorney and Solicitor Generall, as also the judges of the Admiralty and Prerogative Court, having been advised with, upon the cases of forreign ships that have been lately visited in our ports, upon pretence of searching for wool, when they came in onely for shelter, against stress of weather, and had no intention either of taking in goods or unlading here, but were bound homewards with the goods they had bought in forreign markets. It being their opinion that, for the remedying thereof for the future, His Maj^{ty} may give orders to his officers not to visit forreign ships so coming into our ports, but by virtue of a speciall warrant upon information, or for other just cause. It is His Maj^{ties} pleasure that your Lord^{ps} send directions to the Commissioners of the Customes accordingly.

TRAVELLING AND CONVEYANCE.

William Mathews, deputy postmaster of Oxford, in his petition (Vol. XLV., No. 46), which was referred to the Postmasters-General on 11 May 1697, and reported on by them on the 20th of that month, states as follows, viz. :—

“That your petitioner having received an order from y^e Post M^r General to send up all such clipt hammer’d money as he had rec’d for postage of letters before the 18th of Novem^r last, so as it might be paid into y^e General office before the 18th of Decem^r, your petit^r did send by the barge, w^{ch} carries goods from Oxford to London, 200^{li}, (that being the most safe conveyance), but a great frost then hapning, whereby the said barges were locked up in the river for several weeks, the said 200^{li} was not paid to y^e said Receiv^r Generall till after the said 18th day of Decem^r; so that the same is not applied to yo^r petit^r’s credit by tale, but by weight only, at 5^s/8^d per ounce [according to the Act 8 Will. III. c. 2], which reduces the said 200^{li} to 164^{li}. 8^s. 1^d, so that yo^r petit^r is in danger of losing y^e remainder, being 35^{li}. 11^s. 11^d. unless relieved by your Lo^{ps}.”

MISCELLANEOUS.

The following petition (Vol. XLVIII., No. 28), which their Lordships referred to Sir Christopher Wren on 20 Oct. 1697 to report upon, shows the state of the King's library at St. James's :—

"The petition of Richard Bentley, Library Keeper to His Majesty, humbly setteth forth,—

"That His Majesties library at St. James's is not only very much out of repair, to the great damage of many valuable manuscripts by dust and filth, but is likewise too little to receive all y^e books; so that above two thousand volumes ly on y^e floor, and all y^e rest are, in a manner, useless; and above a thousand pounds worth are lodged abroad, in danger of being spoild or lost, w^{ch} were never yet brought into the library, for want of room. Your petitioner thinks it the duty of his place to represent this to your Lordships, and to request your Lordships to make some provision for the speedy repair and augmentation of y^e said library."

The search for the precious metals has occupied so much attention in the present generation, that some of the particulars of what would appear to have been an unsucsuccessful expedition nearly two centuries back may be interesting. Captain Richard Long, commander of the King's prize ship "Rupert," petitioned the King in Jan. 1697-8 (Vol. LI., No. 30) for an immediate order on the Lords of the Treasury for a warrant of credit for 150*l.*, that he might fit out such artists in metals as he had contracted with to go with him to America, and to buy quicksilver, utensils, and necessaries, as well as some cloth and ironwork to gratify the natives; without which his great hopes might be disappointed; he had already expended what he had received from His Majesty as well as all he had of his own; and in answer to his petition he obtained from the Lords of the Treasury 50*l.* in lottery tickets, with this ominous addition to their minute, to "have nothing more." The captain again petitioned (Vol. LVIII., No. 51) for a balance of 77*l.* 16*s.* 7*d.* due to him for expenses about this expedition, which extended to Jamaica and the Gulf of Darien; and he gives his account of receipts and expenses, and the following is the creditor side of the account:—

This, as above mentioned, appears to have been an unsuccessful search, for in a third petition (Vol. LXXV., No. 48) he says that although he had not brought a present treasure into the nation, yet if there should happen a war with Spain, it would be proved that he had done the nation a great service, and some material things which were never known in England before, were then lying before His Majesty which would not be convenient to be publicly known. His petition was answered by their Lordships that they could not put the King to any further charge.

The petition of Mary Norridge (Vol. LXXII., No. 48), of the date about 20 Feb. 1700-1, will be read with interest. It illustrates the vicissitudes of human life and is only one of many instances in which the dawn began happily, but became troubled as the day of existence went on, and was not more cheerful at its close. The lady, as her petition states, was a daughter of a colonel in the army, who exhausted his estate to the extent of 10,000*l*. for King Charles I., was wounded and imprisoned, and having undertaken a very perilous service for the King, in venturing into Hull in the disguise of a blind decrepit old woman, received profuse promises from him and his successor, but nothing more. The petitioner was descended from the "Duncans of Scotland" on her father's side, and on her mother's from Viscount Loftus of Ely, who was Lord Chancellor of Ireland. She was also related to Lord Lisburne, their English residence having been Middleham Castle, Yorkshire. When she presented her petition, she and her sister were exposed to get their own livelihood. My Lords looked coldly on the petitioner, for their minute was, that they could not advise the doing anything upon the petition. The papers contain other interesting particulars. The following is a part of the petition :—

"To the King's most excellent Ma^{ty} in Council.

"The humble petition of Mary Norridge.

"Sheweth,

"That your petr is the daughter of Thos. Duncan, who was Lieut Colonel of horse to King Charles the 1st, and exhausted a considerable estate, to the value of above 10,000^l, in raising a troop of horse, and furnishing them with all accoutrements, and otherwise for the service of his Ma^{ty}, never receiving any pay for his said service during the whole warr, and was also a great sufferer by wounds & imprisonment.

"That he was imployed by his said Ma^{ty} in severall dangerous messages of great consequence and trust, whilst his Ma^{ty} lay at York, to the often hazard of his life; especially in that desperate message when he ventured into Hull, and scattered 24 declarations after Sr John Hotham had shut the gates against the King, which no other person would venture to doe. And his Ma^{ty} having a particular kindness for yor petr's said father, was loath to lett him runn such a desperate hazard of his life, but he being zealous to serve his Ma^{ty}, disguis'd himselfe in the forme and habit of an old blind decrepid woman, and was led by another person and soe escaped suspition.

"That when he came back from his desperate undertaking, he mett the King, &c. in the garden at York, where his Ma^{ty} embraced him with joy, and gave a particular charge to the late Earl of Lindsey,* that if he should dye, to see your pet^r father provided for, and if he lived would see him rewarded himself, as well for his love as for his loyalty." &c.

There is evidence of a strike having taken place in a branch of the Civil Service in the year 1695. (See Vol. LXII., No. 8.) The surveyors and officers of the London Brewery employed under the Excise Commissioners, all laid down their commissions together, to inconvenience that department, but they were glad to express their contrition in 1699 and to have the opportunity of once more eating the King's bread.

A good specimen of the working of the Circumlocution Office, similar to that noticed in the former preface is afforded in Vol. LXVIII., No. 40. In this instance seven different official persons or bodies of persons were required to obtain the transfer of a prisoner from Rotterdam to England.

Civil Service examinations would appear to be of greater antiquity than is generally known. The Commissioners of Customs had established them in that department in the year 1702, and personally conducted the examinations. They further sent the candidate for appointment for a second examination to the surveyor of the port, who, having examined him upon points proper to his business, gave a certificate of his ability and fitness, and the Commissioners then presented him to their Lordships for employment. There are the arithmetic examination papers of two candidates in Vol. LXXVIII., No. 34.

Our sympathies are generally drawn out towards persons in captivity, and more especially so when they are detained in a barbarous country. At the time over which the Calendar extends, a large number of our fellow countrymen, seized whilst sailing under our flag, were lingering in miserable thralldom in the empire of Morocco. In the year 1692 there were about 350 (see Vol. XVIII., No. 44). Mr. William Bowtell, merchant, had redeemed about 400 in 1694, and many had died of the plague. (See Vol. XXIX., No. 43.) In January 1700, there was an agreement that 272 should be brought from Mequenez and other parts of Barbary to Tangier, and put on board a man-of-war. When they were actually brought away seems doubtful. Many of them had been captured when they were young, and one when presented to Captain Delaval was 102 years old. (See Vol. LXVII., No. 11.) Captain Delaval was intrusted with a mission for the liberation of these "slaves," and it was a task of considerable difficulty, their passage to liberty requiring to be smoothed with gold, jewelry, and other valuable presents to the Emperor, the Queen, and various other high officials of the Morocco Court. The captain had with him a secretary and 16 servants. In his account of expenses, he mentions that on landing in Tetuan Bay he and his attendants remained in tents till he received orders to proceed, and he made eight journeys between Tetuan and the Camp at Ceuta. (See Vol. LXIX., No. 49.) Amongst his difficulties, perhaps the getting his charges from the Lords of the Treasury was not the least. On 8 July 1702, his demand for 671*l.* 13*s.* 10*d.* was abated by them to 500*l.* "in full of all pretensions." (See Vol. LXXIII., No. 29.)

In order to raise the requisite amount for the redemption of these captives, briefs were sent round by authority to the churches (as was then common) for collections to be made in their behalf, and one of these was circulated in June 1700.

From the London Gazette, No. 3,630, for 26 Aug. 1700, it will be seen that an attempt had been made to stop the charity of those kindly disposed to the captives who were still unransomed, for it says that two contemporary newspapers, viz. the Protestant Mercury and the London Post, had stated that the collection was over, as there was sufficient to redeem them. The Commissioners for executing his Majesty's letters patent for redemption of the captives, certify that this was false, that the collections were not over, and had not been made in many places besides London and parts adjacent, and that a seventh of what was required was not then collected. They hoped that all the charitably disposed would contribute liberally, for the poor captives lay under most grievous and barbarous usage. See copy of the London Gazette in Vol. LXXII., No. 5.

This false report had so mischievously affected the collection that the Lords Justices found it necessary to put forth a declaration that the sums which had been collected upon the above letters patent within the cities of London and Westminster and the bills of mortality did not amount to 4,000*l.*, and for the redemption of the captives 14,000*l.* at the least would be required. See London Gazette, No. 3,640, 30 Sept. 1700.

The Editor trusts that he has culled sufficient from these memorials of the past to warrant him in the belief that the present volume will be acceptable to those who value our national documents and who wish them to be made thoroughly accessible.

[? 1696 or 1697.] 1. "The case of Elizabeth Havering, widow, the relict and executrix of James Havering, deceased, against the pretences of any that shall claime right to three certain bills now depending in the Transport Office;" praying examination, &c. to be made.

James Havering, at the request of Matthew Sutcliffe, who was lately chief clerk of the Com^{rs} for Transports, sold to John Aldred, merchant, bills for 900 odd pounds at 55 per cent. loss. Havering was, together with Sutcliffe, bound to Aldred, since which the latter had forged and absconded. The Com^{rs} refused to make out debentures to Aldred, but said they would make them out to Captain Bendall, &c. Bendall acknowledged the reception of 700*l.* out of the 900 odd pounds.

He had served in that capacity since the reduction of that kingdom; his salary was but 50*l.*, though heretofore it was 100*l. per ann.*, as was that of other serjeants; he had been zealous for His Majesty both at Londonderry and after the King's arrival in Ireland, and had suffered considerably by the late calamities; prays that his salary might be raised to what it was formerly.

Undated, but perhaps the end of 1696 or beginning of 1697, by comparison with the papers under date 24 Feb. 1696-7. 1 page (quarto).

[? Beginning of 1697.] 3. Petition of David Williams, gent., to the King. He had presented a previous petition for some recompense for his ancestor's loyalty and service to King Charles the Second; prays that it might be read, and an order made for his "gratification."

6. Petition of Major Thomas Hawley, late chief porter and major of the Tower of London. He had served for many years in those offices during the reigns of Kings Charles II. and James II., and continued therein since the Revolution, and was eminently instrumental at that time in securing the Tower for the King by disarming the Papists then in garrison there; at the breaking out of the late horrid conspiracy against the King's person and government, some one had maliciously whispered something against him, and he was sent from his house in the Tower to Sir William Trumble without any warrant, and continued in custody 11 weeks; begs to be heard before the King in Council. The hard usage he had received had occasioned him to part with his places, there being an arrear of 740^{li} due to him; implores an order for the payment of the arrears, or a grant of the next vacancy of a waiter at the Custom house, with a pension of 60*l.* per ann. until the place falls vacant.

9. Letter from Mr. Geo. Evans, controller of the mint at York, to Tobias Jenkins, Esq., a member of Parliament at Westminster, in reference to the assertion that had been made at York that when Mr. Alderman Gill went to Mr. Alderman Parrat's office to demand money "in course," one Sarney Harrison had declared that there was no money in the mint; showing the falseness of the assertion, and that he had posted up in the market-place at York that there were 5,500*l.* in the said mint.

He was sensible of the straits the Government lay under, and if he could not have ready money, begged for tallies, &c. Dated 12 Jan. 1696-7. 1 page.

12. Letter of the Officers of Ordnance to the Lords of the Treasury, reminding them of the ill consequences that would happen if the fleet should be obliged to continue in harbour for want of stores, expressing the hope that they would take some consideration of the train in Flanders, and not let so necessary a part of the army starve; they had received orders of Council for sending four engineers and a master gunner to the plantations, the charge of which would be 1,500*l.*, which service must stand still without money. They had received orders of Council for sending the stores, to the value of 3,167*l.* 17*s.* 3½*d.*, referred to in the annexed paper, to New York and Barbadoes; desiring to be reimbursed. - Jan. 15. 14. Letter from Thomas Neale, Master of the Mint, to the Lords of the Treasury, stating the necessity there was of inspecting the hammered money, and that people must have honesty and skill who were employed therein; that rooms were wanting at the Tower to inspect the money, as it was impossible for the Tower mills to dispatch above 300,000^l., but if supplied with silver ingots they could coin 100,000^l. weekly; that the business might be more easily dispatched for the public service, if the money were first lodged at the Exchequer, weighed, and inspected; as to the money to be taken in by weight, in the country, he was apprehensive the charge, waste, and "worseness," would come to much more by the additional persons, than if some were sent hence, &c. 39. Memorial of Col. Richard Coote to the Lords of the Treasury. In consideration of his losses and the debt due to him, he had applied for a grant of the Lady Honora Bourk's portion forfeited, she having been married to Patrick Searsfeild, commonly called Lord Lucan, and since married to the Duke of Berwick, now in France outlawed; Lord Capel reported favourably on it; Lady Dorothy Bourke, daughter to the Earl of Clanrickard, who stated that she was a Protestant and on that account unprovided for by the Earl, had petitioned for all the forfeitures of the late Earl of Gallway and the Lord Bofine, amounting to 4,000*l.* per ann.; the allegations in the Lady Dorothy's petition were untrue, for Lord Clanrickard had settled 4,000*l.* on her; praying that their Lordships would lay this memorial before the King, at the same time with Lady Dorothy Bourk's report.

Undated, but it has the following minute:—"To be layd wth Lady Dor. Bourk's papers. 14 Apr. '9." The incompleted date is probably 1697, and this petition not unlikely one of the "many other petitions read" on that day. (See Minute Book, Vol. VII., p. 118, for that day.)

Herne, by the authority of the President, had received orders and tallies on the continued impositions to the sum of 100,000*l*., and then had 25,000*l*. of them remaining, which he was directed to deliver to Mons. Caillie of Geneva, but was under a difficulty as to the receipt to be given for them. Dated 16 Apr. 1697. 1½ pages.

"Sr Bart. Shore saies Sr Jos. is subject to suits abroad & here. They only desire that Mons. Caille may give a rec^t for them. If a man receives publique money for a particular use, he is answerable at law for that use. Or if la Tour will countermand his order to Caille & direct ye tallys otherwise, his order will be complied with.

"Mr Solicitor saies if these tallys were for ye use of ye D. of Savoy, pursuant to an agreement, and part of that agreem^t was not performed, in equity, the D. of Savoy ought not to have ye remaind^r of ye m^o, & cannot recover it.

"Councell of the other side saies that ye money being actually rec^d, Sr Joseph Herne is accomptable onely to those for whom he rec^d it, and that no man will part with his money to depend on a suit in equity. That if Latour has advanced this 25,000 to ye D., Sr Joseph can have no equity ag^t him. My Lords wilbe ready to give such security to Sr Jos. Herne as is proper for ye King to give for his indemnity, in case he delivers up ye tallys for ye 25,000*li* to ye K's use. He had followed the calling of a stationer, buying parchment and vellum of the maker in the country, sorting it and selling it to stationers, booksellers, and several others in and about London. He states that he was examined for their information, by certain gentlemen who first projected laying a duty on those commodities, and having spent the best part of five months, neglecting his other concerns, and almost ruining his family to promote the King's interests, he applied for employment as soon as Commissioners were appointed, to manage the duty; but the reply to his application was, that as he dealt in those articles he was not eligible; yet afterwards he obtained a warrant to search and seize goods concealed, or not entered, but without pay, except his share of the penalty, and thereupon he made several seizures. He complains that the goods were restored to the owners, and mentions a variety of information concerning the evasion of the duty, and submits that unless experienced officers are employed, the duty will come to little. Petition of Hugh Rowley of Calmore, Esq., to the King, showing that the petitioner was the first Protestant justice of the peace in Ireland; that he was turned out of commission by the late Earl of Tyrconnell for his early appearing for an English Protestant interest, and for his endeavours to suppress the insolence of the Irish rebels, for which reason they took most of his goods and pillaged and burnt his and his tenants' houses and wasted his estate; that 500*l.* of his goods were conveyed to Londonderry, which were there made use of by the garrison during the siege; that he was damnified above 5,000*l.* by the Irish rebels, and having sent advice and intelligence to Londonderry, he was searched for, taken prisoner, and narrowly escaping, fled to England, where he stayed till the King went to Ireland, and then returned thither with His Majesty, and having lost all his substance was put into an employment, the great stores of war in Dublin being committed to him by the then Lords Justices, and the King conferred upon him the place of storekeeper of the Ordnance of Ireland, which employment he discharged with indefatigable care and diligence, as is certified by the late Lords Justices, to the Earl of Rumney when Secretary of State; this employment ended with that war; and for his services he got no manner of satisfaction; but by the Government successively he had been promised he should be better provided for, and receive satisfaction for his services when there was a fund for it. Praying His Majesty, in consideration of his services, losses, and sufferings, to give him a grant of the forfeited lands and leases in a schedule annexed, which are of small value. 45. Report of Mr. S. Travers, surveyor-general, on the petition of the Lord Viscount Villiers. The subsidy and aulnage of old and new draperies, with the moiety of forfeitures for not making and selling clothes according to the statute, were granted by King Charles II. to Charles, Duke of Richmond and Lenox, for 60 years, at rents amounting to 997*l.* 1*s.* 11*d.* In 1681 the Duchess Dowager of Richmond petitioned for a further term of 40 years, then valued at 3,000*l.* a year. He did not find that she obtained the reversion, but she did obtain a grant of the reserved rent of 997*l.* 1*s.* 11*d.* for life, paying 20*s.* per ann. to the Exchequer, so the improved value was at the King's disposal after about 27 $\frac{1}{2}$ years, and the rent after her death. He was informed two leases had been granted by her Grace, of this office and duties, at 2,000*l.* per ann. rent above the rent aforesaid, and fines of 10,000*l.* for a term of 20 years, so that the advantage to her Grace was about 4,000*l.* a year. The yearly value, as appeared in a paper delivered to the House of Lords, was 7,350*l.*, which was above 3,000*l.* a year profit to the farmers. He was of opinion that if their Lordships advised the King to grant the petitioner the rent from the Duchess's death, and the improvement for 99 years after the term in being, it might be valued at 16,000*l.* though the profits were casual, depending on the freedom of trade, &c. Dated 20 May 1697.

Accompanied by the petition, part of which is torn away.

Minuted:—"Allow^d."

Likewise he sent up to the Receiver of the Post Office 18*l.* 16*s.* 9*d.* in white farthings, but the patentees for making copper farthings not having exchanged the white farthings of the office in such proportion as they (the postmasters) thought they were obliged, the sum remained in the Receiver's hands, but they believed the patentees would exchange it, if directed.

Minuted:—"Direct y^e patentees accordingly."

As to the 200*l.* which the petitioner prayed might be applied to his credit by tale, and not by weight, the petitioner had timely notice that the clipt money, taken for postage of letters, due to the office before 4 May 1696, might be paid before 4 June, and the petitioner sent up 71*l.* to a friend, who did not pay it in till August. He had further notice to pay the old money taken by him previous to 18 November 1696, before 18 December, on which he sent up by the barges (as the safest conveyance) 129*l.*, which barges were detained by a frost, and that amount was not paid till 7 Jan., when that sum and the 71*l.* were paid in at a loss of 35*l.* 11*s.* 11*d.*; recommending that of the 190*l.* taken before 18 November, 119*l.* might be taken by tale, but the petitioner ought to bear the loss on the 10*l.* received after that day, and on the 71*l.* which lay so long in the correspondent's hands.

Minuted to this clause:—"Agree to y^e report."

They add that the petitioner was in a low condition, and his salary but 35*l.* per ann. Dated 20 May 1697.

Accompanied by the petition and an affidavit. 4½ pages.

- June 28. 32. Letter from Mr. Blathwayt to Mr. Lowndes. The army was under the greatest necessities for want of their subsistence. Encloses a proposition for supplying Mr. Hill with 20,000*l.* immediately; which the King would have their Lordships comply with, if possible. Also encloses an extract from a letter from Lord Gallway, concerning Lady Stapleton, whom the King was inclined to gratify, and to grant the like value elsewhere for the satisfaction of her debt from Sir Patrick Trant. Dated Camp near Brussels, 8 July 1697, [N.S.]
 Accompanied by the "Proposition" and "Extract," the latter in French.
Minuted:—"Read 6 July '97, O.S."
 The following, in relation to Lady Stapleton's case, is entered in the Minute Book, Vol. VII., p. 212, 7 July 1697:—
 "Mr. Montagu of counsel for E. Galwey & Mr Upton of counsel for Lady Stapleton. The latter produces a decree for 8,443. 17. 4., dated 4 Feb. 1^o W. & M. Mr Upton saies when this decree was obteyned Ireland was in other hands; else they could have reacht his estate; and insists upon a promise of my Lord Galwey that he would not enjoy the estate, unless she were satisfied. Miles Stapleton offers to make aff^s to that purpose. They had the decree three years before Trant's outlawry, and could have had a sequestracon, if y^e troubles had not been in Ireld.

"Mr Montagu saies the decree could not have affected Trant's estate, for he was in rebellion; & the outlawry would have related to the time of y^e treason comitted, & does not admitt that if there had been no attainder, a decree in Chancery here could have reached lands in Ireland.

"Upton saies it binds personalty and not ye lands; but as a debitum justitiæ, the decree in England shall reach ye profits in Ireland, as much as an estate in England per a sequestron.

"Mr Montagu saies a decree here does not bind in Ireland as it does in England, but it is a matter to begin upon.

"Upton saies the King certifies ye decree into Ireland, and then it has ye same effect as if 'twere a decree there, without any new hearing; & upon this offers to putt ye issue.

"Mr Baker is to informe my Lords of the time to w^{ch} the utlary of Sr Patrick Trant for treason hath relaçon.

"She saies she had rather have it out of any estate other then Trant's.

"Mr Montagu saies, they are desirous it should be satisfied some other way, & does not object to y^e justice of her debt.

"It is my Lords opinion, that my Lady Stapleton's debt is just. That in equity & justice it ought to be charged on Sr Patric Trant's estate; & they cannot advise the granting of that estate to any other till she be satisfied." 3 pages.

He had been a "great husband" in the management of the money, and hoped they would allow him the 200*l.* per ann. charged for himself, as all things were so excessively dear, and his salary so mean, that it cost him at least 600*l.* a year of his own estate to support the dignity of the Government, there being no advantage to be had during the time of war; the place was not like the other colonies that depended on themselves and their own trade and manufactures, but there were often strangers, Spaniards, Dutch, and French, with flags of truce, who created great charges to him. Aug. 12. 31. Letter from Mr. Blathwayt to Mr. Lowndes, acknowledging the receipt of his letter, which stated that for the money borrowed by the bank of the States General, they deposited but the equal sum in tallies; replying that some in Holland affirmed that there was an additional security from the bank. He then hoped malt tickets would be deposited to answer the loan: they might be satisfied with 100,000*l.* in those tickets, and the money being ready to be paid to Mr. Hill at the Hague, the King commanded that the tickets should be deposited in the hands of the Dutch ambassadors in London, on account of the million to be lent in Holland.

Nothing could be done, as was desired by their Lordships, to defer the repayment of the loan, which was for one year, as it was entered in the journal of the assembly of the States of Holland, which had separated, and was not to meet for some weeks; but this loan being once settled, and a regular payment made of the interest of 5 per cent. (which is greater than could be got in those countries upon so good a security), there was no fear that the parties concerned would call for their moneys, but would be glad to continue the loan.

In the postscript he states that the King had not considered the reports from Ireland, but an answer might be expected in the next. Dated Loo, $\frac{1}{2}$ Aug. 1697.

46. Report of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petition of Sir Thomas Lane and Sir John Moore, Knts., William Penn, and others, who represented on behalf of the proprietors of East and West Jersey in America, that King Charles II. granted them the liberty to constitute maritime and other officers, and to make and elect ports in those provinces; and thereupon they had so constituted the town of Amboy in East Jersey, and the towns of Burlington, Salem, and Cape May in West Jersey, to be ports for lading and unlading merchandise; and notwithstanding the said provinces were no ways dependant, or part of the province of New York, yet the collectors there presumed to make all ships and vessels bound to the Jerseys come to New York to unlade or pay customs there, which they were advised was illegal and discouraged the trade. The Com^{rs} report that the inhabitants of New York had granted a certain revenue to the Crown of England for the defence of that province, arising by an impost or custom on imported and exported goods, on Indian trading, on goods carried up Hudson's river to Albany, and an excise on liquors retailed; the collector of those duties had demanded the same on all goods belonging to East and West Jersies coming within the river of New York called Hudson's river, which being about a mile and a half over, divides the Jersies from New York, being as he alleged agreeable to former practice before his time; referring the matter to the Lords of the Treasury, as those duties did not come under their (the Com^{rs} of Customs) management.

The Com^{rs} of Customs further acquainted their Lordships, that in the establishment of officers presented from hence for Virginia and other the King's plantations, a collector was appointed at Perth Amboy in East Jersey, and another officer at Bridlington in West Jersey, with instructions to collect as well the duties imposed in 25 Car. II. upon tobacco and other plantation commodities shipped from thence, as to inspect the like commodities laden for this kingdom, and to attend the delivery of European goods brought from hence, which were the chief matters for which the Com^{rs} were

41b. Report of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury, on the memorial relating to the quays, the surveyors and land-waiters of the port of London, which suggested that by reason of certain compacts and agreements made by the wharfingers, the surveyors, and land-waiters, there was a combination against the King's interest and service. The report finds that there were three distinct agreements, at two of which they were much surprised : the wharfingers admitted that they were agreed to farm the lawful quays and have the profits, and that was rather an advantage : the author of the memorial was mistaken as to the bounding of the quays and wharfs, for the commission and the Act provided that they should lie open 40 feet from the river, without division or separation, and only "Denter stones" should be placed in the pavement to distinguish property. The wharfingers had since they were a society removed such posts and partitions as had encroached upon the quays, and had since they were under this agreement jointly signed an instrument for the better regulating the quays and wharves. The agreement between the land-surveyors was as to the distribution of the profits equally ; which was not for the good of the revenue, for it took off the edge and industry of particular persons : they were much more surprised at the agreement of the land-waiters, which besides dividing the fees, seemed to constitute them a body politic or corporate, and erected a certain judicature for punishment of offences, and was by no means to be countenanced : further sending copies of the said agreements.

Undated ; but all the subscribers were Com^{rs} in 1697, and the following documents, though not found with this report, seem to be referred to in the report :—

"Copy of an anonymous memorial to the Lords of the Treasury, touching a confederacy between the wharfingers, land-surveyors, and land-waiters."

The charges against them were, that they pulled up the boundary posts between the quays to intermix the goods, and the quays lay open from Tower Wharf to London Bridge, the wharfingers combined in one common stock to smuggle for the merchants and enrich themselves ; and they had lately included the surveyors and land-waiters in a firm compact, to divide the fees, so that they might be partners in all frauds as well as fees. Dated 9 Aug. 1697.

Copy of an agreement amongst the land-surveyors for an equal division of the profits of the office. Dated 7 Oct. 1697.

51. Letter signed "Fr. Gardiner," to the Right Hon. Charles Montague, Chancellor of the Exchequer. The malcontents have lived in greater freedom under this King's reign than in the two former reigns; the double taxes were overbalanced by exemption from bearing offices; upon the King's arrival the Parliament might meet again, if so, he prayed leave to stay till Christmas for the clearing of the Mint; he had known the King since he was 16 or 17 years of age, and had hopes of his being the greatest Prince in Europe, observing such sedateness and thoughtfulness in him as was rarely found in any person at those years; the King's warlike temper made every brave man love and his sneaking enemies fear him; the imposition of the Association upon all from 16 to 60, would prevent any of the latter remaining; whoever should set up the title of King James, or the pretended Prince of Wales, should be punished as an enemy, and none should hold office until they had taken the oath of allegiance and subscribed the Association. They had been greatly plagued in the house with petitions about rivers being made navigable; the more water carriage they made in the land, the easier and cheaper for the people, and better for the roads; there are very few great towns but might be helped by this means, and by destroying the water mills and erecting windmills. In Amsterdam there were near 500,000 souls, and not one water mill to grind their corn, and they never wanted meal; the plate had not come into the Mint as was expected; most of the plate in England was inferior in purity to the order in the last Act of Parliament; it would seem reasonable that no plate in England should be used but what was of the purity therein appointed, or a tax of 2*d.*, 4*d.*, 6*d.* the ounce laid on plate below the standard; and all the plate of colleges, &c. to be brought to the next Mint to be registered, and the money arising to be laid out in the purchase of lands for the benefit of such societies; three or six months should be given to bring in the old plate at 5*s.* 4*d.* the ounce, and no old hammered money should pass any longer, save to the future taxes at 5*s.* 2*d.* an ounce.

The present thoughts about reducing guineas created jealousy and confusions amongst the people, who were disturbed with burials, births, and marriages, and the window duty, and unless there was some consideration the peace could hardly be preserved. Dated 8 Nov. 1697. 2 pages.

The Lords Justices state that according to the enclosed report the clear yearly value of the O’Shaghnessy’s estate, above quit rents and encumbrances, amounted to 493*l.* yearly; but Mr. Prendergast had endeavoured to set the same, and the highest proposal was but 2*s.* per acre, by which it would fall short 197*l.* 13*s.* of the 500*l. per ann.* It also alludes to further deficiencies. Dated 30 Dec. 1697.

By which it appears that three separate lists to make up the deficiency were sent in by the said Prendergast of properties which together amounted to the value of 334*l.* 0*s.* 2½*d. per ann.*, and the Com^{rs} state that all the estates were in His Majesty’s disposal, but that the estate of Thady Callaghan had been already reported by them for Mrs. Wendesford, of Lawrence Kelly for Major-General Stewart, of Pierce Dillon for Brigadier O’Farrell (to whom it was granted in custodiam for two years), and of Thady Meagher for Brigadier O’Farrell and the Earl of Meath.

1697. 25. The answer of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England in a general court assembled, to the questions proposed by the Honourable Committee of the whole House of Commons.
The first question was:—
Whether the Bank could raise the sum of 2,564,000*l.* if the House thought fit to settle the duties on salt upon them?
The reply is to the effect that the Parliament had taken away the duty of tonnage, the duties on coals, &c., which were the funds for payment of money advanced by tallies, besides which the subjects paid their taxes in impaired and adulterated money, and the Bank on the pressing occasions of the Government advanced last year 800,000*l.* and upwards on Parliamentary funds, several of which were deficient and none yet paid, and therefore they could not at present raise the 2,564,000*l.*
The second question was:
Whether if the House should provide interest at 8*l.* per cent. for all tallies out upon the Parliamentary funds, and for the payment of the principals in a certain number of years, they were "willing to be grafted upon by subscriptions of the said tallies, with a proportion of their own bills?"
They answered that they rested assured the House of Commons would make no alteration of the present establishment of the Bank, but what was necessary for the public service, and for the restoration of credit, and not prejudicial to the proprietors. If the House enlarged the fund and corporation of the Bank, they would submit; so that such provisions were made as encouraged the Bank to accept new subscriptions, some of which provisions they subjoined.
Then follow 18 provisos. Without date; but the advance of 800,000*l.* was made in 1696, and this was a year after. 3 pages.

7. Letter from Sir Henry Ashurst to the Lords of the Treasury. 3,000*l.* and not 4,000*l.* were paid to him in Exchequer bills, for which their Lordships ordered him to pay Col. Gibson on his arrival in New England, or the commander-in-chief for Newfoundland, 4,000*l.* Upon receipt of the Exchequer bills, he was forced to turn them into money, the lowest discount being then 6*l.* 15*s.* per cent. To prevent disappointment, he provided for the discharge of the whole sum, but the ships were detained by contrary winds, and waited to accompany the Earl of Bellomont so long, that it was impossible to have any account from New England, what credit had been given Col. Gibson's order. The Lords of Trade acquainted the government of New England of the intended expedition of Col. Gibson, whereupon they ordered an "imbargo" to be laid on all provisions, that there might be no disappointment. He hoped their Lordships would consider the matter when he came to account with them. After their sessions for the peace was over, he would hasten to wait on their Lordships. Dated 8 Jan. 1697-8.

9. Memorial of the Trustees for exchanging Exchequer bills to the Lords of the Treasury, offering for consideration the states of the cash and Exchequer bills, representing the difficulty attending the credit of the Exchequer bills which required a speedy remedy, as the consequences might be very fatal to the management, the Exchequer, and the public credit. If these specie bills were not punctually paid as they had hitherto been, such a defect would shake the whole credit of the nation. The specie money in the hands of the trustees on the 8th instant, amounted to no more than 27,000*l.*, which would not answer four days demands in case the money on the third contract were not paid. The Exchequer bills paid and payable by the trustees to 7 Jan., amounted to

1,522,195*l.* 3*s.* 2*d.*, &c. The whole subscription, if the last payment were complied with, would be exhausted in less than 20 days; so that their opinion was, that the credit of the specie Exchequer bills would entirely sink unless supported by a fourth subscription immediately; their opinion was, that the third subscription would not generally be complied with, and a fourth could not be obtained without new funds. The discount on the bills had risen to nine per cent., and likely to rise higher.

The trustees also sent a list of such as had not complied with any of their payments on the second contract. Dated 10 Jan. 1697-8. 2½ pages.

14. A narrative, written by one Thomas Webb, of what took place on several interviews between 26 Feb. 1697-8 and 5 May following, in negotiations of the said Webb, with some one under the initial E., who is explained to be Sir Thomas Dyke, a member of the House of Commons, whose interest Webb was using to obtain from "Esquire Pelham" and Mr. Henry Pelham a place in the Exchequer or Treasury. The negotiations were in reference to a prosecution of the Com^{rs} of Excise for non-qualification, &c. He says "E." told him he would put him in the way to make 2,000*l.* presently, by informing against several considerable persons in great places, who had not qualified themselves, and to encourage him, told him they had done ill offices to some worthy gentlemen by giving false informations, and that the non-qualified Com^{rs}, he thought, would compound and not stand the prosecution. It would have been brought into the House of Commons, but he prevented it, in order that he (Webb) might bring the information. "E." told him, if it cost him 5*l.* or 10*l.* and it miscarried, he should be repaid. He had the informations prepared and then asked "E." whether he should carry them to the Attorney General, or first petition the House for Sir Stephen Evans (one of the Com^{rs}) to waive their privilege, and for the House to order Mr. Attorney to further the prosecution, or at least to awe the judges from discouraging it. He then left a petition for that purpose with "E," who ordered him to come on the 8th of March, for on the 7th he should be with several "knowing ones," whom he would consult about it; but on the 8th "E." told him he could not petition, unless Mr. Attorney refused to sign the informations, and Mr. Clark, one of the Com^{rs}, had told him it was his opinion that the non-qualified Com^{rs} must and ought to be incapacitated and could not avoid it. "E." told him, on the bill being brought in for giving further time, that there were a great many "noes" to the bill, and they would do what they could to throw it out, and Mr. Clark had told him he would run out of the House when the bill was reading, if it were not for shame. "E." then told the writer there had been a quarrel between Mr. Clark and Mr. Danvers, the other Com^r. The writer speaking with "E."

on the mistrust the Com^{rs} had of Mr. Clark and Mr. Danvers for their promoting the prosecution, he seemed to excuse or extenuate their doing it, by telling him that the Com^{rs} had done them ill-offices, and particularly told him that Mr. Clark and Mr. Danvers coming with Mr. Onslow in a coach through Temple Bar, one of them told Mr. Onslow they must have a care how they behaved, for if a revolution should come, it might be their turns to have their heads stand where Fenwick's did (his then being lately put up over Temple Bar), and that Mr. Onslow misrepresented this to some state officer, and accused Mr. Clark with reflecting on the King and Government, and that Sir John Foche had informed against Mr. Danvers, that he had expressed his gladness at the taking of some place in Flanders by the French. "E." told him that Mr. Clark had said he would have voted against and opposed the bill, if he were not one of the Com^{rs}, and would be publicly censured. "E." had brought out his petition for compensation in lieu of the forfeiture, into the lobby of the House, telling him he could not get it presented; he would have presented it himself, but was afraid of discovering some persons who were concerned in the prosecution. On this the writer resolved to drop the prosecution. On the following morning "E." told him "H." [Sir Eliab Harvey] had promised to deliver his petition, and if he did so, "E." would speak to it, and if "H." did not present it, "E." would; for rather than not have it presented, they would hazard being discovered: [It was, however, not presented]. "E." told him he would endeavour to get him a place in the Custom-house, but he could have nothing at the Excise, unless Mr. Onslow were removed. He was offered money to discover Mr. Clark and Mr. Danvers as the authors of the informations, &c. "E." told him the Lords had brought in a new bill for the Com^{rs} of Excise's indemnity, and he was ordered to tell the writer that he should proceed no further, for he would be baffled in the prosecution; because of an opinion he heard one of the Lords Chief Justices or Lord Chancellor had given in favour of the Com^{rs}. Several members were for a general pardon; there were three or four places in the Excise worth 100*l.* a year; one of which "E." believed he would get. The Com^{rs} took their turns in preferring their friends. Dated 18 May 1698. $3\frac{1}{2}$ pages.

23. Letter from the Lord Bellomont, Governor of the province of New York, to the Lords [of the Treasury]. He entered upon the government of New York on 2 April last, and had made a most strict inquiry into the revenue from customs, and found the officers had been most corrupt and negligent, and the greatest abuses had been committed in relation to trade; the trade at that port having doubled in ten years, and the city had grown vastly rich and populous, with double the number of houses, but the customs were decreased. There had been a most licentious trade with pirates "Scotland and Curacao"; and he found the collector, Mr. Chidley Brooke, was most extremely backward in the discharge of his duty; he should forthwith suspend him for some of his actions, as soon as they were made evident, and put another more faithful in his place.

The late government had connived at the breach of the acts of trade, and the merchants were so accustomed thereto, that on his arrival, when he ordered a small seizure of East India goods imported in an unfree bottom, the whole city seemed to be in an uproar. He should take care the acts of trade were observed, and if possible find trusty officers.

There was no naval officer distinct from the collector, nor any "register" appointed by the late Governor, whereby the ships of that port, which took no certificates, would be seized. By consent of Mr. Randolph, surveyor-general of the customs and the collector there, he had admitted the ships to give security, &c. that no fraud should be done to the King. He had appointed Mr. Thos. Palmer, of good reputation, naval officer and "register" of the province.

He had refused to permit proclamations to be printed in the city, by the Governor of the Jerseys, publishing that Perth Amboy, and Burlington are free ports, because he found that the laws of this province raised a considerable revenue for the support of the government from customs on goods, which the ports of the Jerseys would be free from; and the port of Amboy being but 20 miles from it, the merchants would transport themselves thither, and carry away all the trade, to the destruction of this government. He had thought this affair of so great consequence that he had given an account of it to the Lords of the Council of Trade, that he might have their directions.

The accounts ordered should be transmitted.

He enclosed 1st, an account of the produce of the revenue of New York for 1687, and another account of the same for the years 1692 to 1697; and their Lordships would see that the decrease of the revenue must be either by connivance of the government, or corruption, or neglect of the officers, or all together. Dated New York, 25 May 1698.

The report recommends that the King should give directions that the muster rolls should govern the payments, and that the officers should produce them. It was unlikely they were all missing, as there should be three signed at every muster, one for the commissary, and one to remain with each company : that the King should supply the want of a day in the establishment for the leap year by a particular warrant: that the King should direct that in making up the accounts of the four regiments, raised in the year 1694, they should give credit to such as were raised in England, at 8*d.* a day for each private soldier, to the time of their landing in Ireland: that the days on which the regiments were disbanded be allowed: that the officers of the ordnance in England and Ireland be required to lay before their Lordships the particulars of the charge they have against each regiment, that the King might declare what portion should be borne by the forces: and that the forces be charged with the provisions delivered to them in their passage as usual, viz., 12*d.* a day for each trooper and his horse, 9*d.* for each dragoon and his horse, and 4*d.* for each foot soldier.

It seemed by the sending four governors or counsellors upon the said ships that the Scotch were making some settlements in those parts, which was of great moment with respect to the trade and navigation and the revenue of customs, and therefore the Com^{rs} brought the matter under their Lordships' notice. Report of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petition of Mary Beaulieu, widow of Isaac Beaulieu, late land-waiter in the port of London ; praying that the place might be conferred on Daniel Moreau, her kinsman, to relieve Beaulieu's family ; stating that they did not object to his fitness, but their Lordships' compassionate intentions might be answered, if an experienced keyman were appointed, and 30*l.* or 40*l.* per ann. were taken out of his salary for a term of years ; but they were not insensible to the inconvenience of such pensions out of salaries, with which that establishment was already too much burdened. 45. Letter of Lord Bellomont to the Lords [of the Treasury]. He had written an account at large, by the agent for this province (who went to England by way of Boston) of his proceedings in relation to the trade there, and of his motives for suspending Mr. Brooke the collector. He desired their Lordships to suspend the hearing of Mr. Brooke's affair till the agent's arrival, who could not be long after Mr. Brooke's. He heard Mr. Brooke took certificates from the merchants of his good behaviour; if so they would rather incline their Lordships in their opinion, that the late Governor and he were in confederacy with the merchants, who would make a last effort to have the best of him, that they might be without control, as in the last government. In order to baffle the King's authority there, Mr. Randolph was arrested in this town a little while since, upon a sham action of one Symes, whom Col. Fletcher gave leave to be master of a ship, and to be absent from his post of Lieutenant of one of the companies in the King's pay, for four years together, in a time of war, &c. Mr. Randolph and the writer having a "jealousie" that Symes was put on arresting him by Brooke and Nichols (both of whom were suspended from the council), Symes was questioned, but would not admit it, &c. If the King's authority were not supported, he (the Governor) must desire to be recalled, and he believed Mr. Randolph would make the same request, for he was very uneasy at the affront put on him. The merchants were exasperated against the writer, because he would not do as the late Governor did, and because he discouraged the pirates, having prevented eight pirate ships from coming to the town in three months; and it was part of their common discourse, that he had ruined the town, by hindering privateers (as they called pirates) from bringing in 100,000*l.* since his arrival. 46. Report of Sir Chr. Wren, Surveyor of Works, addressed to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petition of the churchwardens of St. Margaret's, Westminster; praying a warrant to have the clock-house and bell sold for the use of their poor. Houses or little tenements had risen by connivance, from booths, and were so built about the tower, that it could neither be repaired nor pulled down, without a strong scaffold; the present tenants, though forewarned very often of the danger, willingly ran the risk of their lives, because for that reason they paid little or no rent. About 18 years before, a design had been given to King Charles, and seconded by the Lord Chief Justices and other eminent lawyers, to new-case it with ashler, and to put a lantern upon it, to raise the bell higher, and to make a new clock, the estimate being about 1,500*l.* He questioned whether the materials of the tower would pay for the scaffold and damages that might happen to the houses, &c. He estimated the bell (called in the petition Great Tomm of Westminster) to be worth 149*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; viz, two tons weight, at 8*d.* a pound; it was a large but thin bell, of excellent tone, and if it should amount to three tons, it would amount at most to 224*l.* Their Lordships are the best judges how the petitioners might be relieved. He finishes with this remark, "yet pardon your surveyor if out of duty, he modestly aske, whither it be better to pull downe a public building, upon so small a consideration, or to repare it with advantage to the beauty of the towne; which would most certainly be done in any of our neighbour countries, who are more sensible than wee, that to

68. Petition of Percival Brunsell, gent., to the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the rest of the Lords of the Treasury. The King made an order of reference to their Lordships for an office or pension, but their Lordships put him off with 20*l.* in malt tickets, which he was forced to sell for 16*l.* to pay the butcher, &c., and the 20*l.* then ordered him only paid his rent. He could get no employment, being looked upon with aversion by all in authority; and their Lordships had passed sentence on him to expect no more. His debts exceeded 3,500*l.*, and exposed him to the cruelties of the mercenaries, with whose practices his discoveries and proposals interfered. For this reason he had petitioned the Lords Justices, that in case they would not, in the King's absence, order money to pay his debts, and a pension of 300*l. per ann.* for his own, his daughter Mary's, and his brother Francis' lives, to be paid as Mr. Oats had his settled, that they would give order for 50*l.* for subsistence till the King's return. His petition was returned, and the Lord Chancellor's opinion was that the application would be more proper to the Lords of the Treasury. The oaths taken by the petitioner were enjoined to be taken by all in public employments. He was at first encouraged upon his discoveries by King Charles II. He obtained nothing but the office of surveyor of the Greenwax fines, and a com^{rs} place in the Alienation Office, and was miserably oppressed therein, till the King died. The present King more than once signified his pleasure that he should have those offices, being worth 510*l. per ann.*, but the Chancellor of the Exchequer and Mr. Jepson gratified their friends therewith. His debts might have been paid from that income, or if their Lordships' predecessors had done him justice when they sent him to Parliament with his discoveries and proposals. Several committees of the House of Commons had reported him worthy of reward, the judges and officers having made him consume his own estate, above 1,500*l.*, and destroyed his practice, when he got above 300*l. per ann.*, by practising in attorney's names, as many did; before he was compelled by the statute 3 Jac. I. cap. 7, to take the oaths to make discoveries and proposals; prays that they would make his conditions easy.

Minuted:—"19 Augst 1698. He is to be told positively that he must expect no more from my Lords."

Accompanied by a letter from him to Mr. Lowndes, in which he says he knows that the "L^d Chancellor loves the L^{ds} of the Treasury," and his Excellency, having a kindness for him, advised him to apply again and again to the Lords of the Treasury; the very words of the oaths he was compelled to take, or incur a premunire, were that he would do no falsehood or wrong, or consent to any, but if he knew any, to inform the King or some of his ministers. He had sustained great loss and damage by the debaucheries of the Government and its own acts; he hoped the Government, "being civilized," would relieve him. His brethren were most inexcusable, in oppressing him, because he would not dispense with oaths to wink at them for dispensing with theirs; if God had a favour for them, they would turn and repent; if not, he would harden their hearts, as he did the Egyptians, until they perished. He continues:—"Nothing more eclipseth the glory of His Mat^y's administration, than neglecting petitioners well entitled to the bounty of the Government, and nothing will more redound to the honour of ye L^{ds} Com^{rs} than promoting His Mat^y's bountiful intentions to me after 24 years persecution, that I may be easy in my old age." Dated 19 Aug. 1698.

25. Letter from Lord Bellomont, unaddressed, but commencing "My Lords," informing them that his journey to Albany in July was very unfortunate to his health, but having appointed a day to meet the five nations of Indians, he resolved to keep "touch" with them, though to the hazard of his life, and embarked for Albany in the midst of a fit of the gout, by which, and a cold taken on the Hudson River, he had like to have died. He however managed a conference with the Indians. The first two or three days he found them sullen and cold in their carriage, and thought we had quite lost their affections, but some of the "Sachims" having come to some honest magistrates of that town, discovered to them that they had been tampered with by Mr. Dellius, the Dutch minister, to whom, with three others (viz., Col. Peter Schuyler, Major Dyrk Wessels, mayor of that town, and one Bauker, or Banker), Col. Fletcher had committed the whole management of the Indian affairs; so that Dellius, to create difficulty to his (the writer's) administration, had possessed the Indians with the idea that the power of the said Dellius and the others was equal to the Governor's, and that the cognizance of the Indians and their affairs more belonged to them than to him; but the Indians being naturally quick, discovered that he was the King's Governor, and that Dellius had deluded and abused them, and they thereupon declared their grievances, as their Lordships would find, in the "printed conferences" sent (No. 1). To his unspeakable satisfaction he managed them with that patience, and made them so good a present, that he quite retrieved their affection, and they were never known to part with any Governor in so good humour. His journey was a little more expensive than usual, amounting to 1,200*l.* of that country money, but all commodities acceptable to the Indians were dearer 50*l. per cent.* Dellius the Dutch minister was the more industrious to amuse the Indians, that they might not complain of his notorious fraud and circumvention put upon the Mohack Indians by himself chiefly, and the other three persons above mentioned, in obtaining a grant from Col. Fletcher of their whole country; the villany of this Dellius would appear in the enclosure No. 2, which relates to the fraudulent bargain transacted between Dellius and six or eight of the Mohack Indians, wherein he made the Indians believe the land was only to be conveyed by them to himself and the other three persons in trust, for the use of them and their posterity, and to hinder the land being disposed of to other hands, that would probably dispossess them thereof; yet he with the other three persons, together with Mr. Pinhorn (whom the writer had lately removed from the council and his judge's place), obtained an absolute grant of all the said Mohacks' land from Col. Fletcher. The chief complainants against Dellius were Mohack Indians proselyted by himself to the Christian faith. Henry and Joseph he had taught to pray and preach in their language by means of a woman interpreter. The writer knew not how sincere converts they were, but they seemed to have no veneration for their doctor and apostle Dellius. The interpretness, also a convert, was a witness against him, and in her examination before all the magistrates of Albany and others, declared her knowledge of the fraud. Out of tenderness to Dellius's ministerial functions, he had not printed this account with the other conferences, to conceal the fraudulent part he acted from all the world, except their Lordships, to whom he felt obliged to communicate all things without reserve. By the printed conferences their Lordships would see how much the Indians stomached Col. Fletcher's neglect of them during the war, particularly in omitting to demolish the fort of Cadaracque, which the French had deserted for a long time, but had since re-garrisoned. They call it a cruel thorn in their sides. He sent also a memorial (No. 3), signed by Mr. Pynchon and Mr. Partrigg, about the murder of two Englishmen by some Indians, at the town of Hatfield, in New England, and his examination of the Skachkook Indians about the said murder. He had also resented that barbarous action in his letter to the Governor of Canada (No. 4), having grounds to believe the Canada Indians committed the murder.

Their Lordships would find in the printed propositions that the five nations had interceded with him for the pardon of Willm. Simpson, a soldier of Albany, who murdered an Indian Sachim, and wounded two others, who lay under sentence of death, together with his answer: if it were left to him, he should suffer death. On the other murderer mentioned in the said propositions, the grand jury brought in an ignoramus on the indictment. Three things were observable in the address to him from the magistrates of Albany: the first implied a wrong sustained by the inhabitants of Albany, by means of a grant by Col. Fletcher to one Ranslaer, of a great tract of land upon Hudson's River, above Albany, the said inhabitants having to take rum and other commodities for their peltry; the magistrates touched but gently on that subject, as the land of the eldest brother of the said Ranslaer reached 24 miles square, and Albany was in the centre of it. The second was the thanks to him for restoring the management of the Indians to the magistrates of the town, instead of their being under the directions of Mr. Dellius, the minister, Col. Peter Schuyler, Major Wessells, and Mr. Banker. He discovered that Col. Fletcher's grant of all the Mohack's land was not the sole price of the flattering address he obtained from the inhabitants of Albany. The writer's scheme of management of the Indians and their trade would be found in his instructions to Col. Peter Schuyler and all the magistrates of Albany, in the printed propositions which he was forced to draw up in his own hand, though weak in health, having no secretary, nor any one who could write good English. The third thing observable in that address from Albany was, the building of a fort there. He intended to write his thoughts thereon, and on the fort desired to be built at Schenectady. To his great amazement Col. Romar, the engineer, was ordered home by the Board of Ordnance, and would go from Boston in the "Deptford" man-of-war about three weeks hence. He would inform their Lordships of other matters by that vessel. On his return from Albany, the crowd of business gave him a relapse into the gout, under which he then laboured.

At the end of the printed conferences there was an allarm sent by the five nations of Indians of a design of the Governor of Canada to make a sudden inroad on them, unless they would go and make peace. He did what he could to keep them in heart, by sending his Lieut.-Governor to Albany, with all the soldiers he could spare. He enclosed a copy of his instructions (No. 5), and despatched the Mayor of Albany, Major Wessells, to a general meeting of the five nations at the Onondages Castles, and enclosed the instructions to him (No. 6), also a second letter to the Governor of Canada (No. 4), and instructions to Capt. John Schuyler (No. 7). Dated New York, 14 Sept. 1698.

Postscript. Major Wessells had returned from his negotiation, and had brought the memorial (No. 8). The writer forgot to mention the discourse that passed between Mr. Dellius, the minister of Albany, and himself, which he added to the manuscript (No. 2), which would show that man's strange prevarication and doubleness. He could prove by witnesses of credit, several immoralities against him, as also his disaffection to the King. They might wonder he trusted him with his first letters to the Governor of Canada and Mont Real, to notify the peace to them; but he had not then seen him, &c. The magistrates and inhabitants of Albany had bought Ranslaer's grant of land on Hudson's River, so there was an end of that grievance. Dated 16 Sept. 1698.

The above is a duplicate of a letter in the Board of Trade papers, New York, Vol. IV., p. 603. There is also another copy between pp. 636 and 637 of the same volume. It is also printed in Documents relative to the Colonial History of the State of New York, Vol. IV., p. 362.

Copy of the depositions (marked No. 2) of Henry and Joseph, two of the Maquase nation above referred to, which contain many curious particulars in respect to that nation, and to the alienation of the soil to Col. Peter Schuyler, Doctor Godfrey Dellius, and the others; they further state, that about three years ago, when they were out fighting against the French, six idle drunken people of their nation took upon them to sell a vast tract of land belonging to the complainants, called Skohere, of so large an extent that a young man had enough to do to run over it in a day's time, and that for the value of 30 beaver skins, in rum and other goods, which land Arant Schuyler bought for Col. Nicholas Bayard, of New York, and the latter obtained a patent of the late Governor for the said unlawful purchase.

They signed the depositions with marks or hieroglyphics, representing two nondescript quadrupeds.

above referred to, p. 513, and between pp. 636 and 637, and they are printed in Documents relative to the Colonial History of the State of New York. Vol. IV., p. 345.]

In the conference (forming part of enclosure No. 2), held at the request of the Maquase Indians with the Lord Bellomont, on 25 July 1698, Hillitie the interpretest states that when the writing about the Maquase land was signed, the true intent and meaning of the Indians was, that Mr. Dellius and the other three persons should be only trustees, to keep the land for the benefit of the Indians of the Maquase nation; but if it should so happen that all the Maquase Indians should die, or be extinguished or lessened to the number of ten, then Mr. Dellius, the minister, and the other grantees were to be owners of the lands.

At the conclusion of this paper, Lord Bellomont administered a smart reproof to Dellius, in presence of all the persons forming the conference, and promised the Indians to employ his interest with his great master, the King of England, to procure the grant to be vacated, if those persons did not surrender it, as Col. Schuyler and Major Wessells had already done. [This is not printed.]

29. [? Copy of] letter of Henry Baker [to the Com^{rs} of Customs]. He had passed the coast from Milton, and through the Marsh, and came to Hastings the previous night. He had made his observations on the owling and smuggling trade, which he would lay before them, when he attended the board. He was then proceeding to the west of Sussex, where he heard several of the old marshmen were, and then would make the best of his way to London. He had taken Folkstone and Romney warrens, and was in treaty with Sir Robt. Guildford's uncle for a very good house and land at Guildford, that was formerly the famous John Thompson's. If it could be had, it would be an extraordinary lodgment for two or three officers, and a thorough security for the Camber and all that end of the Marsh. He had posted in proper places, through the Marsh, 20 dragoons at the disposition of the officers. He had visited the two sloops, and had done his best to discharge his trust. - Sept. 21. 37. Letter of the Lord Bellomont, unaddressed, but commencing "My Lords," sending muster rolls (enclosure No. 1) of the four companies under his command. He took pains to have them exact, but did not know whether he was not wrong in mustering all his servants, as Col. Fletcher did, but with this difference that he mustered no negroes, as the colonel did, nor put in three fictitious names, which is the number of servants allowed every captain by the King. If the seven servants he mustered were thought too many he stood corrected. He would send muster rolls every six months and oftener, if it were not that the frost and snow hindered a communication between this and the garrisons of Albany and Schenectady. He hoped their Lordships would intercede with the King for full companies, as it was impossible for them to recruit from England, for the service was under such vast discredit by former mismanagement, that no man would enlist.

When at Albany the enclosed petition (? No. 2) was delivered to him by the chaplain and other officers of the four companies, to get off the burden of 30*l. per cent.*, which was a great discouragement in that scarce country, where all things, both for the belly and the back, were near treble the rates they were in England.

Mr. Brooks went for England while he (the Governor) was at Albany, and for ten days or a fortnight before, all the factious merchants of the town resorted to him at Captain Willson's, the late sheriff's, and there caballed till one or two in the morning, and made their compliments and attended him in a body on his departure. He appealed to their Lordships if he (Mr. Brooks) would not have been as odious to them, if he had done his duty, as he (the Governor) was, for seizing the ship "Fortune" with East India goods, of which he enclosed an account, and of other seizures (No. 3). He would make it apparent that he (Mr. Brooks) was false to his trust, and he and Col. Fletcher had combined to deceive the King and this province of as much money as they could. He was confident he should bring a charge of a great many 1,000*l.* to Col. Fletcher's account. He could not forbear complaining of the recall of two men-of-war under his command, as it weakened the King's authority, encouraged piracy, &c., and this the factious part were sensible enough of. Some of them were impudent enough to wish they were like the provinces of the Jerseys and Connecticut, with no Governor from England, nor any fort to awe them in their trade. Some of them were yet more insolent, and had said they would undertake it should be brought about. They had sent a project home by Brooks with an assurance of a great sum of money if Col. Fletcher, Gilbert Heathcote, the merchant, and Brooks, who were their agents, could compass the same. They were as "cock sure" of carrying the point and getting him turned out of this province, as ever he was of eating a dinner. He should cheerfully submit to be recalled, and their joy would not be greater than his comfort; for he would go away with the testimonies of a good conscience. He would not contend for keeping that government as it was, for no honest man of quality could live on the profits of that government. He did not see how he could make above 800*l. per ann.* It was true if he would make it the mart of piracy,—confederate with the merchants and wink at their unlawful trade,—if he would pocket all the off-reckonings, make 300*l. per ann.* of victualling the poor soldiers, muster half companies, pack an assembly that would give him what money he pleased, and let him misapply it as he pleased, and pocket great part of the public moneys, he could make the government very valuable; he believed more valuable than Ireland. The orders for the recall of the two men-of-war were directed to the captains, so that he was considered unworthy to be acquainted therewith; his power over them was so entirely superseded, that on a pirate ship coming into the Delaware River, and taking nine or ten ships, and robbing the people of Pennsylvania, Capt. Culliford refused absolutely to sail his ship and fall on the pirate, saying he had positive orders to make the best of his way to England, &c. Col. Markham's two letters concerning the pirate ship and desiring him (the writer) to send the "Fowly," man-of-war, to the relief of the people under his government (No. 4), together with the letter to him from the town of Lewis in Pennsylvania, as also the minute of council concerning Captain Culliford's refusal, with the copy of the writer's letter to Col. Markham, were bound up together (No. 4).

The French there were very factious, and their number considerable. He left it to their Lordships' judgment how safe it was to that province (which he took to be the key of all the rest upon the continent, and the chief frontier towards Canada), to encourage them. At the last election they ran in with the Jacobite party, and insolently boasted they turned the scale, and could balance the interests as they pleased. 33 French came to him at one time to be denized [? denizen], and by one letter. He delayed giving the letter till he knew their Lordships' pleasure. Some French, who passed for Protestants during the late war, had been discovered to be Papists, and he suspected they gave intelligence to Canada. He sent an extract from the Lieut-Governor's letter from Albany (No. 5). He (the writer) remembered Mr. Dellius, the minister of Albany, told him that the Count de Frontinac owned to him that he had a great part of his letters and intelligence from France, by way of Boston, all the time of the war. Where he met with a French merchant who was a good Protestant, he granted letters of denization. He heard the French had written to England for a letter of denization for the people above referred to, and said they would have them denized in spite of him.

He had made no step to change the officers of the militia, or of persons in the commission of the peace, or civil officers, except the displacing of Willson, the sheriff of that town; but it was absolutely necessary he should make an alteration, they being generally of ill character and disaffected. If he was not too late, he fancied with a little management, which should be fair and upon the square, to compass the continuing the revenue for five years: when that was done, he would bring the parties to a balance. He could see no reason why the English and Dutch that were called of Leisler's party should be any longer excluded from a share in the government; they were reputed to be two-thirds of the people of that province, and why they were crushed and oppressed he could not see; they were much more sober and better affected to the government than the other party. The Jacobite party in that town had a club; 27 of them met on Saturday se'night; their ringleaders were Col. Bayard, Col. Minviele, and Willson the late sheriff; there was such a rancour and inveteracy with them that he thought it not proper to leave that province till he had their Lordships' orders on his representations; for if he left, the people would fall together by the ears, and it would give the faction great advantage, and would tend very much to the revenue ceasing and his measures for the revenue would be frustrated. His stay promoted the King's service in respect to the naval stores, and in what he had in view to make peace with the Eastern Indians (who had been so uneasy to his other two governments all this last war) by means of one Schuyler, a Dutchman, who was very popular with our Skachkook or River Indians, who were formerly driven out of those Eastern parts by the people of New England, the Eastern Indians still retaining a kindness for them and owning them of their blood. This Schuyler was to take a journey to the Eastern parts with some of the chief of the River Indians, who seemed confident they should be able to make a perpetual peace; they would also be invited to live among the River Indians. He kept this matter private from his other governments.

He had sent for Col. Basse, the Governor of the Jerseys, and shown him their Lordships' orders, to maintain the privileges of that port against Perth Amboy, in East Jersey; but he had the impudence and folly to deny that he ever saw the orders, and pretended he would by force maintain the port of Perth Amboy. While the writer was at Albany he appeared before his Lieut.-Governor and Council to controvert the right of that place to be a port, &c. The Lieut. Governor's letter to him (the writer) would inform their Lordships thereon (No. 6), with which were Col. Basse's papers. Col. Basse further urged that the Act of 25 Car. II. gave the sole power of constituting ports to the Lords of the Treasury, and under them to the Com^{rs} of Customs. The writer replied he would pay such deference to an authentic original order from either of those Boards as not to disturb any ships going in there, provided security were given, that all goods landed there should afterwards pay the duty claimed by the port of New York, in case the ministers in England should again determine in favour of the port of New York. He also further argued the matter with Col. Basse.

To show what little respect Col. Basse paid to the orders of the government, he enclosed an affidavit of the officers acting in Mr. Brooks's stead (No. 6).

The writer formerly acquainted their Lordships, by Mr. Weaver, that he had no dependence on Sheriff Willson to raise the posse and rescue the King's officers, who were prisoners in Van Sweeten's house (the said Willson having concealed East India goods to the value of 2,000*l.* in his house), and so he sent the soldiers then on guard to make the rescue. The certificate signed by Mr. Randolph (No. 7) would convince their Lordships of the concealment. He should certainly have had a proof upon oath that Brooks was privy to Willson's receiving these East India goods into his house, and that all, or the greater part, were conveyed into his house before Brooks's face; but the "party" was terrified and verily believed he should be murdered, if he declared his knowledge, for, he says, "they are a most wicked and lawless people here and very revengfull." The writer was not there a fortnight before they threatened to murder Mr. Graham the Attorney-General, and Mr. Weaver. By the next opportunity he would send some observations on Col. Fletcher's and Mr. Brooks's accounts, and other matters. Dated 21 Sept. 1698.

[The first letter of 25 May is already described under that date.]

In his letter of 1 July, he goes fully into the charges against Mr. Brooks, with whom he says the late Governor, Col. Fletcher, had a right understanding and friendship, and both of them kept constant cabals and company, and had great intimacy with the merchants, owners of the rich lading of the ship "Fortune," and were suspected to be concerned themselves in her.

Further on he says:—"On my removall of Mr Brooks from his offices, with Mr Randall's advice & consent, I constituted Coll. Cortlandt (one of His Majesties Councill & formerly employed in the Customs, and a man of good repute) and Mr Monsey (who was searcher of the Customs here), to be commissioners to execute Mr Brooks his offices, during his suspension, and having intelligence where some uncustomed goods were, I sent Mr Monsey & Mr Evats, a searcher, to seize them, who went, found and seized them at Mr Vansweetons' house; but before they could carry them away to the Custom-house, Mr Vansweetons called together a number of the merchants, and by their advice locked up all the windows & doors & made y^e said officers prisoners in a close garrett, where they made the seizure, & put them in danger of being stifled: news of this was brought me about three hours after, being nine of the clock at night, with notice the officers were in danger of being murdered. I was therefore forced immediately to send my Lieut.-Governour with three files of soldiers & my own servants from the fort, who went & forthwith broke open the doors of Vansweetons' house (which were denied to be opened to them) & rescued the King's officers, & assisted in carrying the goods seized to y^e Custom-house. The merchants of the town were in such an uproar at this seizure (not being used to such things) that they exclaimed against me, as if all English laws & rights were violated, and had the insolence to present to me, a most reproachfull scandalous petition, 'w^{ch} they were heard to,' before myself & councill, and the petition had to

[?i.e. too] moderate a censure; most of the councill being merchants & actually concerned in these ways of trading, however, could not but join, in giving me leave to check the petitioners, which was all the punishment hath as yet been put on so daring an action, as to imprison the King's officers and then complain of the violence of their being released."

Mr. Monsey had refused to serve any longer, which his Lordship traces to the influence of Mr. Brooks, whose servant he had been, and no doubt privy to his corruptions, being, as it was said, rich enough to maintain himself at home, whither he was bound, and as was reported, to justify his master. His Lordship had appointed Mr. Ducey Hungerford, son of Sir George Hungerford, in his place. He had also appointed Mr. Thos. Weaver, agent for the province, who was the bearer of these packets, and had full instructions to afford their Lordships every information.

A paper so indorsed, stating that there was a contract between the King of Spain and the Guinea Company of Portugal for their delivery of a certain number of blacks in the Spanish West Indies, and that by an Act of Parliament, all ships going from hence to Africa, should return and unload in England, or one of His Majesty's plantations. The writer (whose name does not transpire) was apprehensive that great inconvenience to all ships so laden with blacks, would arise by unloading at the plantations, as well by the mortality of the blacks, as other charges, &c., by which the trade would be lost to the English; further he states that the English merchants concerned in the said contract, were anxious to avoid the unloading, which would be no detriment to the King or the African Company; and prays that they might not be subjected thereto.

82. Report of the same to the same, on certain papers transmitted by Col. Two of the papers were the produce of impositions [i.e. assessments] for the support of the government there, and not under their inspection. [Minuted:—"Send these to Mr. Blathwayt or Mr. Povey."] The third paper was an account of bonds under prosecution, and since an establishment of officers had been settled for the better security of the plantation trade at a charge of 2,000*l.* a year, His Majesty's share might go towards the maintenance of that establishment.

Further informing their Lordships of some things they had observed from their plantation letters, in order that such regulations might be made as were necessary:—I. The plantations were too frequently furnished with European goods, by way of Newfound-land, in exchange for which, tobacco and other commodities were transported to Europe, without touching in England. [Minuted:—"The Lords of ye Com^{tee} of Trade will please consid^r this."] II. In several private "proprieties," there is too easy an admission of an irregular trade. III. The naval officers who were appointed by the Governors in the plantations to take bonds and give certificates for clearing ships, had neglected to comply with the Act for preventing frauds, &c. [Minuted:—"This is to be remedied by an instruction to y^e Gov^{rs}."] IV. The collectors in the plantations had not been very steady in transmitting their accounts of the revenues to the Controller-General, and the law required a list of ships clearing in the plantations to be transmitted twice a year; but they thought it would be advisable for the collectors to make up their accounts quarterly, and send them and the list by the first opportunity; similar lists being intended to be sent from England. 9. Letter of Lord Bellomont, unaddressed, but commencing "My Lords." On the 6th, Capt. Schuyler returned from Canada and brought him a letter from the Governor, a copy of which he now sent (No. 1), together with the captain's journal of his voyage (No. 2) and the minute of council taken at his arrival at New York (No. 3), by which they would see the French had given over their design of invading the Indians for the present; he sent the copy of information of Col. Cortlandt, one of the Com^{rs}. of Revenue there, against the goods of Van Sweeten, merchant, seized by his (the writer's) order, and Mr. Van Sweeten's confession of judgment thereon, which was further evidence of the ship "Fortune" being a foreign bottom (No. 4). Also the bill of appraisement (No. 5). Further the depositions of Mr. Ludlow, a merchant there, of 2,500*l*. worth of East India goods brought to him to conceal (No. 6). They would see Mr. Wilson, the sheriff, was concerned in it. [See a previous paper at p. 214]. Brooks, the late collector, boarded with him, and he (the writer) was certain was privy to the concealment. He sent a certificate of the surveyor-general, of several most extravagant grants of land by Col. Fletcher (No. 7). Lieut. Hunt, who would sail from Boston in the "Deptford," man-of-war, would deliver to their Lordships a new map of the province (too bulky to make up in this packet), made by the surveyor, the exactest yet made, in which were described the large tracts granted, with the grantees' names. The whole province was given to about 30 persons, to the great prejudice of the Crown; because this, the most considerable province, could never be well peopled; for men would not care to become base tenants to proprietors of lands in this province, when they could buy the fee simple of lands in the Jerseys for 5*l*. per 100 acres, and as cheaply in Pennsylvania. Col. Fletcher (though not empowered) took money for all the grants, except that of the Mohacks' land. If he had reserved a reasonable quit rent to the Crown he would have been less to blame; but the rents reserved were trifling. He hoped their Lordships would find a way of voiding these extravagant grants and limiting all Governors to a certain number of acres, and oblige them to reserve a half crown on every 100 acres to the Crown, and that they would restrain them from selling. He should think 1,000 acres sufficient to grant to any one, for the clearing the land from wood cost 4*l*. 10*s*. per acre all the country over, so that 1,000 acres would require a good purse, the country being all under great woods. And yet Mr. Dellius, the minister at Albany, besides his share of the Mohacks' land, had another grant of 700,000 acres.

The gentlemen he suspended from the council were confident of being restored. In the depositions about Mr. Pinhorn two material circumstances were omitted, one was that he spoke scandalous words against the King, similar to the cant of the Jacobites in England. He looked very guilty, and what confirmed his guilt was that he entertained one Smith, a Jesuit, in his house. Mr. Nicholls, since his suspension for being a broker between Col. Fletcher and some pirates, continued to correspond with them. He (the writer) sent

John Williamson's depositions, which mention scurrilous words spoken against him (the writer) by the man and woman of the house. Nicolls had been a most restless incendiary against him. He sent also another deposition of Williamson concerning 'pirates' money; the most remarkable thing in it was Col. Willet's great care to conceal the money from him. Jones, formerly a pirate, endeavoured to clear Col. Willet; but he could not credit his evidence. Benjamin Thurston's deposition greatly confirms the evidence of Williamson. These and other depositions were bound together. (No. 8).

The 28th of last month he suspended Colonels Bayard, Minvielle, Willet, Townley, and Mr. Lawrence from the council, finding it absolutely necessary; they always complied with Col. Fletcher, but were always "resty" and perverse in everything the writer proposed. By his instructions he had to give his reasons for suspending every counsellor, and he sent his reasons (No. 9) against Col. Bayard, who had not yet sent an answer. The same reasons applied to the others as to Col. Bayard and to Brooks, Nichols, and Pinhorn. Besides those reasons, these gentlemen dissented when he proposed that the merchants should give bonds, when they sent four ships to Madagascar, not to trade with pirates, and that had made him sick of such counsellors. The four persons he had appointed of the council to make up the seven were Col. Abraham Depeyster, Mr. Robert Livingston, Doctor Samuel Stoats, and Mr. Robert Walters, men of good estates and reputation. The Government were under no small obligation to Mr. Livingston, for were it not for him the companies would have deserted long since, as there were 2,500*l.* due for their subsistence, he having undertaken to victual them, purely to serve the government; there were then almost 4,000*l.* due. He begged their Lordships to interpose with the paymaster-general thereon. These four companies were on the same establishment as those in England, therefore he wondered how they were so neglected. He desired the four gentlemen named might have the King's letter of confirmation. Mr. Weaver, the agent, would pay the fees. Mr. Phillips resigned his counsellor's place from age, and Mr. Lawrence was superannuated, being 82 years of age.

He also displaced the same day Mr. David Jamison from being clerk of the council and deputy secretary; he was a Scotchman, and condemned to be hanged in Scotland for blasphemy and burning the Bible; but was transported to this province "and sold a servant;" he was a professed atheist and had two wives. He was first in Col. Fletcher's confidence and favour, and he commended him to everybody as the honestest man he ever knew; he had enriched himself by extortion and other works of darkness, but chiefly in the grants of land sold by Col. Fletcher by brokage. The writer would have dismissed him sooner, but Mr. Clement, who was to have come over as his secretary, disappointed him dirtily, so that he was unprovided with a secretary, and found so general a corruption that he knew not whom to trust.

There was so much disaffection to the Government that he re-resolved to appoint Com^{rs} to go all over the province and tender the oaths to his Majesty, the Test, and Association, to all people, by which means he should discriminate the professed Jacobites, of whom it was said the number was not small.

Some of the people of the town were so enraged against him, because they were under the notion that Mr. Weaver was his friend, he having made him counsel for the King on two occasions. Wilson brought an action against Mr. Weaver for saying that Wilson was forsworn, for making the return of members to serve in the last assembly, and the jury gave 500*l.* damages; but there were such pregnant reasons in arrest of judgment that it was believed there was an end of the suit. Another reason of their prejudice to Mr. Weaver was (as the writer conceived) several of the merchants endeavoured to bribe Mr. Weaver, and the writer by him; but he rejected their offers with indignation and honour.

About three weeks since the relations of Mr. Leisler and Mr. Milburn desired leave to take up the bodies that had been buried near the gallows, and give them Christian burial in the Dutch church there, to which the writer consented, chiefly out of respect to the Act reversing the attainder of those two men, which Act legitimated Capt. Leisler's assuming the government of this province, and put a censure on the illegality of his execution. He enclosed the Act (No. 10). There was a third motive,—Col. Fletcher had refused to restore their heirs, according to the Act, to their estates. He (the writer) had been told that the rage of some of that party had transported them to burn the Act, vilifying it as an Act surreptitiously obtained in the Parliament of England. He, who valued no Englishman who was not a hearty lover of English laws, thought it proper to assert the Act, which had been treated with infamy. His design was chiefly to give the people a just idea of the English laws, that they have the stamp of the highest authority of the King and nation of England, and ought to be respected as sacred. There was great opposition made to the burying of these two men by the contrary party, &c. It was said 1,200 people attended the funeral, and there would have been more, but a "rank storm" blew for two or three days and hindered the people from crossing the rivers. Dated New York, 21 Oct. 1698.

P.S.—His Lieut.-governor, Capt. Nanfan, was newly arrived from Albany; he had had a conference with several Sachems of the five nations of Indians, to dissuade them from going to Canada to exchange prisoners with the French. The writer sent the captain's narrative of that conference (No. 11). He (the writer) distinguished the proofs now sent for suspending Col. Bayard from those formerly sent in a list (No. 9).

He could not send the state of the revenue and accounts, but would send by the "Deptford," which would go to Boston in ten days. Dated 22 Oct. 1698.

12. Copy of a letter unsigned [but from Lord Bellomont], to the Lords of the Council of Trade and Plantations, on the state of the frontiers and fortifications of the province of New York. Col. Fletcher valued himself very much for defending the frontiers, but it was a happy thing they were not attacked; the Governor of Canada could hardly have known the weak condition of the garrisons; if the last winter had not been the severest ever known, the French would certainly have destroyed Albany and Schenectady. They were prepared at Montreal with 1,500 pair of raquettes or snow shoes, 140 small boats, and 250 canoes; but the snow being deeper than the height of a man, they dare not venture. Albany and Schenectady were equally defenceless, having only a single row of stockades, and no ditch or wall, so that an enemy might come with their musquets and single out what men they pleased. The stockades had wide spaces between them, and were even with the ground. If the French had attacked Albany, they could not have failed taking it, &c. The five nations of Indians would then have revolted. Their Lordships would see by the two addresses from Albany and Schenectady, printed with the conferences, sent by the "Fowly" frigate, that they earnestly desired good defensible forts built. Col. Romer had viewed those places particularly, and estimated that two stone forts with barracks would cost 9,000*l.*; he would go over in the "Deptford" from Boston, and would have waited on their Lordships with the plans, had he not been recalled by the board of ordnance. Where the 9,000*l.* was to come from he (the writer) could not imagine. The assembly would not be brought to continue the present revenue to build those forts: besides this town and county were rich, and so were the inhabitants of Long Island, alias Nassau Island, because of their lying convenient for trade; but all the inland parts of the province were poor. In his next letter on the revenue and accounts, he should propose a fund to build these forts, and hoped their Lordships would obtain the King's order, that they might be begun the next spring, and he desired Col. Romer might be sent over again, for he had a great opinion of his honesty, and he (the writer) would use his best endeavour that neither he, nor anybody else, should make a hand of building those forts; 'twas wonderful to him why the Col. was recalled when he had been there but six months. If those forts were built and well garrisoned, the French could never make any impression on the province, and it would secure the obedience of the five nations of Indians; for they were as sensible of our weakness as we were. There were formerly two or three little forts, more advanced towards Canada than Albany and Schenectady, but in his opinion they were superfluous; those two places would be enough. They were both well seated for frontier places, Albany for covering all the province from attacks on Canada side, and Schenectady for doing that in part, and also for covering the Mohaks and the rest of the Indians.

There is a postscript which explains that when there was a war the Halfmoon and Canastagione were esteemed very necessary to be fortified. Dated New York, 24 Oct. 1698.

In Mr. Lowndes' letter there was no answer to that part of his Lordship's, relating to their Lordships' privileges. He was informed by his "council" he must give their Lordships some trouble in prosecution of his right to that office, their Lordships having denied admittance to him, and given the same to Mr. Chr. - 14 Nov. 52. Letter from Lord Bellomont, Governor of the province of New York, to Mr. Lowndes. He hoped Mr. Weaver, the agent for that province, waited on him sometimes to inform him how affairs were managed there. He need not trouble Mr. Lowndes, as he would have his long letters to read to their Lordships. He desired he would rectify any errors, in form, in the accounts ; as to the fact, he believed they were just.
 One Bayard, suspended from being His Majesty's counsel, was gone for England. He had been a great incendiary, and a most restless, turbulent man. The town had been much quieter since he went. He ran away the day he was suspended, being afraid of Leisler's friends, whom he had persecuted with great violence. By knavery he was worth 6,000 or 7,000*l*., and he carried over 1,000*l*. to purchase Brookes', the late collector's place there. His son, who was a blockhead, betrayed the secret. He believed their Lordships would avoid sending a man to that post who was his declared inveterate enemy. He did not suppose the money would prevail, but it was not impossible he might make friends to influence their Lordships. Dated New York, 14 Nov. '98. 1½ pages (quarto).

Nov. 25. 67. Copy of letter of Nicholas Matson, collector of Feversham, in favour of Richard Maydston, characterising the charges against him as frivolous; what was done was under his directions, those who had the wool refused to deliver it to his clerk and Mr. Maidston, and his clerk returned with a writ of assistance, but the constable and company refused to assist them, by reason they had a warrant from Mr. Watson and Taylor of Canterbury; if this were suffered, the officers would in a little time get no assistance. Norris had taken two men-of-war of the French in the Straights which had brass guns, for which he demanded 6,000*l.*; but the Attorney-General's opinion was, that the King was entitled to the guns, and that the captain ought to be paid 10*l.* per gun out of the Prize Office; they had received great quantity of guns on the same footing, and were afraid if their Lordships paid Capt. Waters, it would bring great trouble and charge on the office, and be a sufficient encouragement to other pretenders. Dated 29 Nov. 1698.

When the Earl of Bellomont was appointed Governor of that province, the captain exchanged commissions with Capt. Nanfan to be his Lieut.-governor; the subsistence of the four companies at New York (of which Capt. He was in a very low condition, and owed to His Majesty 123*l. 9s. 10d.*, and had compounded with his other creditors at 4*s.* in the pound. Suggesting that he should be allowed 72*l.*, which was after the rate of 34*l. per ann.*, for the time he was employed, upon condition that he paid the remainder [of the debt], and that for the future he should have an addition of 8*l. per ann.* Further, the salaries of the deputy postmasters were very low, and they were not exempted from quartering soldiers, since the King's accession, as they formerly were, and consequently they were not so diligent in performing their duties. 8. Report of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury, upon Captain Baker's survey of the coast of Kent and Sussex. The whole frame and design of the new proposed establishment of officers for the land guard was, without any consideration of the late established guard of the coast, by sloops. The previous establishment had been made in time of war, and when there were frequent hostilities upon the shore; but it was as much to prevent the going and coming of passengers, intelligence and correspondence with France, as the hindrance of the owling and smuggling trade; and at a time when smacks and sloops could not be kept at sea, by reason of privateers. Since the peace the Com^{rs} thought a larger land guard might be necessary on the coast of Sussex, but they could by no means agree to the measures proposed by him. They, however, now laid before their Lordships a scheme containing the present charge,—the charge by Captain Baker's proposal,—and the charge by the Com^{rs} proposal.

The observations they make are upon the following places:—Sheppey, Milton, Canterbury, Isle of Thanet, Folkston, and coast of Sussex. Dated 8 Dec. 1698.

Hunt about six weeks since, who, failing to go by the "Deptford," had gone forward to Piscataway, and embarked in a mast ship. Their Lordships would judge by them what an administration there had been there [New York], and by his observations on them; Mr. Brookes, the late collector, would appear to be very corrupt. He (the writer) was about to make some tide-waiters to stay on board the ships till they were unladen, which had not been done, and by depending on the invoices the collector had been cheated of the Customs for a third part of the cargo; this he had from a merchant. He intended also to appoint a riding surveyor on Long Island. The salaries should be as moderate as could be, and if their Lordships did not approve, he could quickly unmake them. By what he could collect, the revenue would be 10,000*l.* or 11,000*l.*

4. Petition of Richard Bovett to the King. He had made several important discoveries, some relating to correspondence with the King's enemies, others of frauds and breach of trust at his own expense; not long before he brought proofs of a very great embezzlement out of the "St. Peter" prize, before the Lords of the Treasury, who were well satisfied therewith, &c., he could bring good proofs that the King was defrauded of above 50,000*l.*, if assisted with the necessary charge, &c.; prays an order for such a sum as the King thought fitting. Dated 4 Jan. 1698-9.

5. Letter signed T. T., to the Hon. Charles Montague, Esq., First Lord of the Treasury. As First Lord of the Treasury he was the fittest person to be acquainted with the ill practices of John Dutton Colt, collector of the King's Customs in Bristol, who was endeavouring to prevent Mr. Daniel Ballard, late cashier of the Customs, from informing against him by stifling his evidence. Mr. Ballard might be heard of at the Ship tavern without Temple Bar. He could prove the reception of gratuities by Mr. Colt, for taking clipped money at the Custom-house, when it was called in, to be re-coined. The writer heard Mr. Colt rejoice very much when Mr. Knight was accused, for it hindered him from finding out Mr. Colt's roguery; but it was principally the 3,000 odd pounds which Mr. Colt says Mr. Ballard was short in his accounts to the King that made Mr. Colt so eager to agree with Mr. Ballard, &c.

There were accounts between Mr. Colt's wife and eldest son and Mr. Ballard, and money continually had for house-keeping. If Mr. Ballard were sent for, he could inform of several other ill practices, such as taking bribes for letting ships go, when under embargo, &c.

Mr. Colt was almost illiterate, and ignorant of Custom-house business; he was wholly directed and governed by his wife's gallant, Mr. Robert Barnes, one of the surveyors, who understood little. He was formerly an A. B. C. schoolmaster, and had better to have remained in that employ, being so covetous and ready to make false seizures, by which the King was often put to unnecessary charges. The first thing that gave him credit was on the discovery of a fraud in 1690, which was wholly revealed to him by Mr. John Roe, a King's waiter, whom he cheated out of 1,200*l.*, and gave only 100*l.* as Mr. Roe could testify. Mr. Colt brought from London a pick-pocket, who went by the name of Wilkinson, who picked the locks at the Custom-house, and took several sums of money, and was caught in the act. The reason Mr. Colt brought the fellow there was, that he had an extraordinary handsome wife, with whom he (Mr. Colt) was intimate. Mr. Colt's securities should be looked to. Sir Harry Colt was one of them, and he was worth nothing if his debts were paid. He lived by the same profession his father did, viz., a common gamester and cheat. Old Mr. George Colt, the father, was proved perjured, and "forged a false will," &c. There was not a viler generation on earth. Mr. Ballard had shown his honesty when entrusted with three score thousand pounds, and almost as much at another time, which he brought safely to the Treasury, which was a good argument for him against Mr. Colt, who endeavoured to lay the cheat of 3,000*l.* odd to his account. This collector, Colt, had forfeited his place by trading; he had insured several ships and traded to sea in hops, and his merchandizing was done in his wife's name. Dated 4 Jan. '98-9.

P.S.—He enclosed this to Sir Tho. Littleton, because he believed a former letter had been intercepted by Mr. Colt or his agents. He asked that this might be acknowledged by advertisement in the Gazette.

Minuted :—"A letter subscribed T. T. directed to one of ye Lds Com^{rs} of his Ma^{ty} Treasury, came to his Lor^d's hands; if the party that sent the letter has anything that he can make out, he may apply to ye Treasury board and be heard."

There are five entries in the Minute Book, Vol. IX., pp. 106, 108, 154, 235, and 240, in relation to Colt's money transactions with Mr. Cocks and Mr. Ballard. The last is under date 19 Dec. 1699, and finishes :—"Draw up ye state of ye whole case & lay it before ye K." 2 pages.

He suggested that he should be allowed a small frigate and a sloop to carry away the specimens, and he relates other of his proceedings; adding, "I believe the French King is putting Mons^r Denys' project in execution; for the French are settling their east country, and are encroaching into our lines, as 'tis reported here twelve leagues; w^{ch} twelve leagues is as good as any of our land, for the production of naval stores," &c. By Act of Parliament a debt to one Mr. Rupert Brown of 4,800*l.* had to be paid by cutting the King's woods in the forest or chase of Needwood (Stafford); which sum, if so raised, would utterly deface the forest, to the loss of the King and prejudice of the noblemen, gentlemen, and freeholders that had right of estover there, who had petitioned the King thereon. He desires that some other way might be found to pay the said Brown. His Lordship had ordered his deputy, Mr. George Vernon of Sudbury, to make proposals for the better management and cutting the woods, that the best timber might be preserved, and in such places as would be graceful for the forest, and convenient for the deer: desires speedy directions. The forest is the most beautiful in the kingdom, it was formerly of larger extent and fuller of wood; the petitioners by ancient charters claimed a right to a greater quantity of wood of estovers than the forest would then bear, upon which right many townships and several hundred families bordering upon the forest depended, and in great part subsisted, and out of it the castle of Tutbury, the King's lodges, several churches, common bridges, pounds, and fences in and about the same were repaired. An Act of Parliament had passed to restore the forest to the King, and thereby secure the rights, &c. to the petitioners, in which Act was a clause to pay 3,300*l.* with interest to Mr. Rupert Browne by the sale of wood from the forest; 1,305*l.* worth had been sold, and 4,800*l.* remained due to the said Browne, which if raised, would destroy the forest and the game and deprive them of their rights: they pray some other way might be found to pay Mr. Rupert Browne.

All the expenses would be lost, and the trade carried on with much more mischief to the King unless their Lordships immediately settled the matter. His remedies proposed on his previous survey at Michaelmas were referred to the Com^{rs} of Customs. - April 27. 77. Report of Sir R. Cotton, Knt., and Sir Tho. Frankland, post-masters, addressed to the Lords of the Treasury, on the memorials of Thomas Neale and Andrew Hamilton, Esqrs., stating that the latter had established a regular post to pass weekly from Boston to "New York in New England," and from New York to Newcastle in Pennsylvania, that the profits had every year increased so as to defray all charges except his salary; that the Attorney and Solicitor-General were of opinion the King could settle the rates for letters carried beyond sea, &c.; advising the appointment of an officer to take charge of all letters directed to the plantations, and send them in sealed bags, to be delivered to the deputy-postmaster in the first port where the ship should arrive, the master receiving a penny for each letter for his care, and upon such officers being established a public notice should be given that no other person presume to make any collection of letters for those parts; they were of opinion that the rate for inland letters proposed by Mr. Hamilton was too high, "it having been found by experience in the office here, that the easy and cheap corresponding doth encourage people to write letters, and that this revenue was but little in proportion to what it now is till the postage of letters was reduced from six pence to three pence;" it would require 1,200*l.* further charge than that already expended, to enlarge the post through Virginia and Maryland, &c. Dated 27 April 1699.

Accompanied by:—

"A calculation what charge will cary the post from Newcastle in Pennsylvania to James' City in Virginia, about 400 miles."

The memorial of Thomas Neale, Esq.

Also another memorial from him, showing that he had deputed Andrew Hamilton, Esq., to erect post offices, who had at the said Thomas Neale's great charge, settled them 700 miles in length on the continent of America, the accounts for which were then laid before their Lordships; also that the deputy-postmaster had come over to afford information, and proposed the method contained in the enclosed memorial to support the post.

The said memorial of Andrew Hamilton, setting out the good effects of the Post Office, and suggesting various improvements.

He states:—"The method at present used to get letters transported to America is this: the masters bound thither, put up baggs in coffee houses, wherein the letters are put, and for which one penny per letter is usually paid, and two pence if it exceed a single letter. This is lyable to sev^l abuses. First, any one under pretence that he wants to have his letters up again, may come to those baggs and take out other men's letters, and thereby discover the secrets of the merchants; and 'tis in their power entirely to withdraw 'em. 2^{dly}, Severall masters, upon their arrivall, often keep up letters till they

Also the account above referred to, of settling and carrying on the post in North America, from the beginning of May 1693 to May 1697.

In the Minute Book, Vol. IX., p. 152, 28 June 1699, is:—"Postm^{rs} Gen^l & M^r Neal. 14. Letters from the Lords Justices of Ireland, reports of the Com^{rs} of Revenue for Ireland and other papers connected therewith, concerning the estates of Sir Valentine and Sir Nicholas Browne, commonly called Viscount Kenmare, in the counties of Kerry, Limerick, Cork, Wexford, Wicklow, and City of Dublin, which were granted by letter, dated 25 April 1696, to Lord Bellomont for 1,000 years, and by him redemised to Sir Charles Porter, the then Lord Chancellor, and others, for 999 years, for the uses mentioned in that letter; in which they were empowered, as lessees, to demise the same or any part for any number of years, and at the most improved rent that could be had; whereupon they granted a lease of part of the estate to Mr. Blener Hassett and Mr. Rogers, after which other proposals were made by Daniel O'Bryan and Sir Wm. King, offering a greater rental, about which disputes ensued. Dated between 8 May 1699 and 4 Jan. 1699-1700. Some of the papers relate to the value of the woods on the estate, and others to a pension of 400*l.* per ann. to Hellen Lady Kenmare, wife of the said Sir Nicholas Browne.

Amongst the above is one entitled:—

"Proposals of John 'Blener-hassett' and George Rogers, Esquires, for encourageing a linnen manufactory at Killarney, in the county of Kerry, and planting Protestants there." (Printed.)

In one of them the estate is described as "consisting of very strong holts & formerly a receptacle for torys, rapparees, and disaffected persons," and advises that it should be wholly planted with Protestants.

The following three minutes are in the Minute Book, Vol. IX., p. 141, 13 June 1699, in relation to these estates:—

(1.) "Mr South & Mr Roberts. The former saies the estates of Lord Kinmare & Sr Valentine Browne did not make 1,000^{li} a year; the Lords Justices directed the Com^{rs} of ye Revenue to receive proposals, and directed them not to sell it by cant; because then Irish Papists might gett in. They acted purely by direction of the Lords Justices."

one of the Trustees for the estates of Kinmare & Browne. M Savage saies the Trustees were ignorant of the value. The Lords Justices sent for ye Com^{rs} of ye Revenue and informed themselves of ye value, and the Lords Justices made the agreem^t wth Hasset & Rogers, and directed the Trustees, wth the Com^{rs} of Revenue, to make the lease; but ye K. or Lords Justices are no partys to ye lease. M^r Purcell saies Protestant tenants will readily take it at 3,000^{li} a year. This lease was made about 6 months agoe. M^r South saies there never was any estate sett in this manner. Write to my Lords Justices that my Lords are surprised at setting the estates in this manner, without publique cant, and for so long a term, when it's plaine it might be sett for a greater rent, and this being done contrary to ye direction of the King's letter, who is cestique trust. My Lords desire them to take effectual care that the lease be sett aside."

(3.) p. 213, 10 Nov. 1699:—

"Lords Justices letters concerning the estates of S^r Valentine & S^r Nich^o Browne and the letter from Com^{rs} of ye Revenue are read. The King orders the opinions of M^r Attor. & M^r Sol^r to be sent to ye Lords Justices, who (if the estate be underlett) are to use such meanes that Hasset & Rogers may be induced to make some increase of their rent." Wren at 106*l.* and 40*l.* per ann.

Aug. 24. 13. Letter from Mr. Geo. Dodington to the Lords of the Treasury, in reference to the widow Cordwent's petition, whose late husband in 1694 supplied the second marine regiment with clothes and beds to the amount of 3,300*l.* He believed there was a contract between Lord Berkley, the commander of the regiment, and the petitioner's husband, but did not know what money was paid; there had been above 4,000*l.* paid to clothiers for those regiments for 1697, which was taken out of the soldiers' pay. The Com^{rs} of the Navy had appointed a clerk to adjust what ought to be abated from the marine soldiers for 1694-5-6, to satisfy the petitioner's demands, &c., and great progress had been made; but whether the money due on ships' books paid off, and on ships' books not yet paid off, would be sufficient to answer the petitioner's demands, and discharge the imprest of 6,851*l.* 5*s.*, he could not say. The petitioner was misin-

28. Petition of James Whiston to the Lords of the Treasury. From the last of Oct. 1698, to 23 Aug. 1699, about 5,000 pipes of Canary wine were imported in London, the pipes each holding 122 gallons, the merchant paying duty on 126 gallons (sic); also 2,000

tuns of Florence and 300 tuns of Rhenish wines in the same manner. 28,000 pipes of wine from other places, holding 140 to 170 odd gallons each, were also entered, which passed as if they held but 126 gallons, by which the King was defrauded of the duty on 2,335 tuns, equal to 46,700*l.* For several years the vintage had proved bad; but this to come is very good. If these wines were honestly gauged in the other ports it would add to the revenue 70,000*l. per ann.* The petitioner asked their Lordships to send for Mr. Thos. Leader, in Billiter Lane, the now city gauger, to prove these assertions: the petitioner honestly believed if he had a good salary as King's gauger, he would detect the abuse; but as he was gauger for the city, it would be his ruin to aver this truth. Praying that a minute might be made to reward him. He was further ready to show how the King might make hundreds of thousands of pounds per ann. in other matters.

29. Letter of Lord Bellomont to the Lords [of the Treasury]. He had been greatly concerned for the neglect of the four companies at New York, and he was more wearied by the complaints of the victuallers than with all the other business; they told him they were out of pocket above 7,000*l.*; he had fed them with hopes, but that artifice would no longer satisfy them; he feared unless the subsistence were paid in England they would be "broke and the soldiers turned a grazing." Soldiers were never more necessary than in the province of New York, where the people had such an appetite for piracy and unlawful trade, that they were ready to rebel as often as the Government put the laws in execution against them; he hoped that order should be given that those four companies should be as exactly paid as the forces in England. An Act had passed in the Assembly that vacated some few of Col. Fletcher's extravagant grants of lands, which he (the writer) presented to the Council of Trade, but seven or eight of those grants remained unbroken; eleven men had full three-fourths of that whole province granted them, and there was not a gentleman amongst them, nor three well affected to His Majesty. Mr. Dellius, the Dutch minister of Albany, had a grant of above 900,000 acres of land, besides a grant of the Mohawk's land (one of the five nations of Indians), which so disturbed and dissatisfied that nation and the rest, that they had like to have gone over to the French; he had previously treated of these extravagant grants, and hoped the Council of Trade had communicated with the Treasury Board thereon; he had intended to complain to their Lordships and the Council of Trade, in respect to the execution of patent places by deputies, even if he had not received a letter from the Council ; as a specimen, he referred to the case of Mr. Brenton, collector of this province, of New Hampshire and Rhode Island ; if he could get the papers transcribed, which were delivered him by Mr. Mounteys, a merchant, with his petition against Col. Allen, the last Governor, and Mr. Sheaf, the deputy collector, he would send them by that conveyance to the Com^{rs} of Customs ; he charged those two with making an unjust seizure of Mr. Mounteys' ship and goods ; Mr. Brenton's deputy in Rhode Island (one Gardiner) was accused of sheltering one Guillam, a pirate, in his house, who lately came with Capt. Kidd from Madagascar, and was a most bloody villain, said to be the man who stabbed Capt. Edgecomb, commander of the "Mocha" frigate for the East India Company. He was the ringleader when that ship's company turned pirates ; he was said also to have served the Mogul eight or nine years, to have turned Mahomedan, and to have been circumcised ; he endeavoured to apprehend Guillam and some other pirates in Rhode Island, two were taken, but Guillam was conveyed away, and Gardiner was said to have had a hand in his escape ; he (the writer) was going to Rhode Island to execute a commission from His Majesty, viz., to inquire into the irregularities of that Government, and then he would inform himself how far Gardiner was guilty ; he was certain he was guilty of entertaining Guillam in his house, but he did not charge this against Mr. Brenton, for he knew it was very hard to find honest men in that part of the world to put into employment ; the clerk of the council at New York and the naval officer (the only officers the writer made) proved both very idle knavish fellows, but they were the best he could get ; the office of collector was the most ungrateful in those plantations, if he were just, they hated him mortally ; so that an honest man with substance would hardly accept a deputy collector's place ; he had not discovered anything amiss in Mr. Brenton's behaviour there, though he was much hated by the merchants, but (for ought he could find) it was for his exactness ; he (the writer) would neither deceive the King, nor suffer any one else to deceive him ; he desired Mr. Brenton might be ordered to his post, as his absence was prejudicial ; he advised the appointment of a collector for Rhode Island and another for New Hampshire, who should be "nicely honest" at 100*l.* a year each ; and because there would be little for the latter to do, there being little trade there, he advised that the collector should be surveyor of the woods in that province and receive 50*l.* a year, (which Mr. Brenton then had to no manner of purpose) as part of the 100*l.* proposed : Mr. Randolph had that 50*l.* a year before Mr. Brenton for looking after the woods of that province, and neither of them had ever done sixpence worth of service for it ; Mr. Brenton had employed one Mr. Ichabod Plaisted to look after the woods there as his deputy, and Ichabod the deputy, did as little good as Jahleel, his principal, nay, he did a great deal of hurt, for he traded in timber and was building a saw mill in order to devour more timber ; there were above 50 saw mills in that little province, half of them double ones that used two or more saws; a mill with a single saw did 20 times the work of two men, for it would saw 2,000 feet of boards in a day; they worked about eight months in the year, the frost hindering them the remainder of the year. There was such a shameful waste of the woods as could not be conceived; the collector ought to be a right honest man, and he would give him what assistance he could; he advised that all officers of the revenue should be Englishmen.

P.S.—The collector of New York wrote that this was the worst year known for the customs, the growth of the Sugar islands, which used to bring almost the whole revenue of customs, having failed; but one sloop could get a loading at Barbadoes, and several sloops had come from those islands to New York in ballast. Mr. Hungerford, one of the collectors, and Mr. Parmiter, the naval officer of New York, wrote that the acts of Assembly which granted a revenue to the King were so lame and weakly penned, that the merchants and others eluded them, and a good many seizures of ships and goods were lost by want of honest judges; there was not such a parcel of wild knaves and Jacobites as those that practised the law in the province of New York, not one of them a barrister, one was a dancing master, another a glover, a third (and he Col. Fletcher's bosom friend, favourite and land-jobber) condemned to be hanged in Scotland for blasphemy and burning the bible, and all of that honourable profession, ignorant and usurers, their only skill consisting in chicane and stirring up the people to litigate the titles of estates with one another, and debauching them from their duty and affection to His Majesty: he was thus particular in regard to the lawyers, that their Lordships might promote an honest understanding lawyer who would deserve 1,000*l.* a year to be made Chief Justice of that province, and another good lawyer to be Attorney-General at 300*l.* a year; the Assembly of New York had complained to him against the lawyers by petition, and desired that the administration of justice might be in better hands; a pure and upright administration of the laws would improve the revenue at least double, and reconcile the people to the laws and government of England, who, he must needs say, had too great an aversion to both. Dated Boston, 8 Sept. '99.

55. Petition of John Thompson to the Lords of the Treasury, showing that in 1679, he obtained a patent for himself and Mr. Edw. Noell, for the place of registrar to the Com^{rs} of Excise, at a joint salary of 350*l.* per ann. Mr. Noel had been also secretary to the Com^{rs}, which obliged him to a daily attendance, but was dismissed; he had promised to allow 75*l.* per ann. to an assistant, but then refused to pay the King's taxes or the allowance to the assistant; praying their Lordships to make a suitable order thereon, which should include the said payments. Read 10 Oct. 1699.

There are two minutes on the back, the second of which follows:—

"24 8^r 1699. Ordered that so much be paid to Tompson, as his part of ye salary am^{ts} to; and so much more as the tax on ye whole office of reg^r am^{ts} to; and Mr Tompson is to give an ac^t to ye rec^r, and to see that the tax be p^d to the K^s coll^r."

The following is in the Minute Book, Vol. IX., p. 198, on the above day:—

"Com^{rs} of Excise called in wth Mr Noel & Mr Tompson. The petitions of Tompson & Burgess are read. Noel saies he never had any constitu^{cion}, but the patent for register; and when he was turned out, he had nothing more to doe: calling him sec^y was nothing but courtesy, he did all as register. That the offices of reg^r & sec^y are all one, and the office of reg^r was granted to him for life, and the reason why he doth not meddle wth his sall^a is, because he is turned out; but he thinks himselfe intitled to ye office still.

in 1682 and 1686, and took some of their places and quantities of beaver [?skins] and other goods; which was a notorious breach of faith between the two crowns: upon an examination of the case the late King James demanded full satisfaction and restitution, which was agreed to, and would have been performed, but for the Revolution. They had trusted to receive satisfaction for damages at the conclusion of the war; but the Com^{rs} who had to determine the rights and pretensions the King had to Hudson's Bay (which, by the treaty of Ryswick, was the first point to be considered), had yielded to the French a demand for 7,000*l.* for goods of the petitioners, rightfully recovered from them, which was out of order in itself, as the right of the natives had not been answered; the petitioners had a demand upon the French for above 120,000*l.*; the petitioners were utterly unable to meet the demand for the 7,000*l.*; it would be their ruin and that of above 50 families. They pray their Lordships to represent their case to the King, and to intercede with him to use his authority to obtain satisfaction of their damages, and restitution of their places.

(2.) "Minutes relating to the Hudson's Bay Company," containing an account of what the gentlemen of that company testified on 10 Nov. 1699, before the Lords of the Treasury, in relation to their company, viz., they were unable to restore the value of the goods taken in Fort Bourbon, according to the King's pleasure; they were robbed by the French of 120,000*l.* It cost 15 or 16,000*l.* to recover the fort; by the policy of the French they had little or no trade there the last year; the goods were over-rated, those rated at 7*s.* per pound were worth but 5*s.*; they had paid near 2,000*l.* for customs and taxes, and the value would be but 3,000*l.*; they desired all parts of the treaty to be performed; the war was in part through their wrongs; the French retook the fort, and were obliged by the treaty of Ryswick to restore it; but they kept it. The company was incorporated in 1670. In 1680 the stock rose from 100*l.* to near 1,000*l.* In 1682 the French invaded them and took away 15,000*l.* value. In 1682 Mons. Armond took a ship, value 10,000*l.* In 1686 King James demanded satisfaction from France; then the Jesuits procured a neutrality for America, and knew by that time they were in possession of Albany Fort. In 1687 they made infraction of their treaty and took the Hayes sloop. In 1688 they took three ships, value 15,000*l.* In all 113,000*l.* damage, in time of peace. The war was made in part for these damages. In 1692 the company set out four ships to recover Albany Fort, taken in 1686. In 1694 the French took York, alias Bourbon Fort. In 1696 the English retook it from them. On the 4th Sept. 1697, the French retook it and kept it. The peace was made 20 Sept. 1697.

By the seventh or eighth article, there should be a treaty for the right to the whole bay. The French intercepted the trade, and the company could not hold out two years. They desired the right of the whole bay might be settled, and that Fort York might be delivered to them according to the treaty, and that their poverty might be represented to the King. 55. "The case of the Register's Office for registering of all pawn and sale goods to brokers." It sets out that the brokers could not be suppressed without prejudice to the nation, for there must be buying and selling, and the poor could not afford to buy any but second-hand goods; under the name of pawn and retail brokers there were many receivers of stolen goods, who were privy to robberies, and the receiver makes the stealer; the number of brokers of late years had increased in the city and suburbs, and there never were more felonies and robberies, and it had always been observed that as the brokers multiplied the thieves increased; besides their extortion, many times they kept no register, so that the goods could not be redeemed. In 37 Eliz. the Lord Mayor, &c., of London, for discovery of robberies, &c., authorized an office for registering pawns, &c., every broker to enter into a bond of 100*l.* before he dealt in that trade, that he should buy no goods or take to pawn any but what he should enter in a public register in an office appointed in the said act of Common Council, that they should weekly bring to the register a just schedule or duplicate of every day's bargain or pawn, with the names of the sellers or pawners, their occupation and abode, and the quality and marks of the goods sold or pawned, and for what pawned; the goods to be kept certain days before they might dispose of them, that if stolen the owners might search the register; as this only applied to the city and liberties, the brokers withdrew to the suburbs and exercised their crafts, so that complaint was made to King James I., who in the sixth year of his reign confirmed the act of Common Council, and enacted the like office of Registrar in Westminster and liberties, and within two miles of London.

In the 20th of the reign, the act of Common Council, on account of ambiguity, was repealed, and a new act made more plain, which was confirmed by letters patent; this was confirmed in 5 Charles I. In 13 Charles II. the office was confirmed for the cities of London and Westminster and places adjacent, and the reversion granted to Sir Gilbert Gerrard, Sir Joseph Wagstaffe, and Bernard Greenvile, Esq., who afterwards bought out the former patentees at a cost of 2,000*l.* In the 14th year, the Mayor, &c. ordered that the registrars should proceed to exercise their office, and above 500 brokers gave bond, &c., but those who dealt in stolen goods, &c., refused to give bond and to register, "disputing the King's prerogative as being no law to sue them by." A Bill was thereupon presented to Parliament and passed, for the more effectual settlement of the office; the King, however, refused his assent thereto, having a design to erect a "General Lumbard" for lending upon pawns "by an Act of Parliament, which he designed for the Duke of Monmouth, under the title of Mount Pieties, he found this registrar's office would be a detriment to it, and therefore would not pass it, but Parliament was dissolved before the Act for the "Mount Pieties could pass." 2 pages (brief size).

Referring to security to be given to the Moors for the performance of Capt. Geo. Delavall's agreement for the captives in Barbary. The particulars of the agreement had not arrived in England, when the Lords of the Treasury gave their order, or they would have seen that Capt. Delavall came from Barbary after the agreement in Mequenez, to consult Capt. Munden about a truce with the Moors for six months, until the captives could be got off. A man-of-war was to carry two or three Moors for England, to buy certain things and bring them to that port, on which the captives were to be brought from Mequenez and other ports of Barbary to Tangier, and were then to be brought aboard. And after that a prolongation of a truce or a peace would be agreed on as our king should think fit. This was the substance of the agreement set on foot by Admiral Aylmer, according to instructions. The list agreed on was for 272 Christians, all His Majesty's subjects except some few of other nations taken under English colours; many of them were taken young, and were then very old. Of four presented to Capt. Delavall, one of them was 102 years old.

He begged Mr. Lowndes to move their Lordships, unless he thought he had not suffered enough, but he knew he (Mr. Lowndes) was a man of better morals and more justice than to leave his services, done to the revenue, in oblivion. The claim he made was his all, and many families depended on it. He hoped he would move his business on the morrow at Hampton Court, where he (Mr. Stanyan) would attend. He enclosed his memorial for perusal. Dated 6 May 1700.

Accompanied by the memorial, in which he mentions that their Lordships had made full minutes on his case in Oct. 1697.

The Minute on 27 Oct. 1697, throws a good deal of light on the matter. It states that the former reports and matters concerning the farm of Sir James Shaen and others were considered and the report of Mr. Lowndes read; and "as to their demand of 12,000*l.* for loss by the Tangier contract being broken, Mr Lowndes is to attend the Earl of Rochester when he comes to town, to know if his Lop remembers the promise of K. Cha. 2^d for ye said 12,000*l.*, or what further light his Lop can give in that matter," &c. Mr. Lowndes was directed to examine Mr. Stanyan's demand for 1,124*l.* 3*s.* 3½*d.*, and if it was well grounded their Lordships thought he ought to be repaid in Ireland. See Minute Book, Vol. VIII., p. 26.

His memorial is minuted :—" Read 21 May 1700. His Maty will have him in his thoughts to imploy him when there is a vacancy ;" and in the Minute Book, Vol. X., p. 57, is the same minute. 2 pages.

- May 7. 47. Report of the Officers of Works to the Lords of the Treasury, sending, in pursuance of their Lordships' commands, estimates of several works done and doing by the King's command and the Lord Chamberlain's warrant, amounting to 3,550*l.* 18*s.* 8*d.* ; besides these, other works had lately been directed for the accommodation of the King's servants and the officers of the household, which should speedily be represented. Dated 7 May 1700. 6 pages.

- May 8. 48. Report of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury, upon the letter of Mr. William Middleton, relating to the coal meters of the city of London. They had brought the meters to be satisfied with ½*d.* per "chalder," which is but half what they had on the former duty, out of that the under-meters were to have half. For the year ending 15 May 1699 it amounted to 627*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.*, which they would pay if their Lordships approved. Dated 8 May 1700.

Minuted :—" Agreed & ordered."

The letter and the reply of the 15 coal-meters. 3 pages.

- May 8. 49. Report of the same to the same, on the petition of Bartholomew Conly, merchant, who having sustained losses in the late war beyond 16,000*l.*, had compounded with his creditors, but was prosecuted for a debt to the Crown. Stating they saw no reason why he should be relieved, for what the King remitted must be paid to the prosecutor. Dated 8 May 1700.

Also the petition and two other papers.

Minuted :—" Read 29 May 1700. My Lords can give no relief in this case." 4 pages.

- May 8. 50. Copy of presentment of the same to the same, as to the repayment to merchants of Poole, Dartmouth, &c., of certain customs on train oil from Newfoundland. Dated 8 May 1700.

- May 9. 51. Order in Council, on the petition of the Governor and Company of Merchants of London trading to the East Indies, [the old East India Company], relating to the seizing, by the officers of Customs, of jewels of very great value brought from the East Indies in the ship "Neptune." Referring the matter to the Lords of the Treasury to report upon against that day se'nnight. Dated 9 May 1700.

Minuted :—" Report made, dated 24 May 1700."

Also the petition, which states that they had given security in 30,000*l.* for the payment of the Customs on the said goods, and another bond for 15,000*l.* for the further duty of 15 per cent. They took out a sufferance for bringing the diamonds, musk, pearl, and jewelry into one of their warehouses, in order to be valued for the duty, which sufferance was delivered to one Raynton, an officer of Customs, who instead of performing his duty, in conjunction with two other officers, seized the jewels, &c. for themselves and the new East India Company. The Com^{rs} so far countenanced the seizure as to order the jewels to be carried to the King's warehouse, where they are entered three-fourths to the use of the new Company, and the other fourth to their own use. Praying that the Com^{rs} and other officers of Customs might not intermeddle in what was properly a dispute only between the petitioners, their agents, factors, and servants, and the new Company.

Judging from the arguments in this case, which are fully entered in the Minute Book, Vol. X., pp. 48-55, on 15 and 17 May, and occupy about seven pages, this must have been a most important case. The conclusion their Lordships came to was:—"Upon consulting wth ye King's counsell, my Lords see no reason for laying the restraint upon ye Com^{rs} or officers of ye Customes as is desired." 3 pages.

The officers of Customs endeavoured to seize the wool and Harding was shot by his own party. Dated 9 May 1700.

Report of Henry Baker, giving an account of the murder and what he had done. He observes that the mayor and town [of Canterbury] were very cool in the matter, and suggests that the reward should be offered. Dated 30 April 1700. 3 pages.

56. Report of the Com^{rs} of Excise, on the petition of Allen Garrard, who was bound with one John Goodeve in a bond with a penalty of 3,000*l.* as surety for George Murrey, one of the collectors of Excise; finding that there were great dealings between Murrey and the petitioner on account of returns, and they had great reason to believe that there was a design formed between the petitioner and Murrey to go off with a considerable sum of the King's money; for the petitioner was accustomed to accept bills drawn on him in fictitious names, when there were no such persons as the pretended drawers. They were informed that the petitioner went great part of the last round when Murrey collected, and actually received great part of the moneys collected, and concealed him in London at his own house, and complained to the Board that Murrey had withdrawn himself. They had arrested the petitioner, seized his goods and an estate in Essex valued at 30*l. per ann.* They advised that the petitioner deserved no favour, as he had assisted Murrey's escape and had given advice to the other surety to abscond. Clayton, advising the acceptance of the proposal of relations and friends to pay 1,000*l.* in discharge of his debt of 1,600*l.*, and further advising the release of Andrew Clayton, his brother, imprisoned for the same debt in Newgate. June 19.

35. Letter of Walter Devereux [to the Lords of the Treasury or Com^{rs} of Customs?], in answer to objections made by Mr. Henry Baker to his proposal for prevention of the smuggling on the coast of Kent, referring to his printed paper laid before them and the members of the House of Commons. He allowed that he had allotted three vessels for the coast of Kent, as it was resorted to by the "shallups and lemanores," being the nearest cut to France. Mr. Baker had done well to have informed their Lordships of the many horse and foot ways in the cliffs between Dovor and Folkstone before he put them upon hiring the "Warren," when the most noted of all the ways for running goods were to the eastward of the part hired, and known by the names of Butt-stairs, Aby Land-stairs, Head-stairs, and Pott-stairs. He avers that the assertion was incorrect that you could ride upon the strand or back from Folkstone to Dover at any time except high spring tides, as was stated; the cliffs between Walmer and Dover were as noted for running goods as any part of Kent, though taken no notice of by Mr. Baker. If the owling trade were in a great measure broken, as he set forth, the country was most grossly abused by the many prosecutions he had against them. His (Mr. Baker's) intelligence from France was very indifferent, for the price of wool there, since his management, had fallen from 35*l.* per pack to 15; it was then advanced to 24, and the reason of the better price was the season of the year. The King would pay no more than the charge of building the boats, which were not to exceed seven tons, and were to contain eight able men, and to be as nimble in rowing and sailing as the French shallups or lemanores; they would live in the sea better than any other, but not to be launched into the ocean further than necessity compelled. He would give good security to make good the losses of the vessels and ammunition by casualties; but the King would save considerably by repairing such losses rather than allowing 10,000*l.* per ann.; but in seven years there should not be the loss of a vessel; they were not to carry cannon or culverin, but a couple of smart guns to sling a pound bullet; nor to carry ballast more than arms and ammunition, and the tackle to wind up their boat; nor would he fix a crab or capstan on shore, but would have on board what would perform it quicker, and with fewer hands. Mr. Baker asserted that 40 men would not draw up a vessel in stormy weather; to show how little he understood of the matter, he would engage to draw up a boat of 12 tons with the help of 16 or 20 fishermen. His ignorance must be evident to the people of Brighthelmston, who drew up ships of great burthen in all weather at that town. As to the persons employed, he had but recommended the supervisor for Sussex.

P.S.—He thought Captain Nash, in his answer, had spoken as modestly as possible of his friends, the commanders of the sloops on the coast. Dated 19 June 1700. 3 pages.

June 20. 36. Memorial of Bernard Granville to the Lords of the Treasury, offering some few reasons not presented to their Lordships by his counsel at the hearing of his case in relation to Mote Park, for which the memorialist had accepted 300*l.* a year, but, as he maintained, only as part of the value. Dated 20 June 1700. 3½ pages.

June 21. 37. "A state of the wages, board wages, pensions, and other annual allowances to the servants of the household, chamber, chappell and stables, payable in the Cofferer's office for half [a year] ended at Midda. 1699." Dated 21 June 1700. 1 page.

June 21. 38. "Mr Henry Baker's Answer to Mr Devereuxes charg of his illegall practices agst y^e King & kingdom's intrest;" being the replies seriatim to six charges made against him by Mr. Devereux. Dated 21 June 1700.

Accompanied by the said charges. They principally relate to the owling trade carried on near Folkstone since the management of the affairs had been in the hands of Mr. Baker.

In the first reply of Mr. Baker, he says, "that notorious Irish rebel, Morris Trant, was taken in Devereux's house."

There is some further account of these disputes in the Minute Book, Vol. X., p. 88, 26 June 1700. Mr. Devereux says he would have made good his articles if Mr. Baker had not arrested him. Their Lordships were ready to hear him, but he declined to proceed except by an action against Baker. 6½ pages.

June 21. 39. Report of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury, on a memorial entitled the "Case of severall merchants of London now in prosecution in his Ma^{ty} Court of Exchequer for importing wines from the kingdome of Spain into England;" advising the acceptance of the composition offered. Dated 21 June 1700.

Accompanied by the particulars of the composition.

This is referred to in the Minute Book, Vol. X., p. 78, 21 June 1700:—Their Lordships would accept a composition of 2/3 of the value of the wines. "And Mr Weeden & Mr Kerne for themselves & all others concerned in ye said ships do promise that they will leave off this trade for ye future; that they will discourage it in others so far as in them lyes; and that they will lay open to my Lords

40. Copy of a report of the Com^{rs} of Trade to the King, stating that they had already laid before the King a state of the allowances which had been made to the Governors of the provinces of Massachusetts Bay, New York, and New Hampshire, by way of established salaries, and now represented what had been otherwise done by those provinces, and what might be expected from them for the support of the Earl of Bellomont. It was customary for the General Assemblies to pass acts for making presents to their Governors beyond their salaries, especially on their first arrival. The Assemblies of New York, Massachusetts Bay, and New Hampshire, on the Earl's arrival, had passed an act presenting him with 3,000*l.* of their money, being above 30 per cent. less in value than the current money of England; but the act had not yet been approved. The only money paid to the Earl since his departure from England in October 1697 was 400*l.* sterling per ann. out of the revenue of New York, the Lieutenant having the remaining 200*l.* (the Governor's salary being 600*l.*); New York would hardly make another present; New Hampshire was too poor, and would do little; and Massachusetts Bay, a flourishing colony, showed no disposition to do it. 46. Memorial of the Governor and Company of Merchants of London trading into the East Indies to the Lords of the Treasury, referring to their petition of 9 May, in relation to the ship "Neptune" (see Vol. LXVIII., 51), which petition was reported on by their Lordships on the 24th of that month. They were under the necessity of offering several matters upon the report, as they conceived that not only their trade, but the King's interest and that of the kingdom were much concerned; they had hoped that they had made it appear, that after the King's duties were secured, he had no further interest, that the officers of Customs were officers for his revenue only, and that there was no necessity for a seizure, because the new Company could as well commence a suit upon the late Act without a seizure; but they found from their Lordships' report that they saw no reason for laying a restraint on the Com^{rs} and officers of Customs as was desired; laying before their Lordships five considerations to induce them to interpose with their wisdom and authority with the Com^{rs} of Customs to restrain their officers from intermeddling with and engaging the King's authority in seizures of that nature; adding, that if they go on in their present course, the Governor and Company hoped it would not be thought want of duty to His Majesty, nor want of respect to their Lordships, if they endeavoured to remedy themselves by law against such proceedings of the officers. Dated 26 June 1700.

A memorial of Philip Ryley to the Lords of the Treasury, complaining of the interruption given by Sir Robert Smith and Mr. Dickens to all manner of business, and that it was impossible to carry on the public service in the New Forest if some discouragement were not given to those two gentlemen, more particularly complaining of their obstruction to the selling of trees of the value of 242*l.* 6*s.* for repair of the lodges and bridges in the forest; submitting to their Lordships whether those two gentlemen were fit to be continued in the commission of the peace, and whether the King might not fitly show a dislike of such proceedings, especially as one had little or no estate or interest in the county, and the other only about 400*l.* per ann., "during the life of his lady." Dated 29 June 1700.

Accompanied by a letter to Philip Ryley, Esq., dated 30 June 1700, from Mr. Geo. Furzer, who appears to have been the deputy of Ryley, giving details of the carrying out his duties in the New Forest, and amongst the rest the interference complained of.

The Earl reports that in the year 1688 the said Hewet went down into the West with a considerable sum to pay the army, and rendered an account thereof, except the above sum, which was in foreign coin; there was reason to believe he was a great sufferer by the badness and smallness of the silver coin, and the rise and fall of guineas. [Minuted:—"Agreed."] Mis-carriages happened by the employment of indigent people employed by the receivers, because they would do it cheapest, and they had appointed three persons to bring the letters from each receiving house twice every grand post night, and the "by nights" once, at a charge of 31*l.* per ann. [Minuted:—"Agreed."] They had to add 20*l.* per ann. to the "mail maker's" contract, which had been 80*l.* per ann. the King might not be a loser, but the persons most likely would not undertake it, except upon terms disadvantageous to the revenue ; but as it would undoubtedly be of great use to trade and commerce, they prayed further directions, and annexed a schedule of the charge and loss. London having been considered the centre, all letters passing through London from one route to another were taxed with a double post, first to London and then to the place were directed. But on settling this post between West Bristol and Chester roads, all letters could only be charged with a single post. The passing through London was both tedious and chargeable, and a more speedy conveyance would in all probability produce an increase in the number of letters, besides bringing such into the office as were conveyed by carriers. They found it the practice to convey letters between towns that had commerce, particularly between Bristol and Worcester, and Worcester and Shrewsbury, where there were two persons who made it their business to collect and disperse letters. They found the cross post, set up $3\frac{1}{2}$ years since between Exeter and Bristol, produced about 355*l.* per ann. "neat profit." If set up, it should be managed for His Majesty, and carried as far as Chester. Dated 5 July 1700.

They could not understand there would be a saving to the nation, for 10,000*l.* per ann. was proposed for the management, when the whole charge of the present establishment was 6,500*l.* They also enclose the answers of the persons above named to the proposal. They found the officers of the navy very solicitous to possess their Lordships with notions to their disadvantage; they thought, with modesty, they understood their own business as well as they. 'Twas a little hard on them to desire their money when their (the Navy) office was under such circumstances as to build ships out of the wear and tear, which must create an expense of gunning them out of theirs (the Ordnance); their Lordships could not wonder at their being more in debt than at the conclusion of the peace, they having so reduced what the Parliament had assigned them the last two years. The establishment of their office was then double what it was in King Charles's reign, and at that time there were but two third-rates supposed to be at sea, and those not above 70 guns; whereas then they had actually nine, and most of them of 80, which is so vast an increase of the fleet that even the common ordinary expense of sea stores and half the establishment really amounted to more than what they so justly claimed. The stores were very low; 200 or 300 tons of saltpetre ought yearly to be provided, for 600 was but a poor provision when they considered there was no other way of making good the expense of powder. The navy would be eased of a very considerable trouble in the gunning and ungunning the ships at Portsmouth. To do this the King desired a wharf and storehouse built; the design would cost above 15,000*l.*, and a storehouse at Plymouth 4,000*l.*, which services could not be done in time of war; but if their Lordships took from them what the Parliament gave, they should have neither money nor credit. The least ever given to the office was 63,739*l.*, and when the ordinary of 60,000*l.* per ann. was settled, every extraordinary service was provided for. They hoped their Lordships would agree that 22,750*l.* for sea service was under what was really necessary. They made no mention of the land service, 25,000*l.* being appropriated by Parliament, and they feared it was to no purpose to complain. Dated 15 July 1700.

It appears from the Minute Book, Vol. X., p. 103, that on 17 July 25,000*l.* was allotted for the land service, and 11,375*l.* for the sea service. 2 pages.

July 15. 69. Letter signed "Ste. Hervey," addressed to William Lowndes, Esq., in favour of Mr. Middleton, who had married a near relation of the writer, and who would be ruined (having his estate mortgaged) if he did not find friends to assist him; he had done the Government good service, but it was in finding out faults, whereby he had made great enemies: seeking that he should be "placed in any little post for a subsistence." Dated 15 July 1700.

[About July 16.] 2. Petition of Nathaniel Booth, Esq., surveyor of the Greenwax, to the Lords of the Treasury, praying payment of the arrears of his salary since 1696, the Pipe Office not being able to pay them as formerly, by reason of the great sums paid by sheriffs for apprehending highwaymen, clippers, coiners, and burglars.

[July 18.] 4. Petition of Catherin O'Hara to the Earl of "Tankerfield" and the rest of the Lords of the Treasury, stating that what was granted to her and her sister only paid her debts. Her sister was provided for by the Duke of Bolton's daughter, and she herself was sent for by a relation in Ireland, and if she missed that opportunity she must infallibly starve; begging for ever so little, though but 5*l.*, to bear her charges. Undated.

Minuted:—"18 July 1700. Give her 10^{li}, but my Lords will hear no more from her. Pd."

[She and her sister had previously had 50*l.* apiece granted to them to carry them into Ireland. See Minute Book, Vol. IX., p. 284, 28 Feb. 1699-1700.] 1 page.

July 18. 5 Report signed "Jo. Taylour," to the Lords of the Treasury, in answer to their Lordships' directions to lay before them a state of the further demands of Admiral Aylmer, for credits given to Captain De la Val for the charges of his negotiation for the redemption of captives, and for moneys expended by the Admiral in receiving the balance of his last account: finding that 663*l.* 1*s.* 5*d.* were due to him. The paper referred to is docquetted :—"State of Admiral Aylmer's acco^t of mo[ney] paid to Mr Marshall, on account of his journey to Barbary, and for buying horses for the King, and also to Capt. De la Val & others on acco^t of redemption of captives" [at Algiers and under the dominion of the Emperor of Morocco]. It consists of a report signed "Jo. Taylour," dated 28 Jan. '99. Minuted :—"23 Feb. '99. The remainder is to be p^d out of ye Civil List mo[ney]. A s[ign] m[annual]."

There is also a second enclosure. 2 large pages and 1 smaller.

July 19. 6. Warrant of the Lords of the Treasury, under their signatures, to Charles Montague, Esq., auditor of the receipt of the Exchequer, requiring him to draw an order to pay Matthew Aylmer, Esq., 663*l.* 1*s.* 5*d.* for what remained due to Captain Delavall, for his carrying on a treaty with the Emperor of Morocco, relating to the redemption of English captives and other expenses. Dated 19 July 1700. 1 page.

July 19. 7. Letter of the Com^{rs} for the Debts due to the Army, Navy, and Transport Service, addressed to Wm. Lowndes, Esq., enclosing a draft of the debentures intended to be issued, to be laid before the Lords of the Treasury, for them to add such method as would prevent their being counterfeited. Dated 19 July 1700. 2 pages.

July 23. 8. The reply of Walter Devereux to the answer made by Mr. Henry Baker, to six articles of complaint exhibited to the Lords of the Treasury, against him (Mr. Baker) by the said Devereux, together with the proofs of the said charge.

He says, "the iniquities of Mr. Baker are more than can be imagined, whose multiplied and various artifices and frauds cannot be described in a few words, and if his faults had been fewer, this paper had been shorter." Again, "What Mr. Baker pronounces to be false, is generally true," and "what he affirms to be true is generally false."

Towards the conclusion he requests their Lordships to require Mr. Baker, before he stirs out of their presence, to give such present answers as he could, to the particulars charged, that they might see where his defence lay, lest by giving him time to consider he should take an opportunity of frightening or arresting his (Mr. Devereux's) witnesses, or dealing with his own, and of inventing and obtruding upon their Lordships false stories and disguises, at which he was most excellent; as had already appeared, by the many falsehoods he had exposed in this answer. Dated 23 July 1700.

In the Minute Book, Vol. X., pp. 107-109, 23 July 1700, is a full account of the hearing of this case of Devoreux against Baker, finishing :—

"My Lords are of opinion that Mr. Devereux hath not made out any one of the articles in his charge ag^t Mr Baker as to any material point."

The charges made against Mr. Baker arose in the prosecution of persons engaged in "owling" on the South coast. (See also Vol. LXIX., Nos. 35 and 38.) 11 pages.

- July 23. 9. Report of the Officers of the Mint (not signed) to the Lords of the Treasury, upon complaints of corrupt practices of Thos. Molyneux, Esq., Comptroller of the Mint, and his friends; laying before their Lordships the depositions and examinations they had taken thereon.

The corrupt practices consisted of taking sums of money for passing accounts, of obtaining a gold watch of 37*l.* value, to be presented to Mrs. Molyneux, and of raising the estimate for building the press-house, &c., to lower the estimate for repairing the controller's, lest the latter should not be allowed.

Docquetted :—"Mr. Molyneux's charge given in by ye officers of ye Mint, July 23^d, 1700."

Accompanied by papers numbered 1 to 17 (there being two for No. 4).

The 1st is a letter signed Cha. Mason, who was one of the controllers of the Mint to the Warden, Master, and Worker of the Mint, inculcating the said controller or his deputy or clerk.

The others are the depositions and examinations referred to.

Also there is another examination of one Hannah Moyne.

In addition there is Mr. Molyneux's answer, denying the charges against him, and promising to answer them at large if he might have longer time.

Minuted :—"Read 23 July 1700."

In the Minute Book, Vol. X., are long entries on the 8th, 9th, and 16th of October, as to this case; nothing definite appears to have been arrived at, but on 12 Nov. (p. 148), is:—

"The matter of the accusation prosecuted by M^r Mason against M^r Molineux is received and opened by my Lords, and notice is taken of the accusations by M^r Molineux against M^r Mason. The King will take a little time to consider this." 35 pages or parts of pages.

- July 23. 10. Report of the Com^{rs} of Excise to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petition of Theophylact Blechynden, their clerk of the securities and assistant secretary, recommending that he should receive 100*l.* in consequence of additional duties. Dated 23 July 1700.

Also his petition.

Minuted :—"The 100^{li} is ordered." 2 pages.

- July 23. 11. Copy of a minute of 23 July 1700, of the Com^{rs} of Customs, in consequence of their directions given to Capt. Phelips to call on the merchants to clear their bonds, having proved ineffectual, viz., that the solicitor give notice to the merchants that he must put them in suit if they were not cleared forthwith, &c., and Mr. Wolstenholm was directed to take care on the arrival of the Virginia fleet, that no new credit should be given or discounts allowed to merchants who neglected to clear their bonds.

Most likely an enclosure. It is numbered 2. 1 page.

- July 23. 12. Report of the Com^{rs} of Excise to the Lords of the Treasury, as to frauds committed in the port of London, by obtaining the drawbacks on exportation of fish, by bringing fish privately back from the ships and relading the ships with the same fish, &c.; recommending Thomas Walker and Henry Canby, the searchers who had detected the same, to be rewarded. [Minuted:—"50^{li} between them."]

They further observe that they suspected that the searchers of the several ports were not so diligent and careful, in verifying the quantities of fish and salt exported, as might be expected, and that an officer appointed by them should certify the quantity exported.

Minuted:—"Order'd, so as no illegal restraint be putt on trade, and lett ye Com^{rs} of Excise prepare the draught of an order & agree it wth the Com^{rs} of Customes." Dated 23 July 1700. 1½ pages.

July 24.

13. Letter signed Wm. Middleton, to the Lords of the Treasury, telling them he must vindicate himself by writing, since it was not their pleasure to hear him. Mr. Godolphin told him before the second duty commenced, that the Com^{rs} were imposed on by agreeing to give the head meters 1*d.* per chaldron, on the 1*s.* duty, but that his advice should be taken for the 2*nd* duty; 13*s.* 4*d.* was paid every time they wrote their name—his appearing against it had reduced it to 6*s.* 8*d.*, which was more than judges and masters in Chancery had for giving oaths; the receiver for the 5*s.* had but 200*l.* a year, and "so he had for the 18*d.*," "the office for the certificate for 30 years" was not above 40*l.* per ann. till he made it up 50*l.*; it was then reduced to 30*l.* When he was Com^r of the 3*s.* aid he offended all his rich relations and friends, by making them pay for 200,000*l.*, &c. Twenty-five years before, the most valuable gentlemen of the county thought him worthy to sit on the bench, and he was not to be despised for his poverty, produced by just debts from the Crown, and for refusing 800*l.* to conceal frauds. In the late reigns in consideration of his father's imprisonment for four years, and the loss of 1,000*l.* per ann., his mother was supported on their Majesty's bounty, and money was given for her burial, at which time he made "a discovery," and had a satisfactory gratification. All the members of Parliament he had conversed with, were of opinion, that there should be the same frugality in the state as the church, but there were 15 rich men against him and the reputation of the Com^{rs} of Customs besides, therefore a considerable sum must be lost. After this manner the fraud of the corn was managed, the reputation of the magistrates for sending false certificates, and the officers who filed them, were preferred before the King's interest, and 150 guineas were spent when he refused 300*l.*, as the Lords of the Treasury treated him like a gentleman, but the Com^{rs} of Customs and Waterson, treated him like a footman. He represented that Sir Wm. Ashur[s]t and three of his successors, when Lord Mayors, defrauded the King of the tax 800*l.* per ann. Sir John Fleet was taxed as well as they, and paid: when his (the petitioner's) worthy friend Sir Francis Child was mayor, it was told his Lordship that he (the petitioner) was a troublesome man. When Clerk was mayor he denied him justice. He reported a manifest fraud relating to births, burials, &c., but the Lords never heard him. He put his name to the letter, but the Lords were not at the trouble to put an advertisement in the Gazette. He treated their Lordships better, and would put that duty into a better method; Sir Stephen Fox and others seemed to approve of what he said: he prayed that the petition might be granted, that he might not be imprisoned and his family starved. Dated 24 July 1700.

It was read on 25 Oct. 1700, and there is a second minute:—
“Read 13 Nov. 1700. The Com^{rs} think he may gett what he can of meritt. My Lords can give the pet^r no more.” 2 pages.

14. An application to the Lords of the Treasury, of Wm. Atwood, Esq., appointed the King's Chief Justice for New York, and of Sampson Shelton Broughton, Esq., appointed Attorney-General there; reminding their Lordships of the letter formerly sent from the Com^{rs} of Trade for the settling their salaries.

Minuted:—“24 July 1700. The King's respite was upon the salary, and the same cannot be settled till the King's pleasure be further known.”

In the Minute Book, Vol. X., p. 143, 30 Oct. 1700, is:—“The King will allow Mr Atwood only 300^{li} a year and to Mr Broughton 150^{li} a year.” 1 page.

15. Report of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petition of Col. Quarry, for the renewal of an order for payment of 50*l.* to a minister and 30*l.* per ann. to a schoolmaster in Pennsylvania, and directing them to consider what public revenue there was in Pennsylvania out of which the pension might be paid; there might be enough to pay it out of the quit rents, but they were under the control of the auditor of plantations; the 1*d.* a pound on tobacco shipped was appropriated for the current service of the year, &c. They would make a further report of the duty of 1*d.* per pound in Virginia and Maryland. Dated 24 July 1700.

Also five other documents relating thereto.

There are three minutes on the dorse, the last of which is:—

“5th Aug. 1701. Prepare a warr^t for paying these allowances out of y^e plantation dutys except appropriated arrears. Write to Mr Bl[athwayt] stating y^e matter.” 10 pages.

16. Letter of the Officers for Victualling to Wm. Lowndes, Esq., sending a list of all the papers formerly laid before the Lords of the Treasury, in relation to the prosecution of Nicholas Green, merchant in Ireland, for fraudulently sending into France a ship laden with provisions on the King's account. Dated 29 July 1700.

Also the said list or “abstract of papers,” an Order in Council to prosecute, an order of the Lords Justices to the Attorney and Solicitor-General in Ireland to effectually prosecute, and a report on the case by the above victualling officers.

17. Petition of the Com^{rs} of Excise to the Lords of the Treasury, setting out that the King was much defrauded in his duties on salt, by sums drawn back upon pretence of exportation of salt to Ireland, great part of which was not carried there, but run upon the coast of England and Wales; proposing that a law should be obtained on the subject embodying various remedies therein mentioned. It contains several particulars about the curing of fish. Undated, but after July 1700, see another report of the Com^{rs}, dated 23 July 1700, No. 12.

Also a draft of an Act of Parliament, with blanks to be filled up, on the same subject. 3 pages.

18. Letter of Sir Basill Dixwell to the Lords of the Treasury, acquainting them in his own vindication, that it was no fault or neglect of his that his Excise accounts had not been more quickly despatched, having long before applied for such accounts as were in arrear, but the cash accounts were all delivered together, into his office about a year before, and their hands had been so full in despatching the six years' general accounts and one cash account then called for, that they could not make such progress with them as they wished; now, however, they were upon them and would rid their hands of them as fast as they could, and they hoped to complete them in about a year. Dated 20 Aug. 1700.

Minuted:—"Mention the former direction. That my Lords are not satisfied wth this answer. That the gen^l acct^t for 1695 be finishd by the 15th of November next, & dd to M^r Chancellor, otherwise my Lords wilbe obliged to represent to ye K. the disservice to His Mat^y and ye publique, by negligence in passing the acct^s in his office." 3 pages (quarto).

19. Letter from Mr. Burchett to William Lowndes, Esq., inquiring whether the Lords of the Treasury intended to have Capt. Dated 28 Aug. 1700.

23. Report of Sir Charles Hedges to the Lords of the Treasury, as to a fit allowance to Mr. Larkin for going to the several plantations in America, to settle the forms of proceedings, and to do what else was necessary in holding Admiralty courts for trial of pirates; recommending an allowance of 200*l.* for fitting out, in addition to whatever charges he was at for passage, a further 200*l.* for his stay in the plantations, and 500*l.* a year as long as the service lasted. Dated 2 Sept. 1700.

Accompanied by an Order in Council for the above report to be made.

24. Presentment by the Com^{rs} of Excise to the Lords of the Treasury, as to passing the accounts: the growing business in the Auditor's department could scarcely be carried on; the deputy comptroller of Excise had lately applied for assistance; when Mr. Ashmole was comptroller he kept nine clerks, and although the present comptroller was allowed salaries for three additional clerks for the duties on salt, malt, and leather, yet he kept no more clerks for all the duties than Mr. Ashmole for the Excise only; upon a representation of these facts to Sir Scroop How, the comptroller, he replied that the number of clerks was wholly "in 'his breast," so that the business was done; that their Lordships' allowance was given amongst the clerks, who did the business out of office hours, and it was but reasonable they should be paid rather than strangers should have it, and he hoped that an allowance would be made for two more till the business was done. They had examined the deputy comptroller as to what induced him to allow credit for sums for which there were not sufficient vouchers, upon which he insisted that he was only a comptroller upon the receipt of the revenue and not upon the issues; they conceived differently, and it might be of very ill consequence to have any other opinion entertained; they sought their Lordships' interposition, as there was no prospect of getting forward the great arrears of accounts. Dated 12 Sept. 1700.

Minuted :—"To Sir S. How. Take notice that he has not the number of clerks for w^{ch} the K. gives his allowance, and his clerks have not the allowances for their encouragement w^{ch} were made by Mr Ashmole. That by this means the publique service suffers, and my Lords shalbe obliged to represent, &c." 2 pages.

26. Report of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petition of the principal traders, &c., of the port of Penryn, setting forth that there had been a very ancient custom-house there, and that the officers always took entries of ships lying within the harbour of Falmouth till 1676, when a public quay was established at Falmouth, restricted to Truro and Penrin, being the ancient ports of Falmouth harbour, which caused great decay of trade in those towns; praying for relief; stating the means they had used for obtaining information, viz., they had obtained a plan of the harbour and perused a private Act of Parliament, obtained by Sir Peter Killigrew; expressing the opinion that if one custom-house had to be settled in the harbour of Falmouth it should be at the town of Falmouth; but they would not abridge the privilege enjoyed by Penrin and Truro of having several (i. e., separate) custom-houses. If their Lordships thought a new commission should issue for the better regulation of the limits of those ports they would not object, and then the harbour of Helford would be entitled to further accommodation. Dated 13 Sept. 1700.

27. Report of the same to the same, on the petition of the bailiffs, portmen, freemen, &c., of Ipswich, Suffolk, praying that the town might be put into the same state it was formerly, and might enjoy its ancient rights and privileges; stating that they (the Com^{rs}) had examined some gentlemen on behalf of the town of Ipswich, and Sir Thomas Davall on behalf of Harwich, &c., and that great caution was used in 1689 in establishing a custom-house at Harwich, not to prejudice the town of Ipswich; referring also to what was determined on in executing the commission for settling the collection. The increase of charge was only 50*l.* per ann., by making Harwich a port of collection, whatever inducements there were then (a time of war) to tolerate a trade by the packet boats would not henceforth exist; because in practice they could not conform to the rules of merchant ships. It would be for the service of the revenue if instructions were given to the governors of the post office that packet boats should not trade without the licence

Sept. 17. 29. Report of S. Travers, Surveyor-General, to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petition of William Yarnold and Robert Watson, together with a representation or address to the King from the inhabitants of the parishes and royal manors of East Greenwich, Deptford, and Sayes Court: finding that the petitioners had obtained leave from the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Romney, High Steward of those manors, for carrying on a design of bringing water (to be raised by an engine) from the river Ravensborne to supply those places; they had laid out 600*l.*, and it would cost many thousand pounds more. He thought it reasonable (as it was for a public good) that their Lordships should advise the granting a royal licence for 500 years, at a mark a year, in which grant the petitioners, their executors and assigns, might be empowered to raise water out of the river Ravensborne, and to lay pipes through the streets and wastes of the said manors and parishes (compounding first with the respective proprietors of any "severals" through which the water should be brought), and to erect conduits or receptacles for water in any convenient places there for the readier conveying the same to the use of the inhabitants. Sept. 19. 30. Representation of the Officers of the Ordnance to the Lords of the Treasury, reminding them that 18,976*l.* were further due to them on the head of sea service, 3,724*l.* only having been ordered them; in a late memorial they had shown that near 18,000*l.* must be the annual expense of the fleet, that salaries, &c., would amount to almost 20,000*l.* more, and that it was impossible to carry on the service with less than "5*s.* in 4*l.*"; they doubted not that they had so convinced their Lordships that no artifices of any office (though never so well insinuated) would prevail with them so as to take any part of the little designed for them by Parliament; praying for what was due to them. 34. Petition of Allin Garrard to the Lords Justices, stating that he had a long time petitioned the Com^{rs} of Excise, and could have no relief, and had petitioned the Lords of the Treasury, as one of the "security" of George Murray, late one of the collectors of the duty of Excise; upon which their Lordships had reported on 15 May then last past; he now denied his guilt as to facts imputed to him in that report. [See the Report of 15 May, Vol. LXVIII., No. 56.]

Amongst other things in his defence, he says that it was apparent he did not further Murray's escape, for they had confined him before Murray took shipping at Gravesend, and that Mr. Phillip Shales, brother-in-law to Mr. Lownds, was so zealous for Murray's escape, that he, with several other friends, went down to Gravesend to see him safely shipped.* His debt was said to be 3,454*l.* 12*s.* 5*d.* Murray's account was not then adjusted, and there was no notice taken of his effects extended in Norfolk, amounting to about 400*l.* To show his willingness to capture Murray he had offered a considerable gratuity for the same, and he had made an affidavit by means of which an extent was issued against Goodeve, the other

42. "The full and perfect answer" of Thomas Molyneux, Esq., controller of the Mint, to the several charges contained in the memorial, examinations, and depositions laid before the Lords of the Treasury (see Vol. LXX., No. 9, 23 July 1700), by the warden, master, and worker, and Charles Mason, Esq., one of the comptrollers of the Mint. He states that it is very unfortunate to have his most innocent words and actions misrepresented and wrested, and other persons' miscarriages laid to his charge upon untrue allegations, &c., by the malicious instigation and prosecution of the said Charles Mason, who was as far unqualified for his office as he had been negligent and careless in its execution; for he challenged him to make it appear that he could read or examine any one book in the office, especially the day book, or pot book, or that he ever spent three hours together in the discharge of his duty, since the office was conferred on him, unless it were to receive his salary, or to carry on this groundless and malicious prosecution.

He then goes on to prove the charges against him of receiving money to pass accounts, of obtaining a gold watch for his wife for the same purpose, &c., to be false, and sends for his justification, papers numbered 1 to 27, consisting of copies of depositions, affidavits, letters, examinations, accounts, &c.; there is also another paper, which, though not numbered, appears to belong to them, docquetted:—"Mr Molyneux's abatements upon the artificers' bills." Undated; but the examination into the charges was made before the Lords of the Treasury on 8 Oct. 1700, when this answer of Mr. Molyneux was read. A very full account of the inquiry is entered in the Minute Book, Vol. X., for that date and 9 Oct. This charge and a counter-charge were read to the King on 12 Nov. 1700, who took a little time to consider. See Minute Book, Vol. X., p. 148.

Nos. 12 and 13 are wanting to make the series complete.

Petition of Roger Cross and John Cross his son, to the Lords of the Treasury, complaining that William Martyn, Esq., deputy steward of the Earl of Bath, granted a tenement in the manor of Bradninch, Devon, to two children of John Moor before any fine was paid, upon which the Chancellor granted his warrant to the petitioners, and the steward granted the tenement to the petitioners; praying their Lordships to appoint some other person than Mr. Travers, who was away in Cambridgeshire, or than Mr. Wm. Taylor, against whom they had cause of complaint, to report thereon.

Accompanied by an abstract of the case between Cross and Moor.

By the Receiver-General's account, 175,169*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.* appeared due on these bonds, and only 67,669*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.* had as yet been delivered to the solicitor; the interest at 6*l.* per cent. would be more than 8,000*l.* Dated 11 Oct. 1700.

- Oct. 14. 49. Letter of the Earl of Bath to [? Mr. Lowndes], complaining that his accounts as ranger of St. James' Park remained unsettled. [Minuted:—"Send to Mr Ryley for his report."] He had received three letters from him [Mr. Lowndes ?] by order of their Lordships, the first concerning encroachments and abuses in the park, pallisadoes upon the wall, the suppression of alehouses and other public houses, and the shutting of a little door belonging to the lodge in the nursery opening into the high road. In answer to which, several large and double staircases of stone coming down from the wall into the said park, very inconvenient and prejudicial, were totally removed, but the pallisadoes upon the wall, and the little pales at the bottom of the wall, belonged to private persons, most of them of the greatest rank and quality, as would appear by an enclosed list, and were erected with royal permission in the former and present reigns, and all allowed and continued by the late Queen, whose orders the King commanded in all things, relating to St. James's Park, should be observed during her life, and after her death, in the same manner as when she was living, as appeared by the printed orders remaining in the Treasury. If any alteration were made in the park wall, it was for the Surveyor-General to attend to; the wall was in most places strong, and the pallisadoes were thought by her late Majesty to be convenient and ornamental. The door was taken away and walled up in obedience to the King, but he (the Earl) had a freehold right to the same. The alehouses were forbidden and suppressed, except the sutlers adjoining the courts of guard, under the command of the Earl of Rumney, colonel of the Guards; he begged to inform them of the trouble he had had in suppressing that notoriously scandalous alehouse over against the Decoy, by two outlandish undertenants of one Mr. Beaubisson, a Frenchman, keeper of the King's setting dogs, &c., against whom, not obeying the King's commands, he was forced to take out writs to prosecute, as they thought no military execution could be used in England without the civil magistrate, but they had submitted, being better advised.

The directions were observed in respect of additional building permitted the Lord Godolphin for his house in St. James's Park.

In regard to plate in his custody to be brought into the Jewel House, he was most unjustly accused, as he had never had any plate out of the Jewel House, except what was brought into the back stairs or bedchamber, for the King's proper use. [Minuted:—"Send Coll. Godfrey a copy of this pt to give an answer."]

He might, indeed, make a claim to a considerable quantity of plate, &c., due to him as groom of the stole upon the death of his royal master [Charles II.], which he never received, though it was solemnly promised.

He requested that their Lordships would please to order the stop on his pension, payable out of the post office, to be removed, as was done to others, as his was granted on valuable considerations, viz., the surrender of the office of groom of the stole, and first gentlemen of the bedchamber, and of two patents and a release of a debt of 20,000*l.*, as was known to the board and himself [Mr. Lowndes], who drew up the patents; there were other material proofs, viz. their Majesties' most gracious condescensions and royal promises upon the sacred word of a King and Queen for the performance thereof. He had undertaken to furnish the King and all his dominions with naval stores of all kinds, except flax and hemp, at 30 per cent. less than they were brought to London; besides from thence they might be called our own, whereas the present trade was foreign and precarious. 18. Letter of Lord Bellomont to the Lords of the Treasury, stating that he had received a letter from Mr. Champante, agent for the “four companies” in the King’s pay, announcing that he had lent Mr. Weaver, collector of that province, 425*l.*, who had drawn for that amount on him (Lord Bellomont). Mr. Champante had acted very freely with him in that, and it was a trouble and surprise to him, and to be safe for the future, he must throw up the agency or desire their Lordships to take good security from the agent, who should be presented to them, it ought to be 10,000*l.*, as the agent would have 7,000*l.* a year of the King’s money in his hands. He thought it best to leave the choice of a fit person to his friends. He sent copies of Mr. Weaver’s commission (marked A.), of his bill of exchange (B.), and his account (C.), in which he charges 200*l.* a year salary as collector, being 300*l.* for a year and a half, from 25 March 1699 ; the Council smiled at it, that he should pretend to a year and a half’s salary for taking his pastime in London, while another did the duty and received the full pay. About a year ago he had written to Mr. Weaver to come to his post ; but he took no notice of the letter. He wished that all persons entitled to salary in those provinces should only receive it from the time of entering upon their employment.

They had appointed Com^{rs} to examine and state the public accounts of that province, and the article in relation to Mr. Weaver would not pass without an order from their Lordships. The trade there and at Boston was under all the ill management they could imagine. It seemed extraordinary that Mr. Brenton and Mr. Weaver should be suffered to stay so long from their posts. Mr. Brenton had been two years in England. A third of the trade was directly against law. If their Lordships would not keep a strict hand over the collectors, the trade in England would suffer. A Governor could not do his own duty and the collectors’ too. He had laid before the Lords of the Council of Trade a state of the provinces. Above all he had observed upon the treachery and corruption of the last Governor, Col. Fletcher, in selling almost all the lands and woods to nine or ten mean persons. The King and all his dominions might be furnished plentifully with naval stores, &c. from thence ; but he had not an acre of land nor a tree left in the province. The Lords of the Council of Trade would no doubt make this abominable corruption appear to the King and the ministers, and expose the fraud of Col. Allen’s claim of the soil and woods of the whole province of New Hampshire and a great part of the province of Massachusetts Bay. They were of unspeakable value, and it was their Lordships' province to see that they were not embezzled. He spent 71*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.* (New England money) in his journey to Rhode Island and back to Boston, and 60*l.* (New England money) for apprehending James Gillam, a pirate, since executed in London; out of which sums 30 per cent. should be deducted to make it sterling: the Com^{rs} of accounts would not allow it there, and he prayed their Lordships to pay it to Sir John Stanley for his use.

Postscript.—A few years ago the excise of Albany, let to farm, yielded above 400*l.* a year; since Mr. Livingston had had the collection, it had sunk to 100*l.* a year; his salary was 50*l.*, in addition to which he obtained a commission in 1695 as secretary of the Indian affairs at 100*l.* a year. At the suggestion of the Council it was set to farm. The Com^{rs} of accounts had entered a caveat against Mr. Livingston's pretensions to 800*l.* due by the province.

Mr. Basse had had great good fortune in his trial on account of his (Lord Bellomont's) seizing the ship "Hester" at Perth Amboy, in East Jersey, in having recovered such damages of the King. The ship was sold by inch of candle, and there was no partiality shown by him, as most falsely told the world in a printed paper dispersed amongst the members of Parliament, nor did he get a shilling by it. The ship had but 28,000 pipe staves on board. The discourse with the merchants was that Basse had embezzled his brother-in-law, Mr. John Lofting's cargo, valued at 800*l.* &c.

A most violent storm had happened on the 29th of November, and drove all the vessels from their anchors, which delayed the ship that carried his (Lord Bellomont's) packets a week. He sent Col. de Peyster's affidavit to satisfy their Lordships of the many falsities about the ship "Hester." Col. de Peyster was a very honest upright man, and Basse a known profligate fellow, and remarkable for lying. Dated New York, 23 Nov. 1700.

19. Copy of report of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petition of several merchants of London, and the outports, who had imported wine, and were under prosecution for several ladings of wine imported from St. Sebastian and other ports of Spain, and prayed that all proceedings at law against them might stop, and that they might be admitted to compound in like manner as the owners of the 11 ships of wine were admitted to compound, in Trinity term last: stating that in a former report they had advised the acceptance of a composition of a third of the value of the 11 ships, to which their Lordships had agreed, and upon another memorial they had advised the same composition, as the merchants had proposed for themselves and their friends to desist from the irregular trade, and to detect abuses; to make the composition practicable they proposed that the collector and controller should certify how much was received, &c.; the law charges should be borne by the persons taking out licences to compound, out of which the persons who had detected this trade might be gratified ; the composition would amount to about 61,508*l*. The wine entered at the outports paid 3*l*. per tun less duty than that in London ; they expected the Spanish duty would abate about one-third of the 61,508*l*. The persons who had imported wine from St. Sebastian, &c., now supposed to have been French, should be prosecuted by way of devenerunt. Dated 23 Nov. 1700.

Also the petition of the several merchants referred to, with nine signatures ; and

The obligation of the said merchants to desist from an irregular import of wine.

In the Minute Book, Vol. X., p. 297, 20 June 1701, is :—" Wine merchants call'd in. 20. Petition of James Greenham to the King, showing that he had served the Crown about 33 years, and was deputy to William Legge, Esq., in the office of supervising the works in the several parks, but during the present reign was only concerned in St. James' Park, which was so ruined, that with other works it would cost about 4,000*l*. to do what was needful ; praying that Com^{rs} might be appointed to inspect the encroachments, &c., that Wm. Legge, Esq., might be one of the Com^{rs}, and that Wm. Silcock might be a messenger, as he had knowledge of the same ; in order to a resumption of the lands : further praying that he might be minuted for such a share of the premises for his services as their Lordships thought fit, together with the arrear of his salary since 1692, and for some disbursements due to him in the year 1688, amounting to about 500*l*.

They were to make, frame, and engrave the designs and effigies of the King's image on such sizes and forms as were to serve in all sorts of coins, gold or silver, together with all medals of all sorts, and metals, representing the King's and his dear consort's effigies, &c. 9 pages.

29. Report of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petition of Sir Owen Buckingham, showing that out of the great plenty of flax in Holland, the Dutch had usually prepared a coarse sort of dressed flax, called snowtings, which the English had bought and sent from Holland to the Canaries; but the last year the importations were greater into England than Holland, and for the encouragement of trade the petitioner caused about five tons of dressed flax to be prepared out of rough flax for the Canaries, and the Com^{rs} agreed that he should be entitled to the drawback: Mr. Humberstone, an officer "attending the Bench," had opposed the opinion of the "declared sense of all the Com^{rs}," and obstructed the petitioner in passing his "cocquet;" announcing to their Lordships that they thought it reasonable to permit the exportation, for that the dressing did not so alter the quality as to hinder the benefit of the drawback; they had heard Mr. Humberstone's objections, and were still of the same opinion. It encouraged the people in dressing the flax, and benefitted the navigation by carrying it to the Canaries, which trade the Dutch would otherwise have. Dated 2 Dec. 1700.

Also the said petition, and the answer of Matthew Humberston, usher of the Custom-house and deputy surveyor, which contains useful information, including a list of foreign goods that paid duty outwards on being manufactured.

30. Report of Mr. Philip Ryley to the Lords of the Treasury. The facts in the accompanying report of Mr. John Taylor in relation to expenses in St. James' Park were truly stated, but he was as much a stranger to the number of deer kept in the several years (viz. from 1693), as Mr. Taylor was: the prices of hay, &c. were fair, but in future the bills should be immediately exhibited. [The Earl of 1700,

Bath was then Chief Ranger and keeper of the Park.] Dated 2 Dec. 1700.

Accompanied by the account.

Mr. Taylor's report is minuted thus:—"Ref. to Mr. Ryly to examine & report and write from ye Board to E. 33. Letter from the Postmasters-General (R. Cotton and Tho. Frankland) to the Lords of the Treasury, in answer to one from Mr. Lowndes, respecting various particulars in their "bill of incidents" for the quarter ended at Michaelmas, informing them that they would take particular care that neither the candles nor the stationery should exceed what was necessary; but almost the whole duty was performed by candle light, and there was an extraordinary expense in that quarter of 62*l.* 3*s.* by printing labels, &c. for the cross-post, lately set up, between Exeter and Chester. The patent to the Court post obliged that officer to carry His Majesty's letters only between the Court or palace of His Majesty's residence and the first post office. When the King was at Newmarket or Windsor the Court post carried them no further than the post houses in the towns, and Hampton Court being no post town, he was obliged to bring them to Kingston, and from Kensington or Whitehall to the General Post Office. The King's and Treasurer's Remembrancer had always demanded the sums set down for entering the accounts of the office. It was usual for ships coming from abroad, and especially the colonies, to bring great numbers of letters, and the Act not compelling them to deliver them into the post office, it was always customary to allow the masters of vessels 1*d.* each letter, as an encouragement to deliver them into the office. Respecting the Gazettes, there were many postmasters who served without salary, or for less than they would otherwise do, in consideration of being allowed Gazettes by the office frank; and the postmasters for Ireland and abroad, with whom they were under treaty, had always been allowed them. They hoped this perquisite would be allowed. Dated 9 Dec. 1700.

1700.

In the Minute Book, Vol. X., p. 203, 7 Feb. 1700-1, is:—"To the Postm^{rs}. That my Lords having signed a dormt warr^t for 20th a day to the Court post, and observing that in ye bill of incidents His Mat^y is charged for the carr. of y^e Court letters; my Lords do direct them for the future to save that charge to the King by directing y^e Court post to performe his duty, and if His Mat^y be hereafter putt to any charge for carrying such letters so despatched as by ye nature of his office should be carryd by him, that the same be made good out of his sallary." 2½ pages.

Written on the back of the estimate.

40. Petition of William Dockwra, of London, merchant, to the Lords of the Treasury, showing that he was dispossessed of his penny post by the severity of the late reigns [i.e., in the reign of James II.], and that he had lost all other business to establish it; the House of Commons recommended his case to the King, whereupon he granted the petitioner a pension of 500*l.* a year for seven years, and after that for three years longer, which expired at Midsummer then last past; praying their Lordships to recommend him favourably for continuance of his pension.

Minuted :—" 17 Dec. 1700. Read to the King. The King is not willing to grant the pension; but will employ him in business when an employment doth fall that he is fitt for."

Accompanied by a printed copy of the votes of the House of Commons referred to in his petition.

Also a more detailed representation of his case, in which he says he was appointed controller of the penny post at Lady Day 1697, and held it for three years and a quarter, till by misrepresentation, grounded on malice and revenge, he was dismissed and Mr. Castleton put in. 4 pages.

- Dec. 17. 41. An abstract of such part of 6,459*l.* 16*s.* 7½*d.*, as on the 15th day of October 1700, was directed by the Lords of the Treasury to be paid to Rd. - Dec. 18. 42. Presentment of the Com^{rs} of Excise to the Lords of the Treasury, as to some justices of the peace in the county of Hants having removed several salt officers and an officer of the excise; stating their belief that it was of the utmost consequence that they might place their own officers as it seemed expedient; they also submitted Sir Robert Smith's letter on the same subject. Dated 18 Dec. 1700.

Report of the same to the same, stating that their Lordships had directed them to take the opinions of learned counsel upon certain queries as to the diminution of frauds in connection with the duties on salt and fish; they now send the said opinion: as their Lordships would perceive, it was not in their power, as the laws stood, to prevent the frauds, they desired leave to prepare some clauses to be enacted in Parliament for that purpose. Dated 18 Dec. 1700.

The opinions referred to.

- Dec. 18. 44. Report of the same to the same, on the petition of Eliz. Clarke, widow and relict of Thomas Clarke, late collector of Excise, in relation to several sums owing by her husband, reminding their Lordships that in several instances where losses had happened to collectors by failing of persons by whom they made their returns, (and the persons were men of supposed good circumstances at the time of receiving the money,) they had granted warrants for the discharge of such collectors; they saw nothing in the petitioner's case why the sums should not be allowed. [Minuted :—"Agreed put ye report."]

They could not allow a sum of 211*l.* 5*s.*, pretended to have been expended by the petitioner's husband in obtaining an extent against Wm. Martin to recover Martin's arrears. [Minuted :—"Disallowed."]

As to 225*l.* for poundage, &c. paid to sheriffs of Middlesex when her husband's money was taken by extent, they found her husband, who was collector of Worcester, was ordered to move to Hereford collection, and refused to comply; they ordered Mr. Thos. Driver to collect in his place, and Mr. Clark to pay his balance to Mr. Driver, which he also refused to do, and as they learnt that he had come to London with a great sum of money and Exchequer bills amounting to 3,000*l.*, and the then Com^{rs} of Excise fearing (as they had just cause), that he was going off, caused a seizure to be made, and the 225*l.* was the expense of the seizure. The present Com^{rs} state, as it might be true, that Clark came with the intent to pay the money and bills, they recommend the petitioner as an object of charity for allowance of the same. [Minuted :—"Allow this 225."]

Representation of several officers and clerks of the Tally Court in the Exchequer at Westminster, to the Lords of the Treasury, referring to the Acts relating to weights and measures of 14 Edw. I. and 12 Hen. VII., and to the Act made in the last session, entitled an Act for ascertaining the measures of beer and ale, by which every city, town, &c. was to be supplied with a standard quart and pint measure, and the chamberlains of the Exchequer should take no fee for the same, expressing the hope on the part of the deputy chamberlains and others, that their Lordships would allow them their ancient fees, and that they might certify the measures as they had done according to the form of the indenture, a copy of which follows.

[?About 1700.] 69. A paper headed—

"Extract of y^e letters & memorials of y^e Vaudois, settled in Germany, dated May last," showing that at their coming from Piedmont in 1698, they had but nine congregations, which were then increased to twenty; it also shows the names of the places at which they were settled, their numbers, that they lived almost by themselves in barracks and timber houses; they had everywhere begun a church, school, and vicarage; most of them were ploughmen and few tradesmen, except those amongst them who were French; their soil barren, no grass fields, therefore little cattle, they have *de friché a great deal of land. The ministers and schoolmasters who lived on the pension of the English Court, settled in 1689, were most necessitous, as their pension was wanting for three years past; but the pension from Holland of 40*l.* to the minister and schoolmaster, had always been punctually paid. Each colony chose its magistrates and was governed by the minister, the mayor (called syndic), the ancients, and syndics. They were pretty secure from the French ravages, being separated by woods, rivers, five days' journey, and an army. The charities had been distributed to them by an eminent merchant, pious and most affectionate, at Frankfort, Mr. Isaac Behagel, who could no longer be at the toil thereof, but who was to be requested to continue.

Without date, but some time after 1698.

* De friché; wild uncultivated land.

- Jan. 2. 3. Letter of Lord Bellomont to the Lords of the Treasury, stating that he and the Council objected to the 200*l.* a year salary to Mr. Weaver as collector of the province of New York, the revenue of the province being clogged with anticipations, and the public service in consequence faintly carried on; the debts of the government which could not be discharged were about 5,000*l.*; the King's house in the fort was ready to fall on his (the Governor's) head; the barracks out of repair, &c. Mr. Weaver arrived after 13 weeks' passage; it was time he recommended him (Mr. Weaver) "formerly" [formally] to their Lordships' favour, but a whole country could not be disobliged. He was entitled to a year and three-quarters salary before he was in his employment, which disgusted the people there, and might lead the province to refuse to settle a revenue which he brought the Assembly to agree to with difficulty last May twelve-month. He had not been able to take any course with Mr. Brookes's accounts of that province. The Com^{rs} of Accounts appointed by Act of Assembly pretended they should be able to charge Col. Fletcher, Mr. Brookes, and others with considerable sums. He hoped they would settle an allowance for the Judge and Attorney-General for that province, pursuant to the Order in Council; public business suffered extremely for want of them; nobody there understood the drawing of an Act of Assembly, and the Courts of Justice were managed at a strange rate. Unless their Lordships quickened the departure of the Judge and Attorney-General from England he must put off the meeting of the General Assembly and adjourn the Superior Court of the province. Presentment of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury, that they had written to Mr. Breton, the collector of Dover, to order Cornelius Smith, commander of the Dover sloop, to observe such directions for one month as he should receive from Mr. Baker for the King's service. They had lately received a letter from Dover, signed T. W., informing them of the smuggling between England and France. It was now 10 weeks since the vessel was under his orders; and they prayed that she might be ordered back to her station, as the Rye sloop, which was some security, was lately lost on the pier at Dover, so that the whole coast was then ungarded. They send for their Lordships' information (1) a certificate from the office of the Deputy Clerk of the Pells; (2) another from the Deputy Receiver-General, showing the sums paid into the Exchequer in Ireland between 3 Oct. 1692 and 8 Nov. 1699 on account of these quit rents; (3) Captain Richard Fitz Patrick's petition; and (4) the original report of the Auditor-General, dated 22 June last, whereby it appeared that the sum in question remained in the Treasury on account of those quit rents. 18. Report of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petitions of (1) Thomas Belamy and (2) Stephen Creagh and Michael Fallet, the former setting forth the clandestine and fraudulent trade carried on by a great number of merchants of London, viz., from Bourdeaux, in France, and St. Sebastian's, in Spain, to the port of London, and that at his own charge he sent over a person to Bourdeaux and St. Sebastian to make a perfect discovery thereof, who had exhibited informations against the offenders and brought to trial one of the informations against Michael Fallet and Stephen Creagh, and recovered for the King 480*l.*, on which trial three notorious frauds came out, (1) that French brandies were entered for Spanish; (2) that Creagh and Fallet entered them in their own names and paid English duties only, whereas they were the goods of an alien; and (3) that they entered them upon oath ad valorem 30*l.* per ton Spanish brandy, and they were afterwards sold for French brandy for upwards of 100*l.* per ton. As he apprehended great opposition and personal danger from the merchants (his solicitor being already publicly menaced), he sought protection and compensation for his zeal, and prayed for the King's part of the 480*l.* The latter petition sets forth the entry and payment of the duty on the said brandy and the recovery of the 480*l.* on an information, that the duty was inconsiderable and could not induce them to run the hazard of forfeiture, that they had paid upwards of 6,000*l.* for goods imported, &c.

The report details what had been done by the board to put a stop to the trade referred to, and that the merchants under prosecution made proposals to pay two-thirds of the appraised value, &c. Further, they saw no reason why the first petitioner, who was already entitled to one moiety of the forfeiture recovered against Creagh and Fallet, should be recompensed with the King's part of the forfeiture, &c. There was no pretence that the petitioners Creagh and Fallet should be gratified with the remission of the King's part of the forfeiture, since it was evident they incurred præmunire. Dated 22 Jan. 1700.

Minuted:—"Read 22 Jan^y 1700. My Lords agree with the report."

28. Report of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petition of Francis Grindal, master of the ship "Love's Increase," of Whitehaven, for liberty to discharge and dispose of 4,500 weight of bulk tobacco, then under seizure at Poolton, being imported from Maryland, stating that by Act 10 & 11 Will. III., all tobacco was prohibited to be imported from America, otherwise than in cask, chest, or case of 200 weight at least, under pain of forfeiture, and the tobacco in question having arrived three days after the prohibition, was seized; they would have inclined to admit the cargo to entry as the ship was delayed by advice of the Governor of Maryland on account of the seas being infested with pirates; but as the forfeitures were appropriated, and this was the first instance under this Act, they laid it before their Lordships, lest it should be drawn into a precedent. 29. Letter signed M. Kirke, addressed to the Right Hon. the Lord Godolphin; the torment of her creditors forced her to make her complaint. She had received nothing for a year and a quarter, though she had a patent for 500*l.* a year, but since the revolution, had been paid but at the rate of 250*l.*, and 660*l.* were due to her, this being her whole dependance, and bought for a valuable consideration.

On the dorse is a report on this case, showing what had been paid since 1688 to Mrs. Kirke. The consideration above referred to was supposed to be a patent from King Charles II. for 500*l.* per ann. to her after her husband's decease out of the honor of Grafton, but the honor was granted away without any saving for that pension. There is a memorandum that the King paid 100*l.* per ann. for the rent of the house in which Mrs. Kirke lived, to the Lady Mary Kirke. Dated 28 Jan. 1700-1.

In the Minute Book, Vol. X., p. 290, 11 June 1701, is a memorandum that letters were read and approved for payments to various persons, amongst whom:—"Lady Kirk, 100*l.*" 1½ pages.

Taylor, on the account of Mr. Richard Marshall, of moneys by him received and paid, as well for his journey and voyage to and from Barbary, as for horses by him bought there for the King's use, and the charges relating thereto. The 792*l.* 9*s.* 3¼*d.* supplied by Mr. Aylmer by order from Mr. Secretary Vernon agreed with what Mr. Aylmer had charged and had been repaid by the master of the horse to Mr. Aylmer. As to some articles in the account, he thought they should be referred to the master of the horse. Dated 29 Jan. 1700.

Jan. 31. 35. Letter from Col. Christopher Codrington ? to Mr. Lowndes, stating that he had obeyed their Lordships' commands upon his arrival there; the Governor and two of the council in each island mustered the several companies of Col. Foxe's regiment upon oath, and they were all complete to a man; there were a great number of supernumerary men of Col. Holt's regiment to fill up vacancies. He had mustered Col. Norton's independent company, and found about 25 miserable old decrepid fellows in rags, not able to stand under their arms; several had served nearly 30 years. Col. Norton had mustered several of his own servants, and other people who did no duty. He desired that their Lordships would send a copy of his (Col. Norton's) last muster rolls, and then he would give a more particular account of his frauds. He had reason to believe there was a vast difference between the rolls he sent home and the true state of his company. He had been forced to suspend Col. Norton from his government, for the many great crimes he had been guilty of. He had also taken the company from him and had given it to Col. Eldrington until he knew the King's pleasure, because, being commissary, he hoped he would fill it up out of Col. Foxe's regiment, and he had already persuaded several of the disbanded soldiers to list under him. If the company was to be kept up there was a necessity to make speedy provision for it, the 48. Order in Council to refer the petition of Mary Norridge to the Lords of the Treasury, to consider it as they should "see cause for her relief and support." Dated 20 Feb. 1700-1.

The petition referred to, which states that the petitioner was the daughter of Thomas Duncan, who was Lieut.-Col. of Horse to King Charles I., and exhausted an estate to the value of above 10,000*l*. in raising and furnishing a troop of horse, never receiving any pay during the whole war, and was also a great sufferer by wounds and imprisonment, that he was employed by the King in several dangerous messages of great consequence, whilst the King lay at York, to the frequent hazard of his life, especially in a desperate message when he ventured into Hull and scattered 24 declarations after Sir John Hotham had shut the gates against the King, and His Majesty, having a particular kindness for the petitioner's father, was loth to let him run such a desperate hazard of his life, but he being zealous to serve the King, disguised himself in the form and habit of an old blind decrepid woman, and was led by another person and so escaped suspicion. When he came back from his desperate undertaking, he met the King in the garden at York, and His Majesty embraced him with joy and gave a particular charge to the late Earl of Lindsey, that if he (the King) should die, he should see that her father was provided for, and if he lived he would see him rewarded himself; all which is certified by William, late Marquis of Newcastle, the late Earls of Lindsey and Mansfield, the then Richard, Lord Byron, Sir Philip Monckton, Sir Edward Turner, Sir John Goodrick, Sir Henry Kynes, Sir George Gore, and Sir Jordan Crossland. King Charles the Second had promised her father anything in his gift, as appeared by the King's grant and other certificates annexed; but he died unrequited, and she had reaped no benefit from the King's good intention, not having received a penny of bounty, her father having been dead near 20 years.

The petitioner was descended from the Duncans of Scotland by her father, and by her mother from "the Lord Viscount Loftis of Ely's family," who was Lord Chancellor of Ireland, High Justice of the kingdom and one of the Council. Their dwelling in England was formerly Middleham Castle in Yorkshire, but the petitioner by these losses was exposed in the world to get her livelihood. The Lord "Lisbon," who was killed in the King's service in Ireland (being the petitioner's relation), spoke to the Duke of Bolton to move the King for a yearly pension for her life on His Majesty's accession, but was advised to defer it until the wars were ended. The petitioner had a sister to be provided for out of what should be settled on her: praying the use of the 10,000*l.* above mentioned for the lives of herself and sister, and for bounty to discharge several debts that lay hard on her, and for their support until a pension should be settled.

Minuted:—"Read 7th March 1700. My Lords cannot advise the doing any thing upon this petition."

Accompanied by the certificates of the Marquis of Newcastle and the other persons named above. That by the Earl of Lindsey states, that Lieut.-Col. Thomas Duncan was farmer of the ferry boats of Barton-upon-Humber in 1642, and that he (the Earl) with many others under his command were in Barton when his (the Lieut.-Col.'s) boats and men, with many other passengers going over to Hessel, were carried prisoners to Hull, and that Col. Duncan was employed by the King's special command in several messages and services of great consequence and trust whilst His Majesty was at York, all which he faithfully performed at Hull, Boston, and elsewhere; he also gave His Majesty two men and horses for Edge Hill, which were delivered to Capt. Francis Bartue, and were in his troop at Nottingham, &c.

There is also the copy of a report on his services, dated 23 Dec. 1662, which, in addition to corroborating what is above stated, says, that presently after the death of Col. Geo. Heron, he raised and mustered 72 horsemen and arms under the command of Col. Francis Steward in the first war, and that he gave intelligence to Pomfret Castle, in Governor Morice's time, by the name of John Jones, and that he raised several men and horse at the second rising or war, and was there shot, wounded, imprisoned, and sold as a banished man. In the first war he rose to be Major at Bowden Hill fight in the North, and to be Lieut.-Colonel of horse to Col. Francis Vaughan after Col. Steward was dead; that he charged at York fight as Lieut.-Colonel, and afterwards engaged at Mawpas in Lancashire, where he was shot in the head, and for want of time to recruit as other colonels had, he was denied of his honour, purchased at so dear a rate, which he craved he might enjoy as confirmed to him by the Marquis of Newcastle; they also state that he had lost a considerable estate, &c.

There is further the copy of the minute of 28 Feb. 1664, viz., "that if the petr can find out any thing in His Ma^{ties} guift fit for the petr and not already disposed, His Ma^{tie} will therein remember the petr for his services & sufferings." 11 pages.

Memorial of the Com^{rs} of Excise to the Lords of the Treasury, stating that they had discoursed with Mr. Josiah Crosse, who had been recommended by their Lordships as a collector of Excise in the county of Nottingham, and they found that he had never been concerned in any branch of the revenue, and had no knowledge of the Excise laws, and their opinion was that it would prejudice the King's service to employ persons so unqualified.

Papers relating to the affairs of Susannah, widow of the late Sir William Parkins; consisting of an account of Sir William's estate; the case of the Lady Parkins in reference to Mr. Arundell's petition, drawn up by her son, 16 Dec. 1700; the petition of Francis Arundell, Esq.; two reports of Mr. Henry Baker;* and a duplicate account of the estate. Another report, signed by several persons, recommending the said Lady to their Lordships' charitable compassion; and her memorial, referring to a former petition, wherein she sought for the remainder of her late husband's estate, for the payment of his debts, and support of herself and children. In this memorial she seeks for the continuance of their bounty.

51. Report, signed J. Taylour, addressed to the Lords of the Treasury, on the bill of Captain Munden, transmitted to Mr. Secretary Vernon, that their Lordships might give directions for payment thereof; the bill amounted to 75*l.*, for money alleged to have been given to persons when he, Capt. Munden, was commanded to Tetuan with the King's advice and desire to the Emperor of Morocco to raise the siege of Ceuta; and when ordered there again to lengthen the truce; as also when commanded to Algiers to treat with the Dey about lengthening the time limited for giving passes. Acquittances were not produced, and it was not reasonable to expect them for expenses of that nature; but the Captain might be required to make oath, &c. He offered it to their Lordships whether bills of that kind for small expenses of State by the King's particular direction, signified by one of the principal secretaries, ought not to be defrayed by the secretaries out of secret service moneys, or, at least, that they should examine the bills and sign and allow them by the King's order. Dated 22 Feb. 1700.

52. Report of T. Done, Auditor of Imprests, to the Lords of the Treasury, as to what progress the Treasurers at War and the Navy had made in their accounts before him since the date of his last certificate of 24 Sept. last. Dated 23 Feb. 1700.

Another report of Francis Bythell, the deputy of Brook Bridges, Esq., Auditor [of Imprests], on the same subject. Dated 24 Feb. 1700.

The accounts to which they related were those of the Earl of Orford, late Treasurer of the Navy, the Earl of Ranelagh, Charles Fox, Esq., and Thomas Coningsby, paymaster of the Irish forces.

Accompanying these are also:—

(1.) An Order of the House of Commons for an account of the proceedings of the Treasury in relation to these accounts, to be laid before them.

(2.) A letter of Mr. Lowndes to the Auditors of Imprests to send by the next Monday morning the state of the treasurer's accounts.

53. Report of the Com^{rs} of Excise to the Lords of the Treasury, on a memorial of the Com^{rs} of Customs, sent to them by their Lordships, complaining that they (the Com^{rs} of Excise) had not rewarded certain officers according to the nature of their services. The report relates more particularly to a case of "running" salt near Fowey, and they advise that if the Com^{rs} of Customs had been mistaken in their proceedings they ought to pay the damages. Further, in the case of brandy, several quantities had been seized upon the coast of Kent and Sussex by the officers of the Customs, and condemned in the Exchequer, and the brandy sold without any duty of Excise. The Com^{rs} of Customs might as reasonably apply for a reward upon seizures of brandy wherein their officers were not successful, as in the case of the salt. As to the case of Matthew Paine, mentioned in the memorial, whenever any of their officers employed persons on board ships to prevent frauds, &c., they charged it in the bills of incidents, and when sworn to, the charge was allowed. They had received no account from their officers that Paine was put on board by them, and he was besides employed to take care of tobacco, &c. ; and they thought they ought to bear no share of the charge.

In the case of William Denne, mentioned in the memorial, they say that he transcribed an account of salt exported, and if they had thought the Com^{rs} of Customs expected it, they would have given him a gratuity ; but they had presumed he was "an officer in salary." Their Lordships would judge what occasion there was for a representation in that particular. Mr. Denne could not merit more than 40s. from their board. Dated 25 Feb. 1700. 2 pages.

The Lords of the Treasury were to give directions to the officers of the Excise to supply the Lords Lieutenant and Custodes Rotulorum with the requisite money. The Lords of the Treasury should also signify to the Com^{rs} of Customs to direct the officers of Customs to make exact lists of all seamen and seafaring men belonging to the ports, &c., and transmit them to the Lords of the Admiralty. The young man had made such good progress that he had deciphered one of the best English ciphers and a very good French one; but upon search there was no minute for the payment.

58. Memorial of the Victuallers of the Navy to the Lords of the Treasury. They daily expected an order to provide for 10,000 men for 13 months; beef and pork could not be procured but with ready money, and great quantities would be required; they were almost 17 months in arrear, &c. Lady Day was near, and Sir Tho. Draper would expect the Hartshorn Brewhouse to be delivered up to him if not agreed for before, and to be without it now there was likely to be a considerable action coming on, might be greatly prejudicial. Dated 27 Feb. 1700.

In regard to the Hartshorn Brewhouse, there is the following in the Minute Book, Vol. XI., p. 30, 29 July 1701:—"Lett the conveyances of the Hartshorne Brewhouse be executed, & ye 5,000^l be paid to M^r Hallet, y^e goldsmith, & the inter. since Xmas last in lieu of the rent." 1 page, much injured.

59. Report of S. Travers, Surveyor-General, to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petition of Joan Hollingshead, as to the omission of the lease of a bakehouse in Macclesfield. He found that soon after the Restoration the Lord Treasurer Southampton, by advice of the barons and other officers of the Exchequer, reserved on every lease a moiety of the improved value of the thing demised; which increase of rent was charged that the land revenue might bring in somewhat more yearly than the small old reserved rents to the 1700-1.

Crown, his Lordship apprehending that at that time, there would be so many suitors to His then Majesty (that had suffered with him) that the fines would be generally begged and given away. Afterwards (a moiety being found very burthensome) they were reduced to a third part, after that to a fourth; and in May 1669 an Order of Council was obtained on the petition of the tenants of the Duchy of Cornwall for discharging them quite, and accordingly most of them were bought off and extinguished, by the determination of the leases whereon they were reserved. The rent of 40s. reserved by way of increase on this bakehouse in 1661 was discharged on a new lease in 1672, and if their Lordships raised the like new rent again, he conceived their Lordships intended it as a general rule for setting increased rents on leases for the future.

The greatest number of leases were in the Duchy of Cornwall, the tenants whereof, by the former Acts of Parliament for enabling the Crown to make leases there, had "leave to purchase off such increased rents," and it might be presumed the bill then ordered to be brought into Parliament would be in the same words. Dated 27 Feb. 1700.

60. Petition of Francis Hollinshead to the Lords of the Treasury, showing that his father had faithfully served Kings Charles I. and Charles II. in the civil wars and those of the Low Country, that he was collector of hearth tax for Lancashire and receiver-general of 18 months' assessment in Staffordshire, and caused the petitioner to be named receiver-general of the same tax for Cheshire (he then being a minor and a student at Oxford, and his father managing the receipt), and by the sudden death of his father was defrauded by his deputies, so that there was due to the King near 4,000*l.*, which sum by sale of his lands was paid into the Exchequer. He was afterwards drawn in by his guardian, Edw. Hollinshead, to be surety for Ralph Hollinshead, receiver of an assessment in Cheshire, who was in arrear and in the Fleet for 2,000*l.* Edward Hollinshead, chiefly to get the petitioner discharged, offered to give 500*l.* for the discharge of the arrear, which offer was accepted; but their Lordships would not make the order absolute. He was informed that the arrear was entered on the Exchequer books as lost; but one Mr. Heath, a servant to Edw. Hollinshead, having a prejudice against the petitioner, had then begged the arrear. Praying stay of process during petitioner's life.

1. Report of the Com^{rs} of Alienation to the Lords of the Treasury, on a memorial of the judges and serjeants residing in Serjeants Inn, Fleet Street, desiring their Lordships' leave to have the keys to the garden belonging to the Alienation Office. They say that since the building the office and enclosing the garden with a brick wall, they had never heard of any key granted by the Lord Treasurer or Com^{rs} of the Treasury to any of the judges or serjeants residing in the inn. The door in the brick wall had been constantly bolted for 20 years. Charles Boyle, Esq., the receiver-general of compositions for alienations, desired them to represent the danger the King's money would be exposed to, by permitting frequent access to the office and to the window of that chamber, where the revenue was kept. In 1679 leave was given to the Hon. Heneage Finch, Esq., then Solicitor-General, to make a door out of his lodgings in the Temple into the Alienation Office garden, and another door adjoining Mr. Finch's had been made into the garden without leave. 4. Report of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petition of Richard Marriot, Edward Browne, gent., and others, praying for the renewal of the grant of the office of gauger of wines and other liquors in the several ports; stating that they had perused the statutes relating to gauging, which were very ancient, none being later than the reign of Hen. VIII., and the design of them was to prevent the subjects being defrauded by casks of less size than they ought to be; but the danger was then otherwise in relation to the revenue, as the casks were increased in size since the increase in duties, to the prejudice of the revenue, which was the point then in dispute, between the King and the wine merchants; there had been a controversy concerning the standard of wine measure, and there had been a trial, and by the opinion of the court a juror was withdrawn, and so the point was left undetermined, supposing the liquid and dry measure to be the same; but by searching the ancient records of the Exchequer, &c., they found that the liquid and dry measure were not the same, having experienced that a vessel containing so much wheat as the law allowed to be a wine gallon, viz., 8^{li} Troy weight, was equal to the gallon standard pott now kept in Guildhall, London, but a corn gallon contained 9^{li} Troy, the wine gallon pot was found to contain only 224 cubical inches, and not 231 as was generally supposed, and the gauge practiced accordingly: they thought it reasonable that the ancient laws concerning wine measures should be reviewed, to have the point, which was of great moment to the revenue, revived, and settled by Act of Parliament, and until that was done, it would not be an advantage to the Crown (except the reserved rent of 12*l. per ann.*, which was very inconsiderable), to grant the office as desired. 7. Copy of a letter from four of the Council of New York to Mr. Secretary Vernon, stating that his Excellency the Earl of Bellomont had died at 6 o'clock on the previous morning, and the Lieut.-Governor, Capt. Nanfan, being absent at Barbadoes, the administration had fallen on them; although under the greatest consternation by the blow, yet they sent some account of the public affairs. They were left in a most deplorable condition, for there was no money in the public treasury, nor any money for subsistence of the forces, the Earl not having left sufficient for the support of his family and payment of his funeral, having expended considerable sums for a ship and ship timber sent home to the Lords of the Admiralty, and several hundred pounds for masts for the navy, from his private purse, &c., otherwise he could not have given that specimen of his great design of saving the nation many thousand pounds per ann. in ship timber and masts. They should do their best until the Assembly met, which would be in a month. They prayed that Mr. Champante, agent for this province and for the forces, might be obliged to return with all speed the money received by him for subsistence, for they could not draw bills on him lest, being attorney to the Earl of Bellomont, he might not accept them, and they would be returned protested, but they desired he might be continued by their Lordships. The other three of the Council were 70 and 150 miles distant. They had made several minutes of Council, and published a proclamation to confirm all officers, and had used their best endeavours to support the forces at Albany; they should use their utmost endeavours to keep the province in peace, and hoped the succeeding chief Governor might have the same honourable principles and zeal for His Majesty's interest and the good of the inhabitants of this province with the late Earl (whose death they could never enough bewail), otherwise the great designs so successfully begun, to unite His Majesty's subjects, to supply the navy of England with masts, timber, &c., and to people the province, would entirely fall; they hoped he would intercede with His Majesty in relation to their next Governor; they had not an opportunity to write fully, nor to the Council of Trade, for the ship was gone, and they sent this after her by boat. 9. Letter signed "W. Popple," to William Lowndes, Esq., sending an extract from the Earl of Bellomont's letter to the [Board of Trade] of 28 November last, to be laid before the Lords of the Treasury, acquainting their Lordships that it was the opinion of the Board that Mr. Weaver's salary as collector of the province of New York during his stay in England ought not to be allowed in his account, "the rather because not only the Earl of Bellomont but my Lords of this Comm^{on} did also frequently admonish him to repair thither, and an example of such an allowance would be an encouragement to neglects of that kind;" their Lordships further offer their opinion, that the profits of his place be suspended till the King or the Earl of Bellomont be reimbursed the money he had taken up. 10. Memorial of the Victuallers of the Navy to the Lords of the Treasury; they had notice of an additional declaration for 10,000 more men for 13 months, which would require quantities of flesh to be provided forthwith, the season of the year being so far advanced; they would require at least 5,000*l.* weekly, as those species could only be bought for ready money; they had orders to victual immediately a considerable number of ships, the course was now 17 months in arrear; those who formerly dealt with the office would not give further credit, and extravagant demands were made by such as made any offer. They had already represented that they had received orders to send provisions for 61 soldiers for 13 months to Newfoundland, which would cost 699*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* Another order they had received for provisions for 41 soldiers more for 13 months; this they computed would cost 469*l.* 9*s.*; praying assignments of money to be made, &c. Proposal of Mr. Edward Corker to the Lords of the Treasury, to be employed in obtaining the arrears of the private estate in Ireland belonging to the late King James, when Duke of York; which were due before the estate was granted away (in May 1693), as the petitioner held a warrant for 800*l.* out of those arrears, and never received any of it.

United is a memorandum, that on perusal of the warrants for passing the estate, it did not appear there were any arrears before it was granted to Henry Guy; but in April 1694 there was a warrant for levying those arrears, and for 800*l.* to be paid to the petitioner, and the rest to Richard Topham, Esq., trustee of the Countess of Orkney.

They then go into the allegations of the searchers in detail, as to methods to be followed in the examination of goods, visitation of ships, &c., and finish with the opinion "that trade ought to be accommodated in every thing that may consist

March 18. 17. Report of the Com^{rs} or Officers of Excise, to the Lords of the Treasury, as to the "prejudices" the revenue of Excise received by the brewing and selling malt drink of excessive strength; finding that the brewing and selling drinks called stout, Derby and Nottingham ale, and such like liquors, which were all of extraordinary strength, was much increased throughout the kingdom, especially within the bills of mortality. They were of opinion that the use of such excessively strong drinks lessened the consumption of the quantity of strong drink, first because the persons who drank those extraordinarily strong drinks were not able to drink half that quantity of such drink as of common strong beer and ale, if none of those extraordinarily strong drinks were brewed; and second, the manufacturers, artificers, farmers, labourers, and travellers, who were the great consumers of exciseable beer and ale, generally measured their drinking by the money they could afford, and if they drank common beer or ale would drink a full Winchester quart for 2*d.* or 2½*d.*, whereas they drank no more than one pint of this extraordinarily strong 'drink, for the same or more money. So that out of 40*s.* expended in the ordinary strong drink the duty was 9*s.* 6*d.*, and out of the same money expended in stout the duty was but 4*s.* 9*d.*; third, many persons who brewed these sorts of drink mixed them in their cellars with small beer. They suggest two remedies, first, an assize on all beer and ale sold by retail, or second, a further duty on all beer and ale of extraordinary strength, and give various reasons against the first remedy, amongst them that it would amount to a prohibition as regards the Northern and Welsh counties, as they brewed no other than very strong beer. They recommend the second, viz., that 4s. 9d. a barrel should be laid on all beer and ale of above 20s. the barrel. Dated 18 March 1700. 2 pages.

[About March 18.] 18. Petition of Lieut. Hans Finley of Col. Buchan's late regiment, addressed to the Lords of the Treasury, showing that his name was given in to Mr. Cardonell "with others that were broke," to have half pay, but being absent in Ireland, there was no certificate that he was alive: praying to be inserted on the half pay list: with a corroborative certificate at the foot.

41. Memorial of Mr. Onslow and others, [officers of the Excise Office], to the Lords of the Treasury. The laying a further duty upon the better sort of drink had always been disrelished and exploded, but now a further duty of 4s. 9d. of every barrel of beer or ale of above 18s. value was proposed; they ask where would be the equality of it. Some said it would be of great benefit to the public. It would either (1) discourage the consumption of drink of extraordinary strength and advance the consumption of ordinary strong beer and ale, or else (2) the revenue would be advantaged. As to the first, the contrary was to be feared, for men who had accustomed their bodies to strong liquors, if debarred from their stout by means of a surcharge laid upon it, would make use of brandy and foreign spirits, or fall to brewing their own drink, a mischief lately experienced in the Excise on doubling the duties. And whereas it was suggested that people could not drink above half the quantity of stout or strong Nottingham or Derby ale that they did of common strong beer or ale, to the diminution of half the duty, it was noted that men who had vitiated their stomachs with the constant use of hot drinks were habitually feverish and thirsty, and though they could not drink so large a draught of what was excessively strong, nor so great a quantity of it at one time, as they could of what was milder, yet they oftener repeated their drinking, and were sooner dry again; and what the revenue lost by one it gained by the other. As to the other part, that the revenue would be advantaged by such duty proportionably to the loss it then sustained by the brewing and consumption of such extraordinary drink, it did not hitherto appear that the revenue sustained such a loss, but it was evident strong drink consumed a great quantity of malt, which improved the rents. They state various other difficulties and objections to the proposal. "Delivered to the Lords, April 8, 1701." 2 pages.

42. Report of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petition of John Ford, searcher of the port of Chichester, praying payment of his part of the information mentioned in the petition, and recompense for his extraordinary trouble about other informations; certifying that the informations and prosecutions were well attested, and several of their number had witnessed his diligent attendance in Parliament in prosecuting and convicting Signioret, D'Harse, and other merchants upon articles of impeachment, upon which they were fined 19,500*l.*, which was also attested by Sir Rowland Gwynn, chairman, and other gentlemen of that committee. He had made oath that he had expended upwards of 200*l.* in bringing over witnesses. They thought he deserved a good reward. 43. Presentment of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury, founded on letters from Col. Robert Quarry, Judge of the Admiralty in the province of Pennsylvania and the Jerseys, and on another paper containing his observations on the state of trade and the increase of piracy. They had given directions for removing the officer from Bridlington to Cohansy, as was proposed, and would send a circular to the officers in the plantations to examine the goods more strictly. They were of opinion that a small vessel for Delaware Bay would much prevent illegal trade. They had found Col. Quarry to be a gentleman of good understanding in the plantation affairs, of great industry and probity, and deserved encouragement, and they proposed that he should be made surveyor-general of the duties under the Act 25 Charles II., in those provinces. [The salary minuted:—"200^e p annu.""] Col. Quarry in some of his late letters complained of the difficulty he laboured under as to trial of pirates, many of whom had been seized, and their effects to a considerable value lodged in the hands of Governor Penn. Their (the Com^{rs}) letters had been opened before they came to their hands, and other letters entirely intercepted. The Com^{rs} referred to the letters sent to the Lords of the Council of Trade for the history of piracy, and offered it as their opinion (as they understood was represented to Mr. Randolph, the surveyor-general), that for the prevention of these and many other abuses all those governments should be vested in the Crown. Dated 8 April 1701.

Accompanied by one of the papers referred to, entitled:—"Some remarks on the trade of these parts, with a true acco^t of severall grand abuses in trade, and the proper remedies, humbly presented to the Commiss^{rs} of His Mat^{ty} Customs." Dated Philadelphia, 6 March

It contains information about the Madagascar trade, which was then thought the best to get money. It states that the manner of the voyage of the ships was this:—they carried a suitable cargo to the Madeiras, and there they took in a loading of wine and brandy, and from thence direct to Madagascar, where they met the pirates, and purchased on very easy terms their plunder, and then came back. The consumption of tobacco in Barbadoes was not so much, and yet the quantity shipped thither was almost ten times as much. He had found out the mystery, it was repacked and sent to England, Ireland, and the Dutch settlements. That province (Pennsylvania) grew very populous, and the people were very industrious, and had so improved the tillage, that bread, flour, and beer were drugs in the markets in the West Indies; as the trade was overdone, they had resolved to go on with planting tobacco in the three upper counties, where there was never any planted before; the land was very proper for it, and would produce very bright tobacco, and the number of the people would produce vast quantities; they had no other way of making returns to England, and so the place was very miserable. There were more than six times the goods imported than were exported, and thus the money was carried away. Four times the tobacco was made there that year that had been made before, and all of it engrossed by the Scotch, as almost all other trade there was. No one who designed to trade fairly could give the extravagant rates they did, being not less than double what was given in Maryland. They carried on a constant trade from Curacao: a vessel from thence, about a month before, belonging to Scotch merchants, with linen, &c. of the manufacture of Holland, ran the goods ashore at a place called "Bumbo-hooke." The business was then publicly known, and it was impossible to prevent it. But a small vessel of four guns and 15 or 20 brisk men would effectually answer the end. A most pernicious trade had been carried on between this bay and New York by several vessels for above 12 years, but more especially by one Graverard, a Dutchman, of New York; the manner was this:—He generally entered some small quantity of tobacco; when he had his despatches he took in his lading, which lay in some convenient place in the bay; when he came near Sandy-Hook he put ashore all the tobacco, except what he had a cocket for, at a small Dutch village. If any vessels were ready to sail for Surinam, Curacao, or Newfoundland, they touched there and took in the tobacco; and if no vessels were ready, the wood boats carried it up to York. He nearly took this man in the bay with six of the pirates on board his sloop, with their estates to carry them to the capes of Virginia. He sent expresses to the Governors of Virginia and Maryland, and Governor Blakiston seized him with his sloop and one of the pirates, the rest being on board ships for England; the sloop and lading, with all his ill-gotten goods from the pirates, were condemned, which had squeezed the rogue pretty well; but he was upon the old trade again. Were there a small vessel it would spoil his trade. Abundance of East India goods had been brought into all the governments on that main, more especially northward, by pirates and other illegal traders; they were generally repacked to pass for other goods. He was assured that no cask or bale had been pierced or searched for two years; abundance of cut and leaf tobacco had been pressed into flour and bread casks. He advised the officers should be assisted if necessary.

Their Honours were much misinformed by Mr. Randolph in placing a collector at Burlington in West Jersey. It was 20 miles from Philadelphia, and no vessels came there. An officer might do the King service at Cape May; he might have seized 20,000*l.* worth of East India goods that summer. There were other places, called Cohanzy and Salem, where many vessels traded from Boston. It might be of service to remove the officer.

There was great abuse in the revenue of 1*d.* per pound on tobacco shipped to the plantations; they pressed into a hogshead 1,000 weight, and entered it for 400 pounds weight, and paid duty for no more, and that was not the worst, for the merchants ordered a sort of cask called barrels to be made, in which they pressed 600 or 700 weight, and entered them for 200 weight, and frequently "cropp the chymes" of a hogshead and enter them for barrels, and pay but for 200 weight, when really there is 800 or 900 weight in the cask. The collectors are vying with one another who shall receive most of the money for the duty of tobacco; the merchants manage them by going to one, and telling him unless he will give him such an encouragement they will go and enter with the other who will accept the terms, and the collectors give the merchants certificates for so many hogsheads and barrels entered, without mentioning the weight; the officers in Barbadoes finding great casks entered but for 200 weight, and the largest at most but 400 weight, have forced them to a post entry. The King is cheated of two-thirds of his duty of all tobacco shipped off to Barbadoes, and the rest of the markets in America.

Vol. LXXIII.

Governor Penn was very zealous, and willing to do all things to promote the King's interest in his Government, and the writer proposed the insertion of several useful clauses in the new Act; amongst the rest there is one that all tobacco shipped shall be weighed and entered according to the weight, but it would be to no purpose unless put in execution, as he knew it would not be; the good management of this affair would be of great service in preventing such quantities of tobacco from going hence to Barbadoes.

The King was much abused in payment of the duty, for he lost on all the money received 30*l. per cent.*

If the management of this branch of the revenue were committed to him, viz., the 1*d. per pound* on the tobacco shipped to the plantations, the King should not be cheated of his duty, and the revenue would be much more considerable. 6 pages.

April 29. 61. Report of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petition of divers boymen belonging to several of the ports of the counties of Kent and Essex, suggesting that they are places belonging to and within the port of London, and complaining that they had to take out warrants and despatches from the Custom-house, for carrying inland provisions, such as corn, hops, &c., to London only, and that great fees were exacted for cockets, &c.; offering instead to pass by transire on reasonable fees. The substance of the answers of the Customs' officers for the counties of Kent and Essex was—

(For Sandwich), that the declaration in the book of rates which extended the port of London to the North Foreland, in the Isle of Thanet, was with a saving of the known rights of Sandwich and Ipswich, and by the old establishment of ports printed in the book of rates, Faversham, Milton, and Rochester were set out (as they had always been esteemed to be) members of the port of Sandwich. There are then details of various regulations for the transmission of corn by the hoys, &c. The officers concluded that their fees were settled in Parliament, and if taken from them, they should be made good to them at the King's charge.

The answer of the officers for Ipswich was, that they did not oblige the petitioners to take out any cocket or warrant for apples or cherries, nor for corn (except for a very large quantity) anything but a lett-pass, for which they took no more than according to the table of fees, viz., 3*s.* 6*d.* On these answers being communicated to the gentlemen who appeared on behalf of the petitioners, they replied—

1st. That a vote in Parliament was not sufficient to create fees; that nothing but an Act of Parliament or prescription could justify them, and that the officers had neither.

VOL. LXXIII.

2ndly. They carried only corn and such commodities as were not prohibited, &c.

3rdly. That the owners were willing to pay fees for transires, &c.

Upon all which the Com^{rs} of Customs observed that as to the establishment of fees, the Act of Tonnage said that the officers of the Customs should take such fees as were taken in the 4th of James I. until further settled by Parliament. A table of fees signed by the Speaker of the House of Commons in 1670 is the authority of Parliament under which the officers of Sandwich claimed, and as to the boundaries and distinction of the ports, they observed that the "saving" in the return of the commission for setting out and bounding the ports was very particular and express in these words, "Saveing the usuall and knowne rights, liberties, and priviledges to the ports of Sandwich & Ipswich, and either of them, and the knowne members thereof, and of the customers, comptrollers, searchers, and their deputies of and within the said ports of Sandwich and Ipswich," &c., and all the ports in Kent and Essex on this side the Foreland and the Nase had been always under the regulations of the coast trade, as distinct ports from London, and always so accounted, except as to importations from foreign parts. The words in the Act of Frauds, for regulating the coast trade, were general, and there was no mention of a transire in that regulation, which was only an expedient in practice for the ease and accommodation of trade. Upon the whole, for the ease of these ports on this side the Foreland and the Nase, for furnishing London with provisions only, they recommend the accommodation agreed on in 1692, between the officers of the Customs and the hoymen of Kent, to be renewed, or that the fees should be moderated by their Lordships' authority. Dated 29 April 1701.

7. A letter from Narcissus, Archbishop of Dublin [to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland]. He knew not whether Lord Galway had acquainted his Excellency with a design of erecting a library at Dublin for public use, which would be of great benefit, seeing the only library in Ireland (which was that of the college in Dublin) was inaccessible to all but the members, and that the booksellers' shops were furnished with none but a few modern English books, so that the clergy of that city and such as came to it about business, and especially the poor curates who had not money to buy, having no place to repair to where they might have the perusal of a collection of good books, he feared spent much of their time worse, than probably they would do, if such a provision were made for them. When he spoke of the College library as the only one in Ireland, he meant that was anything considerable, there being two others very small, one at Kilkenny, given by the late Bishop there, and another at Londonderry, erected by the present Bishop of that place.

The money for the structure was ready and the ground laid out, being part of the garden belonging to his (the Bishop's) house, and the model of the building was being drawn. Only one encouragement was wanting. There was a very learned gentleman, a refugee, one Mr. Bonhereau, who held great correspondence in foreign parts, every way qualified to be a library keeper. He had moreover a collection of books worth between 500*l.* and 600*l.* This gentleman, being ancient, would give his books (which were in a manner all his substance) to this library (when erected) and become library keeper himself, if he might have 200*l.* a year settled on him for life. Were the treasurership or chancellorship of their cathedral of St. Patrick void, he (the Bishop) would bestow it on him who was well qualified for such a dignity and would endeavour to make it a preferment for a library keeper for ever, there being no duty belonging thereto besides preaching three or four times in a year. But it being uncertain when either of these might become void, the only expedient that could be thought of was, that the King would graciously bestow a salary of 200*l. per ann.* on Mr. Bonhereau as library keeper, either during life or until otherwise provided for, which might be paid out of the first fruits, and then the work would go on. The library would at first opening be pretty well stocked with those books and such others as he (the Bishop) should then give (the remainder of his library, all but his Oriental manuscripts, being designed for it when he died); but if this could not be obtained, he feared the whole project would languish and come to nought. He was somewhat bold with his Excellency; but his concern was for the public good. Lord Galway was fully apprised of the matter, and the Archbishop of Canterbury had formerly been acquainted with it, and he (the Bishop) had again written to him. Dated 6 May 1701.

8. Letter of the Earl of Romney to the Lords of the Treasury, stating that the proposition that all the captains, officers, and gunners of the Cinque Ports, the garrisons of the kingdom, the warders of the Tower and the Isle of Wight, and a storekeeper at Portsmouth should be paid by the Office of Ordnance, had been fully considered by the principal officers. He enclosed their report and the reasons why they could not comply, and he entirely concurred with them. He could not justify any part of the money granted by Parliament being used for any other purpose than that for which it was given. Dated 7 May 1701.

The report referred to, in which they make this observation in respect to the employment of money contrary to the intent and meaning of Parliament: "How far such a method may subject your Lordship and this office to a just censure of having misapplied the publick money, and what ill consequences may attend it, will be very apparent to your Lordship, and will consequently lessen the good opinion the Parliament has hitherto had of your Lordship's prudent conduct." If there were no other objections they were not in a condition to comply with this additional charge.

Mr. Dalton proposed, as an equivalent for this rent, to accept of a grant to him and his heirs of a piece of building ground with tenements thereon on the south side of Pall Mall Street, and the reversion of a piece of ground on the east side of St. James's Street; leaving it to their Lordships to declare their approbation in order that the petitioners might proceed to obtain the Act of Parliament. and all fees and allowances. He had saved the King 500*l.* since he had acted, and had ended a cause in two months, which had been pending eight years. He hoped they did not suspect he should encourage frivolous suits, as he had practised hitherto with reputation in a private capacity, and should not now act otherwise when the eyes of all the town were on him; asking him to countenance his memorial that he might have the half-year's salary due in April last, and that he might have some money to put an end to those expensive causes that had long depended, and were to be tried and heard the next term. There was also a demand of 30*l.* per ann. for rent for three years and a half, due from His Majesty for Windsor mill and the engine which raised the water to the Castle. Dated 10 June 1701.

52. A letter from Mr. Wm. Blathwayt to Mr. Lowndes, enclosing another memorial relating to his office as Secretary at War, to be laid before the Lords of the Treasury. Dated 18 June 1701.

The memorial mentioned, which shows that in 1692 he was directed to attend the King in the Low Countries as Secretary of State, with an allowance of 2,300*l.* and 1,000*l.* additional for equipage, &c., which allowances were continued until the return of the army to England in 1697-8. In the next year, when attending the King into Holland, his salary was lessened to 1,000*l.*, which hardly defrayed his expenses. His attendance being required again under like circumstances, he prayed to be restored to his former allowances.

On application to the Earl of Ranelagh, his answer was that the poundage fell so short that there was nothing left of it, so that he was obliged to apply to His Majesty and their Lordships, "humbly conceiving that the execution of so painful an office as that of Secretary at Warr, may deserve so favourable a consideration that he may not want the payment of his said salary, whereof eighteen months are due." 11. Memorial of the Com^{rs} for licensing Hawkers, Pedlers, &c., to the Lords of the Treasury, offering their opinions as to the cause of the decrease of the duties on hawkers and pedlers :—

(1.) The justices had not levied the penalties.

(2.) They had given certificates to persons that they were makers or agents, which serve as a protection from the penalty for not having a licence.

(3.) No persons were employed to ride about the country to apprehend and prosecute traders without licence.

- July 9. 13. Report of the Officers of the Mint to the Lords of the Treasury, upon the proposal of Mr. Samuel Davis for coining small money in the plantations, expressing the opinion that the plantations in America were in great want of small money, but that the coinage of it should be as near as might be of the intrinsic value which the metal bore in the several plantations, and that the small money should be of coarse copper, such as the half-pence were coined of here, that there might be less temptation to counterfeit them, and that the pieces should have different marks on them to prevent their coming back into England. Dated 9 July 1701.
Minuted :—"1 Aug^t 1701. Desire the Com^{rs} of Trade to consider the whole."
Accompanied by the proposal, which contains the following remarks :—"The least piece of money comonly current in the islands and colonys upon the continent of America is seven pence halfe penny, viz^t, an 8th part of a piece of eight, which puts y^e inhabitants to y^e necessity of carrying sugar and tobacco upon their backs to barter for little common necessaries.
"This inconveniency cannot be remedied by sending such farthings and half pence as are used in England, because they will be picked up and sent back for returns, especially from the continent, where returns of goods often fall short, and 30*li. per cent.* will be got by sending back such farthings and half pence, the value of English money being so much more than the value of American money upon the continent.
"The proper remedy is to coin halfe pence and pence of copper, or a mixt metall, and of half the value [of which] the English small money is made, with several mottoes or devices for y^e severall colonys, and to order them to pass only in the respective colonys for which they shall be appointed, viz., one sort for all the colonys upon the continent, another sort for the island of Barbadoes, a 3^d sort for Jamaica, and a 4th sort for all the Leeward Islands." 2 pages.

40b. Letter of R. Yard to the Lords of the Treasury, dated 24 July 1701, inclosing the following petition, and recommending the petitioner as an object of compassion.

Petition of John Crowne, Esq., to the Lords Justices of England. The petitioner's father, William Crowne, Esq., purchased a large and fertile province in America, called Penobscot, lying between Nova Scotia and New England, and joining to both. He possessed it until the year 1668, when King Charles II. delivered up Nova Scotia and Penobscot to the French, whereupon he was turned out without compensation. His present Majesty has been all his reign in possession of the province. The petitioner had previously sought for redress and was referred to the Com^{rs} for trade and plantations, who admitted his claims. Their report was read before the King in the Privy Council, and Mr. Secretary Vernon ordered to take care of it, which was all that was done, and the petitioner was almost in want of bread; beseeching for something for present support, and for recommendation for further charity and bounty, "neither of which can be displeasing to His Majesty, a just and gracious Prince who, for all regal virtues, is greatly fam'd and belov'd by all."

42. Petition of Andrew Hamilton and Robert West to the Lords of the Treasury. The petitioners were assignees of the post in North America, and had petitioned the King to purchase their interest, or grant them a further term to enlarge and support the undertaking; their Lordships were then of opinion that the King should not purchase but grant a further number of years. The petitioners represent that the establishment of posts in all the plantations would be a great advantage to trade, and of equal security to those parts in cases of invasion or insurrection, but could not be settled without an Act of Parliament. They pray that [in the event of] an Act being obtained their Lordships would recommend them for a grant of 21 years to be added to their interest in the North American post, and for a grant of 1,000*l.* out of money proposed to be raised to settle the post through Maryland and Virginia.

44. Petition of Martin Perse, gent., to the King, showing that he went to Ireland in 1683, and was appointed surveyor of the Customs at Kinsale, and removed thence to Limerick, and was then preferred to Dungarvan, where he detected and prevented the conveyance of combed wool to France, that he continued there till the arrival of King James in Dublin, but was soon after dismissed for being a Protestant, and merely on that score was a great sufferer (amongst many others), as well by long imprisonment as losing his horses and most of his goods by the Irish; that he came to England to solicit for a Navy debt of 764*l.* 9*s.* 11*d.*, owing from the Crown to him, as heir and executor of John Chudleigh, who was purser of His Majesty's ships "Bonadventure" and "Reserve;" that in 1686-7 he came to London, and stayed there a year, about the same, and got five Navy bills for that debt. In 1690 he petitioned, and the Lords of the Admiralty reported that the debt was justly due; the petitioner was recalled to Dublin and appointed collector of the port, &c. of Tralee. The petitioner had a fit of sickness and a considerable loss out of the cash he had received, and was a debtor thereupon for 200*l.* 13*s.* 3*d.*, which he was unable to pay, and proposed to the Com^{rs} at Dublin to respite his payment until he had endeavoured to obtain his Navy debt, but the Com^{rs} appointed another collector. In May 1695 he came to London to obtain the Navy debt, and had waited about London for six years without any employment. Also there was an order to the Com^{rs} of the Navy, dated 6 Dec. 1700, to assign all such Navy bills to be paid out of certain tallies on a deficient fund, yet that order was not executed, nor did the Com^{rs} of the Navy give any encouragement as to when it would be performed; praying that further directions might be given that he might be discharged of the balance one way or other, and that he might be resettled in employment.

48. Petition of Richard Long, late commander of His Majesty's ship "Rupert," Prize, showing that he had already laid before their Lordships his account of disbursements about that ship, wherein he was creditor about 78*l.*, and although he had not brought a present treasure into the nation, yet if there should happen a war with Spain it would be proved that he had done the nation a great service, and some material things which were never known in England before were then lying before His Majesty which would not be convenient to be publicly known.

In this service the petitioner did not spare pains or "fear his life" in venturing among the several sorts of Indians. About 18 years before, when Dampier went with the privateers to the South Seas, the Darien Indians piloted them over, but soon after war broke out with the English, and many were killed since; but the petitioner had been the first to make peace with them, and with others in those parts of Darien. Their Lordships would consider what great service these Indians do His Majesty, in case of war, in piloting into the country and up rivers, all which are plainly "cald" out in the petitioner's journals, presented to their Lordships; praying the payment of the balance of 50*l.* due to him out of 200*l.*

The petitioners' father had lent Henry Earl of Suffolk about 4,000*l.*, which debt they had by all fair means endeavoured to obtain from the Earl. His answer had always been that when His Majesty reconveyed Audley End house and park to him, in satisfaction of a debt of 20,000*l.*, he would satisfy the petitioners. They were informed the King had signed a warrant for the re-conveyance, but the Earl had now changed his mind; praying that before the grant was passed the Earl might show cause why he should not satisfy the petitioners.

Letter from the Com^{rs} of Revenue in Ireland to the Lords of the Treasury, sending a general abstract of the accounts of the revenue for the year ended at Christmas 1700, &c.; reminding them of their letter of 15 April last, wherein they represented the case of undisposed lands in Kerry, and prayed they might have the power to reward Maurice Kennedy for the service performed by him; praying their Lordship's directions upon it. They had several proposals from other persons of the same nature. Dated 28 Aug. 1701.

The copy of the letter referred to, stating that after the rebellion in 1641 there were several parcels of land, more particularly in the county of Kerry, vested in the Crown by the rebellion, which were so coarse and of so little value that neither soldier nor adventurer thought it worth while to pass them in patent, not being worth the quit rent to be reserved on them, so that they had remained undisposed of, and have been possessed by persons having no right thereto, but the value of the land being lately much advanced, they had reason to believe considerable estates might be discovered if they could gratify the discoverers with a short lease at some under value. They then go on to advocate Maurice Kennedy's claim, and ask for instructions how they were to govern themselves as to granting leases of these lands.

Minuted:—"L^{re} to L^d. The Lords of the Treasury had read the letter signifying the King's pleasure for remitting to Lord Lexington the plate he received on account of the treaty of Ryswick in like manner as it was given to the Earls of Pembroke and Jersey, who were joint ambassadors and plenipotentiaries with his Lordship. Their Lordships were much concerned that they had not an opportunity of speaking to the King upon the matter, and desired to represent, that as they were always most ready to obey the King's commands, so they thought it would not consist with the duty of their office if they did not observe that the plate of which the Earls of Pembroke and Jersey were discharged was given to them after each of them had actually performed two embassies; whereas Lord Lexington was not at the treaty of Ryswick, and also that his Lordship had already been discharged of 3,167 ounces of plate he received out of the jewel house when he was formerly appointed ambassador to Spain, although he never went on that embassy. 31. Presentment by the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury. The near approach of the time for receiving the prohibited East India goods into warehouses had rendered it necessary to look out fit persons who could give security to discharge that trust, and they recommend (1) Benjamin Woodnoth (who approved himself very well as Controller of the Mint at Bristol) to be warehouse keeper for the goods of the old East India Company, to be secured at St. Hellen's and Leadenhall, (2) Ambrose Moor (bred a merchant) to be warehouse keeper of the goods for the new company at the Steel yard, and (3) William Clough, formerly an East India factor, to be warehouse keeper at the "Out-Roper's office" in the Exchange, being the place proposed by the principal dealers in East India goods for receiving goods, &c. They further offer several names for acceptance to keep a control account upon the warehouse keepers. Dated 23 Sept. 1701.

32. Report of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury on the petition of Henry Fern, Esq., Receiver-General of Customs, praying for an allowance for the maintenance of his extraordinary clerks; they thought that less than 240*l.* a year in addition would not maintain a competent number of clerks. They ask that allowances for management might be construed in their own favour. When the payments into the Exchequer were short of 600,000*l.* a year the Com^{rs} had 2,000*l.* and afterwards 1,200*l.* a year, and now the net revenue was upwards of 1,600,000*l.*, their salary was but 1,000*l.* Dated 23 Sept. 1701.

Minuted :—"Agreed."

33. Report of Mr. William Vanburgh to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petition of the yeomen of the guard. The bills of their services for five years ending at Christmas 1698 for attendance on the King at Kensington, Hampton Court, Windsor, Newmarket, and Gravesend amounted to 2,556*l.* 13*s.* A warrant only for 604*l.* 10*s.* was signed by the Lord Chamberlain. The petitioners craved allowance by bills for their times of waiting at these places; their salaries were formerly 39*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.*, and in the time of King Charles II. were reduced to 30*l.* and the yeomen hangers from 30*l.* to 10*l.*, the "robgoers" and "bedgoers" from 20*l.* to 10*l.*, and allowance for waitings had been since made to them. They represent that their attendance at a distance from Whitehall was an excessive charge not to be borne out of their present salaries, and by reason of the King's absence for considerable spaces of time, they lost the advantage of the table allowed them which they formerly had the whole year at Whitehall. Dated 23 Sept. 1701.

35. Report of S. Travers, Surveyor-General, to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petition of John Kendal, Esq. An Exchequer lease for 31 years was passed the 20th of May 1698 to Robert Rouse and others of all mines of lead or other metals to be found and wrought in lands belonging to the King in the mountains of Cavencow and Moneth-Poken, in the parish of Llanesteed near Dolgelly, in the county of Merioneth, parcel of the manor of Penlyne within the north part of the principality of Wales, reserving rent of 6*s*. 8*d*. per ann., and one-eighth of the annual value; submitting to their Lordships the petitioner's request for a grant of the eighth part for the remainder of the term, increasing the rent to 6*l*. 13*s*. 4*d*. Their Lordships' reference of 12 April 1699 on the petition of John Kempe, gent., who prayed for the said eighth part and the inheritance of those mines, lay still by him (the Surveyor-General). 36. Memorial of Mr. Isaac Newton to the Lords of the Treasury. By the late edicts of the French King for raising the moneys in France, the proportion of the value of gold to that of silver being altered, he gave their Lordships notice thereof. By the last of these edicts, the Lewis d'or passed for 14 livres and the ecus or French crown for three livres and 16 sols. At which rate the Lewis d'or was worth 16*s*. 7*d*. sterling, supposing the ecus worth 4*s*. 6*d*. as it was reckoned in the course of Exchange, and as he found it by some assays. The proportion therefore between gold and silver had become the same in France as it had been in Holland for some years; for at Amsterdam the Lewis d'or passed for nine guilders and nine or ten stivers, which in our money amounted to 16*s*. 7*d*., and it had passed at that rate for the last five or six years. At the same rate a guinea of due weight and alloy was worth 1*l*. 0*s*. 11*d*.

VOL. LXXVI.

In Spain gold was reckoned (in stating accounts) worth 16 times its weight of silver of the same alloy, at which rate a guinea of due weight and alloy, was worth 1*l.* 2*s.* 1*d.*; but the Spaniards made their payments in gold, and would not pay in silver without an abatement. This abatement was not certain, but rose and fell accordingly as Spain was supplied with gold or silver from the Indies. Last winter it was about five per cent.

The state of the money in France being unsettled, whether it might afford a sufficient argument for altering the proportion of the value of gold and silver moneys in England was submitted to their Lordships. Dated 28 Sept. 1701.

Oct. 2. 43. Presentment of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury, about the size of codfish, ling, and hake, for which a drawback or allowance is to be made. 50*s*. a hundred was directed to be paid on the exportation of codfish, ling, or hake, without distinguishing the size, and that was double the value of the greater part of them when cured. They were informed that every merchantable fish should be 22 inches long, but in this season scarcely one in ten would measure 22 inches. By a Statute of 22 Edw. IV., entitled "The contents of vessels of salmons, herrings, & eels, and how fish should be packed," every countable fish, commonly called tale fish, was directed to contain in length, from the bone in the fin to the third joint in the tail, 26 inches. Asking their Lordships' directions as to the allowance of the 50*s*. upon exportation. Dated 18 Sept. 1701; but on the dorse, 23 Sept. 1701. With the opinion of Sir Edward Northey thereon. Oct. 7. 45. Report of the Com^{rs} of Excise to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petition of the Company of the Royal Fishery, as to frauds by drawbacks upon salt obtained by fishermen at North and South Shields, and other places in the North of England, which salt was used for curing fish taken in the North Seas, and never exported as pretended. They could not conceive that the duties on salt were any damage to the fishing trade, but a great advantage. As to the practice of taking in salt in Scotland to cure fish, and afterwards bringing it into England, they were of opinion that it was a great prejudice to the duties, and they hoped their Lordships would assist them in Parliament to prevent it. They were of opinion that the bonds mentioned in the petition ought to be put in suit, unless the parties bound would pay the money. Dated 7 Oct. 1701.

Report of the Agents for Taxes to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petition of Richard Hawson, gent., who claimed to be the discoverer of a debt of 6,700*l.* concealed out of the late Lord Preston's estate, of which they show that very little then remained due. As to the second paragraph, that he could discover several other debts out of the land revenues of the Crown, they must have recourse to divers accounts. As to the third, about 700*l.* might be recovered of what was raised in Yorkshire by the lords and gentlemen assembled at the Revolution. They had no knowledge as to his employment or discharge as a receiver of land revenues. They recommend their Lordships to give him encouragement. Dated 10 Oct. 1701.

They were informed that the post renters evade paying the money under various pretences. The Post Office at Edinburgh was to be let to farm about November next. They had recommended that the post renters of Scotland should be obliged to pay at Berwick for English and foreign "post" for all such letters as should be sent from England to Scotland, as also for the secretary's packets, or that they might appoint a person at Edinburgh to give security in London to be accountable to the office for the "port" of all letters passing between London and Edinburgh. Unless one of these methods was adopted, they were of opinion that the post of the letters would not be answered, for the post renters had from time to time run into arrear, and dealt very unfriendly with them. 50. Presentment of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury. Their Lordships had directed them to press the Old East India Company for their debt, and they had sent frequent messages to them for that purpose, but their payments were not in proportion to their debt. As to the 5 per cent. demanded by the New East India Company from the Old Company on goods imported in the ship "Tavistock," they did not think themselves subject to that duty, and the Com^{rs} had taken the opinion of the King's Council thereon, as well as on the question whether the Old Company were still entitled to the privilege of two six months time for payment of their custom. Dated 21 Oct. 1701.

52. Presentment of the Com^{rs} of Excise to the Lords of the Treasury, recommending that the Com^{rs} of Customs should cease to proceed in a cause relating to some brandy sold to Mr. Paine, rather than a gap should be opened for all the ill consequences that must unavoidably follow if the adjudications, so long practised and often confirmed, should by the Barons happen to be adjudged illegal. Also the opinion of Sir Thomas Trevor upon the "brandy seized case."

In the Minute Book, Vol. XI., p. 52, 21 Oct. 1701, is the following minute on this subject:—"The Com^{rs} of Excise cald in. Mr Attorney thinks officers of Excise cannot go aboard ships. They can attend to see brandys d^d, but that is on shore. The Com^{rs} of Excise have no power to seise in their comission, but it is in the King's power to enable them to seise, & then the first seizer will have it, but the prosecution must be in the Exchequer by a jury and not by ye Com^{rs} of Excise or 2 justices. Mr Solicitor saies none can seise but by an Act of Parlt or by authority from ye K. or your L^{or}s."

And again at p. 56, 28 Oct. 1701, is:—"Com^{rs} Customes & Com^{rs} Excise come in. Mr Attorney & Mr Soll^r Gen^l come in. The business relating to seizures of brandy by Com^{rs} Excise again considered. Mr Attorney Gen^l says, since his last attendance on my Lords, he has read over the Acts relating to y^e Excise, but finds nothing therein to alter his opinion from what it was, to wit, that the Com^{rs} of Excise have no power by their comission to seise, but the prosecution must be in y^e Excheq^r by a jury, and not by y^e Com^{rs} of Excise or 2 justices of the peace. Mr Sollicitor says the Com^{rs} may seise where there is a person that claims the goods, but where no proprietor or owner can be found, the prosecution must be in the Excheq^r. Mr Attorney is of the same opinion. As to the seizure of Pain's brandys, my Lords order that the proceedings for the same in the Exchequer do cease, and accordingly give verball directions therein to Mr Baker who is concerned in that matter, who promises to take care therein." 6 pages.

60. Letter of the Countess of Dorchester [Catherine Sedley] to the Lords [of the Treasury]. She gathered from them that after having solicited for ten years upon a promise, it came to be a question if it were a promise, she did not see how the present King and late Queen could refuse to allow a maintenance for a daughter of King James, especially a lady unmarried, whose portion was so given as not to be out of the power of the Crown till she was 18. She had spoken of this matter often enough to the King not to mistake him "noe more than it was possible for him to be insensible of the obligation lay upon him not to leave King James' daughter either to the charity of the parish or to be a burthen to her mother's fortune." What she asked was no more than had been given. Mrs. Craufts had as much allowed for the maintenance of the Lady Mary Tudor, and afterwards it was allowed on the same score to the "Countis of Marschall," both by King Charles and King James, and duly paid. Sir Stephen Fox and all in the Treasury knew how those matters went; it was not the continuance of a pension, but the arrear of what was promised that she solicited. She maintained her daughter suitable to what she was told would be allowed; the arrear was above 7,000*l.*; the disappointment of it would ruin her family, and she dare hope the King would not use her so cruelly, if only for the sake of Lord Portmore, who the King knew had not had opportunities of enriching himself; praying their Lordships to propose some way to His Majesty for her payment.

Minuted:—"Kensington, 14th Jan. 1701-2. Nothing is ordered."

In the Minute Book, Vol. XI., p. 63, 12 Nov. 1701, is:—"Countess of Dorchester. She challenges a promise the King knows nothing of." This is probably the date of the document.

The following minute is also in the Minute Book, Vol. XI., p. 212, 8 July 1702, and was made on a later application from her:—

"Countess of Dorchester prays payment of the arrear due to her on 1,600^{li} p ann. bounty, promised her by the late King & Queene for the maintenance of her daughter, the Lady Anglesey, before her marriage, being as she alledges upwards of 6,600*l.*, and that the arrears of the quit rents contained in the grant of 3,500^{li} p ann. in Ireland may be collected and paid to her assignees, and she allowed for such of them as are desperate, according to her grant in that behalfe.

Her Maty is not in circumstances to take consideration of arrears of this kind."

61. Report of the Officers of Ordnance to the Lords of the Treasury, on the petition of Sir Polycarpus Wharton, who stood indebted to their office 7,943*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.*; they could not form a judgment of the loss of the petitioner in taking the lease of the mills referred to, but he had 2,000*l.* given him for his losses. They thought it reasonable if the accounts showed that in 1681 4,000*l.* were due to him, that he should have some consideration, nor could they object to allow the balance due to the petitioner to go towards paying the debt due to their office, though they hoped it would be made good to them. Dated 13 Nov. 1701.

His petition showing that he was charged by the Officers of Ordnance with an arrear of 8,573*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.*, occasioned by his loss in taking the powder works at Chilworth for the service of the Crown for 21 years, which works were not employed a sixth part of the time. His losses amounted to 24,000*l.* He had to pay 1,922*l.* 8*s.* 6½*d.* and 2,500*l.*; not having a penny of the King's money in hand, out of which those sums ought to have been paid; but on the contrary 4,000*l.* were due to him on his father's, Sir Geo. The petitioner had re-seized the brandy, tried the question, and obtained a verdict; but was prevented from reaping the benefit; praying to be heard before their Lordships or to be left to try it at law with the excise officers. The Attorney-General was of opinion that the taking it out of the excise officers' hands by the officers of Customs was lawful, as the officers of Excise were not qualified to go on board ships to seize. But as the seizures were made by excise officers they thought they deserved the encouragement, and that the brandy should be brought to London to be sold, as they were informed it was double brandy and worth 12*s.* or 14*s.* a gallon. brandy at Yarmouth and Ramsgate. The Com^{rs} of Customs agreed with the Com^{rs} of Excise, that the brandy should be brought to London when condemned and sold by public sale; that so the King might have his moiety [minuted :—"Orderd"]; but whether the officers of Excise, who had gone beyond their proper duty (according to the opinion of the Attorney-General, in seizing the goods) should have any benefit of the other moiety, would depend whether the seizure were by collusion or not. If upon trial the officers of Excise were acquitted of collusion they objected not to their being recompensed.

They also reminded their Lordships of their presentment of 28 Jan. last, to which the Com^{rs} of Excise had replied, but the reply was not sent to them; nor had they been heard by the Board. The petitioner obtained from the Council of New York a certificate of his behaviour, and particularly that all payments during his government were made by warrants passed in Council, &c. Nevertheless, the Earl of Bellomont receiving information of his mismanagement in the revenue, obliged him to procure security in 10,000*l.* to be given by divers of the principal traders in New York, to answer for what public money might have been converted to his own use. Mr. Chidley Brook, collector and receiver of New York, having transmitted his accounts of the public revenue quarterly to 8 June 1698, when he was suspended by the Earl of Bellomont, he (Mr. Povey) examined them, and had laid before their Lordships such objections as he could then make; which objections and accounts were sent back to New York to be re-examined, and were then depending there. The petitioner was accountable for the advantage accruing to the King of 30 per cent. amounting to about 3,905*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.* made by the remittance to New York of money received from the Paymaster-General of the forces, upon account of the pay of the companies at New York. Suggesting that Lord Cornbury, the then Governor, should have the accounts examined in Council for a final determination, and return such objections as should be made, as well as his opinion; after which their Lordships should give such directions as they saw fit. 40. Report of Sir Edw. Northey, Attorney-General, and S. Travers, Surveyor-General, on the petition of the Honourable Dame Margaret Owen and Edward Ingleton, gent., concerning a discovery of certain rents and arrears of rent alleged to be concealed from the Crown, and praying that they might be empowered to prosecute the King's title to them to the King's use, with an allowance of one-third to their own use of what was recovered. King Charles I. granted to Sir Robert Killigrew, Sir John Heydon, and George Kirke, all the lands, marshes, and fen grounds in Norfolk and Lincoln, lying in or near the parishes, &c. called Cross Keys, Clench, Wharton, and Walton Dam, Wyberton, Rode, Freeston, Richond Fee, and Fishstaffe, and also in the several places called East Fen, West Fen, and North Fen, and all lands overflown in the co. of Lincoln, pertaining to the honor of Bullingbrook, parcel of the Duchy of Lancaster, or any other his then Majesty's manors lying on the north side of the River Gleane, towards Boston, and from thence towards Wainfleet; to hold to them and their heirs, at the yearly rent of 4*d.* per acre, for such lands as should be drained or inned, after allotments and allowances had been made to persons having right of common, &c.; the grantees were bound, within three months after the lands were drained, to give notice to the auditors of the revenues under penalty of 40*s.*

In Michaelmas term, 9 Charles I., an information was exhibited in the Duchy Chamber of Lancaster against Sir Walter Norton, bart., and many others claiming common rights in great part of the lands named, particularly in East Fen, West Fen, and North Fen, whereby and by other proceedings it appeared that allotments of the lands in the last-mentioned Fens were made by agreement between the parties, and after such division the patentees of the King's part subdivided the same according to their respective interests. Several new grants were also made of the lands so subdivided, and there was a grant of certain lands called Sutton Marsh, whereof part belonged to the honor of Bullingbrook, and the rest was in the survey of the Court of Exchequer; and for the parts within the Duchy 100*l.* per ann. were reserved, and 200*l.* for what was in the survey of the Exchequer; and from the year 1675 the rents to the Duchy had not been accounted for, nor were the rents to the Crown ever paid, although great part of the lands were free from inundation, and were firm dry land, as appeared by an affidavit produced. The petitioners affirmed that they could make many discoveries of this nature. King Charles II. had granted to Thomas Windham, Esq., all sums due to His Majesty, in right of his Duchy of Lancaster in arrear "super ipsum or remanet" upon any of his particular receivers, &c., or from his tenants, on accounts declared for the Duchy revenue, from the Restoration to Michaelmas in his 34th year. He also granted all moneys concealed from the King, to be held, subject to a proviso that if the arrears were beyond 3,000*l.*, he should answer for the overplus; they were informed that the 3,000*l.* had been satisfied. They were of opinion that the discoveries proposed were probable, and that the petitioners deserved encouragement. At the foot are the following suggestions:—

"I conceive these allowances may be sufficient; but in case it be objected that they are too small for France, Vienna, and Holland, I humbly submit whether it may not be more advisable to employ in those courts persons who have some other employment rather than make a 'president' of increasing the allowances."

"Algiers & Tripoli are put down at their old settled allowances, but it being brought into a custome to make presents to the Turkish officers at their grand festivals, I humbly conceive some consideration ought to be had for the same, and believe 200*l.* a year for Algiers and 150*l.* a year for Tripoli will be sufficient.

"If the envoy in Portugal be made consul, some of his allowance may be saved.

"The allowance at Brussels may cease on the settlement of those provinces.

"If a resident shall be thought sufficient at Berlin, 1,000*l.* a year may be saved there. The like in some other courts."

There is nothing to show whose proposal it is. 1 page.

6. Petition of Thomas Baston to the King, showing that his brother John Baston raised and maintained a company of foot in the late rebellion in Ireland, which so incensed the Irish papists, that they burnt eleven houses and plundered and totally ruined his estate; that hoping to retrieve his fortune he built a small vessel called the "Whitehall Yacht," which he put in the King's service in the late war, and this was taken by a French privateer, by which he was so reduced that for a small subsistence he served her late Majesty as a clerk, under Mons. D'Allonne, her secretary, when he did several things for Her Majesty's closet in writing and drawing with a pen, which gave Her Majesty great satisfaction, but after her decease he had no care taken of him as her other servants had. That by the King's order, through Major-Gen. Trelawny, he made a draught of the lighthouse on the Eddystone, near Plymouth, which the King then had at Kensington, and afterwards, by his express orders, a second draught of the same, much larger, and according to the new alterations, which were then made in that lighthouse, together with the draughts of several of the King's ships of war, which after much pains and six months labour, he performed to general satisfaction, and delivered to the King at Hampton Court three days before

The disbursements for clothing were unlikely to be paid except Mr. Champante, agent to the Four Companies, were authorised to receive the pay and off-reckonings. - Jan. 10. 13. Report of the Officers of Works to the Lords of the Treasury, upon the case of Mr. Charles Atherton, serjeant plumber. It required more time than ordinary to "retrospect" the books some 23 years back. They had adjusted his debts unpaid, chargeable in their office, amounting to 1,464*l.* 12*s.* 3*d.*; they also gave an account of what was not chargeable in their office. The reason he was not paid in their office might be that about the year 1692 every artificer or tradesman belonging to His Majesty's works that would advance double his debts in money by way of loan into the Exchequer, had in lieu thereof tallies struck for the same and his debts included, which cleared most of the old debts in the office; whatever might be the reason, they found it unpaid in the books and it could not be paid without their Lordships' particular direction. 16. Presentment of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury. In December 1699 they had an intimation that French wines were imported from St. Sebastians and neighbouring ports of Spain, and they directed the surveyors to taste all wines "officially" to discover whether they were of French growth or mixed with French, and in that case to seize them in order to a trial. They went on tasting till the 29th of January, when they tasted some from St. Antonio which they believed to be French, on which they were directed to seize in order to have a trial for the French duty. Divers other wines were also seized from Bilboa, St. Sebastians, and other ports, and in Easter term a parcel of wines belonging to Mr. Creagh was brought to trial, before which they discovered that Robert Leslie, who had been at St. Sebastians, could prove that several ships under prosecution took in their loadings at that port out of French barques; notwithstanding which evidence, seconded by Bishop, a mariner, the jury brought a verdict against the King; but a new trial was granted. Soon after one Gamell offered to discover matters of great importance, and it was found that he was privy to the whole transaction of the French trade. The merchants apprehending fresh evidence made proposals to treat, on which it was agreed that they should make up what they had already paid for Spanish duty to two-thirds of the appraised value of their wines. The Com^{rs} recommend that "Lesly" and Gamell should have 500*l.* each, and that Bishop, being already employed in the Customs, should have 200*l.*, and that the surveyors and other officers should have other rewards, which would amount to about 400*l.* "for their help in retrieving about 22,000*l.* in the whole more than the Spanish duty." 34. Presentment of the Com^{rs} of Customs to the Lords of the Treasury. In obedience to their Lordships' commands they had caused a deputation to be despatched to Mr. James Merrick to be waiter at Southampton, instead of Mr. Dickinson, deceased, but reminding their Lordships of a regulation proposed by them to the Lords of the Treasury in Oct. 1696, as a method to introduce properly qualified officers, which seemed then to be approved by their Lordships. It ran thus:—"That none be for the future employed in the service of the Customes above the degree of tidesman, boatman, & preventive officer who have not been instructed, and that to appeare by certificat from such proper officers to whome it should be referr'd by the Comm^{rs} to examine their qualification. And that no such certificat be given to any person who has not attended six months to be instructed." The Com^{rs} further came to the resolution not to present any person to their Lord^{sh}s for a collector, surveyor, or landwaiter, whom they should not first personally examine as to his qualification for the place intended, with regard to the port in which he was to serve, because, according to the variety of trade, more knowledge and experience were necessary in one port than another. The Com^{rs} had thought of a proper person for this vacancy, and having personally examined him at the Board, referred him for further examination of the surveyors of this port, who having examined him, gave a certificate of his ability and fitness, and the Com^{rs} presented him to their Lordships for employment, but having received their Lordships' warrant for James Merrick, who at the board acknowledged he had no experience in Custom-house business, they referred him to the surveyor, whose certificate is annexed. The Com^{rs} thought it necessary to lay the whole before their Lordships, before they issued their deputation, which was the cause of the delay. They further say that the port of Southampton is a port of considerable action, that requires an officer of skill and experience. The Com^{rs} had not any objection to the person appointed, but thought he required time and experience to qualify him for the business. Dated 3 Feb. 1701-2.

43. Petition of William Fanshaw, showing that he was a servant of King Charles II., and intermarried with the late Duke of Monmouth's sister, then the widow of William Sarsfield, Esq. ; the King gave him thereupon a marriage portion of 400*l.* a year, which was duly paid during the King's life ; the pension was taken from him in King James's time because he persuaded his wife to quit the Popish communion and become a Protestant, and when King James went into Ireland, Col. Sarsfield, a younger brother of petitioner's wife's first husband, seized on her jointure and procured the attainder of the petitioner ; when Ireland was subdued the officers of William III. seized the jointure as forfeited by Col. Sarsfield, and raised above 2,000*l.* on it for the payment of Col. Sarsfield's debts. Their Majesties granted the petitioner a pension of 300*l.* a year, viz., 200*l.* out of the Royal Oak lottery, and 40*s.* a week out of secret service money ; the petitioner's wife was dead, and left him three daughters and a son, and no support but this pension, which was several years in arrears : praying for payment thereof.

Feb. 19. 48. Letter, signed Richard Hindmarsh, to the Right Hon. Feb. 23. 50. Copy of a letter of Richard Dalton to Wm. Lowndes, Esq., secretary to the Treasury, respecting the exchange of lands with the Dean and Canons of Windsor. If their Lordships did not think fit to proceed upon the reversion proposed he was content to take it in money and the bill might be altered accordingly. Dated 23 Feb. 1701-2.

There is also another paper with this, showing that His present Majesty and King Charles II. had taken into the Great and Little Parks of Windsor several parcels of land belonging to the Dean and Canons of Windsor, who desired as a recompense and for their charges in passing an Act, that the rent of 48*l*. 7*s*. 9*d*. payable to Mr. Dalton might be extinguished, which Mr. Dalton would agree to if the King conveyed certain reversions of possessions in St. James Street, Pall Mall, and Palace Yard. By inspection of the college books the surveyor found that King Henry VI. gave to the Provost and Fellows three tuns of Gascon wine yearly, custom free, which used to be paid in kind by the chief butler till the end of the reign of Henry VIII., when it was changed into money at 5*l.* per tun, which was paid to Mich. 1674 and 4*l.* 4*s.* for import duty for the year 1672, since which these allowances were discontinued, amounting to 526*l.* 16*s.* If their term were extended to 51 years at 4*l.* 5*s.* rent it could not be worth 300*l.*, and if made up to 99 years, in respect of the great expense they were at in re-edifying and repairing their college for the encouragement of piety and learning, it would fall short of their demand. 64. Petition of John Evelyn, Esq., to the Lords of the Treasury. He had lately exhibited to their Lordships an account of the charges incident to his employment as one of the Com^{rs} for sick and wounded seamen and prisoners of war, from which two sums for travelling charges and salary were deducted, without an opportunity for him to justify them: praying to lay before their Lordships what he should have said vivâ voce if he had been called before their Lordships.

The paper referred to is docquetted "John Evelyn, Esqr., his case."

In it he says, that for travelling charges a decent coach with four horses out of town was charged 20s. a day, to which their Lordships had reduced the whole charge, without allowance for lodging and diet for himself and servant and often a clerk, besides other expenses on the coming of officers from ships, hospitals, and prisons who had continual business with him, and without consideration of his having been some hundreds of times to London to visit the several hospitals, prisons, &c., besides the perpetual danger he was exposed to in passing through the whole city during the two first wars, being necessitated to wait on the old Duke of Albemarle at the Cockpit constantly once, and sometimes twice, a week, to receive orders and procure moneys of the receiver, and to carry down slops, bundles of linen, &c. when ten thousand died weekly of the contagion, and all his brother Com^{rs} "shifted for themselves" and left him alone to take charge of the service in which they were alike concerned with himself, for they had all their peculiar districts equally assigned them. London and its infected skirts was every one's province, which, had he deserted or not personally supplied, multitudes of poor, sick, and wounded seamen of our own, and prisoners of the Dutch, must inevitably have perished. Two of his marshals employed at Leeds castle and Chelsea prison, who had frequent recourse to him, died of the plague, and one came to him with the tokens upon him; for all which dangers and services and "incessant motions," using his own coach and horses only, he never put one penny to account, but left it to their Lordships' consideration. To his astonishment he found half his real charges at once cut off, which, had he vouched by particular bills and reckonings of inn-keepers and private houses where he was often forced to lodge during and since the contagion, would considerably have surmounted the full 40s. a day to which the Com^{rs} confined their expenses, though he hoped some favour might be had to the persons then employed (of whom the petitioner was the meanest and most exposed), viz, Sir Thomas Clifford (afterwards Lord High Treasurer), Sir William D'Oyby, Sir Geo. Downing, baronets, and others, who hardly could have travelled for 20s. a day allowance. He hoped their Lordships would have regard to his many hazards and fatigues, and not make him a precedent to those gentlemen who might "possibly hereafter be better husbands wth less danger."

1701-2.

Their Lordships had abated three-fourths of his last year's salary. Though the war was ended, neither his journeys nor trouble was ended (whilst accounts and arrears were to be adjusted) until Wm. Gibson was commissioned by the Lord Treasurer to discharge what was owing at the ports. He hoped this might have been cast in as some recompense for his former services and expenses, for which he had charged nothing to the public during either war. [He hoped] their Lordships would allow his full and just account, and so represent to the King that the fine of 150*l.*, for making up the present term of his lease for certain lands near Deptford from the Crown might be installed and defalked out of the debt remaining due to the petitioner's wife's father, Sir Richard Browne, to whom the inheritance of that estate was solemnly promised by King Charles II. for his 19 years service abroad, in which he spent his patrimonial estate, as was known to Lord Godolphin, Sir Stephen Fox, and the rest of the late Com^{rs}; and the remaining debt to be truly stated, audited, and allowed. Sir Richard's tedious sickness and death had hindered his application. There was still owing to the petitioner 6,685*l.* 10*s.* with interest.

CALENDARS OF STATE PAPERS, &c.

[IMPERIAL 8vo., cloth. Price 15s. each Volume or Part.]

As far back as the year 1800, a Committee of the House of Commons recommended that Indexes and Calendars should be made to the Public Records, and thirty-six years afterwards another Committee of the House of Commons reiterated that recommendation in more forcible words; but it was not until the incorporation of the State Paper Office with the Public Record Office that the present Master of the Rolls found himself in a position to take the necessary steps for carrying out the wishes of the House of Commons.

On 7 December 1855, he stated to the Lords of the Treasury that although "the Records, State Papers, and Documents in his charge constitute the most complete and perfect series of their kind in the civilized world," and although "they are of the greatest value in a historical and constitutional point of view, yet they are comparatively useless to the public, from the want of proper Calendars and Indexes."

Acting upon the recommendations of the Committees of the House of Commons above referred to, he suggested to the Lords of the Treasury that to effect the object he had in view it would be necessary for him to employ a few persons fully qualified to perform the work which he contemplated.

Their Lordships assented to the necessity of having Calendars prepared and printed, and empowered the Master of the Rolls to take such steps as might be necessary for this purpose.

The following Works have been already published under the direction of the Master of the Rolls :—

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, FOREIGN SERIES, OF THE REIGN OF MARY, preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. 1553-1558. Edited by W. B. TURNBULL, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, and Correspondant du Comité Impérial des Travaux Historiques et des Sociétés Savantes de France. 1861.

The two preceding volumes exhibit the negotiations of the English ambassadors with the courts of the Emperor Charles V. of Germany, of Henry II. of France, and of Philip II. of Spain. The affairs of several of the minor continental states also find various incidental illustrations of much interest.

A valuable series of Papers descriptive of the circumstances which attended the loss of Calais merits a special notice; while the progress of the wars in the north of France, into which England was dragged by her union with Spain, is narrated at some length. The domestic affairs of England are of course passed over in these volumes, which treat only of its relations with foreign powers.

These seven volumes contain a calendar of the Foreign Correspondence of Queen Elizabeth, from her accession in 1558, to 1565, of which the originals, drafts, or contemporary copies, are deposited in the Public Record Office, &c. These documents are of the greatest value as exhibiting the position of England at one of the most interesting periods of history, in regard to its relations with France, Scotland, Spain, and Germany. They are of especial importance as illustrating not only the external but also the domestic affairs of France during the period which immediately preceded the outbreak of the first great war of religion under the Prince of Condé and the Duke of Guise.

Another volume is in the press.

Supplement to Vol. I. and Vol. II.

Mr. Bergenroth was engaged in compiling a Calendar of the Papers relating to England preserved in the archives of Simancas in Spain, and the corresponding portion removed from Simancas to Paris. Mr. Bergenroth also visited Madrid, and examined the Papers there, bearing on the reign of Henry VIII. The first volume contains the Spanish Papers of the reign of Henry VII.; the second volume, those of the first portion of the reign of Henry VIII. The Supplement contains new information relating to the private life of Queen Katharine of England; and to the projected marriage of Henry VII. with Queen Juana, widow of King Philip of Castile, and mother of the Emperor Charles V.

Mr. Brown's researches have brought to light a number of important documents relating to the various periods of English history, and his contributions to historical literature are of the most interesting and important character.

THE CHRONICLES AND MEMORIALS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND DURING THE MIDDLE AGES.

[ROYAL 8vo., half-bound. Price 10s. each Volume or Part.]

On 25 July 1822, the House of Commons presented an address to the Crown, stating that the editions of the works of our ancient historians were inconvenient and defective; that many of their writings still remained in manuscript, and, in some cases, in a single copy only. They added, "that an uniform and convenient edition of the whole, published under His Majesty's royal sanction, would be an undertaking honourable to His Majesty's reign, and conducive to the advancement of historical and constitutional knowledge; that the House therefore humbly besought His Majesty, that He would be graciously pleased to give such directions as His Majesty, in His wisdom, might think fit, for the publication of a complete edition of the ancient historians of this realm, and assured His Majesty that whatever expense might be necessary for this purpose would be made good."

The Master of the Rolls, being very desirous that effect should be given to the resolution of the House of Commons, submitted to Her Majesty's Treasury in 1857 a plan for the publication of the ancient chronicles and memorials of the United Kingdom, and it was adopted accordingly. In selecting these works, it was considered right, in the first instance, to give preference to those of which the manuscripts were unique, or the materials of which would help to fill up blanks in English history for which no satisfactory and authentic information hitherto existed in any accessible form. One great object the Master of the Rolls had in view was to form a corpus historicum within reasonable limits, and which should be as complete as possible. In a subject of so vast a range, it was important that the historical student should be able to select such volumes as conformed with his own peculiar tastes and studies, and not be put to the expense of purchasing the whole collection; an inconvenience inseparable from any other plan than that which has been in this instance adopted.

Of the Chronicles and Memorials, the following volumes have been published. They embrace the period from the earliest time of British history down to the end of the reign of Henry VII.

1. THE CHRONICLE OF ENGLAND, by JOHN CAPGRAVE. Edited by the Rev. F. C. HINGESTON, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1858.

Capgrave was prior of Lynn, in Norfolk, and provincial of the order of the Friars Hermits of England shortly before the year 1464. His Chronicle extends from the creation of the world to the year 1417. As a record of the language spoken in Norfolk (being written in English), it is of considerable value.

2. CHRONICON MONASTERII DE ABINGDON. Vols. I. and II. Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A., of University College, Durham, and Vicar of Leighton Buzzard. 1858.

This Chronicle traces the history of the great Benedictine monastery of Abingdon in Berkshire, from its foundation by King Ina of Wessex, to the reign of Richard I., shortly after which period the present narrative was drawn up by an inmate of the establishment. The author had access to the title-deeds of the house; and incorporates into his history various charters of the Saxon kings, of great importance as illustrating not only the history of the locality but that of the kingdom. The work is printed for the first time.

3. LIVES OF EDWARD THE CONFESSOR. I.—La Estoire de Saint Aedward le Rei. II.—Vita Beati Edvardi Regis et Confessoris. III.—Vita Æduuardi Regis qui apud Westmonasterium requiescit. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1858.

The first is a poem in Norman French, containing 4,686 lines, addressed to Alianor, Queen of Henry III., and probably written in the year 1245, on the occasion of the restoration of the church of Westminster. Nothing is known of the author. The second is an anonymous poem, containing 536 lines, written between the years 1440 and 1450, by command of Henry VI., to whom it is dedicated. It does not throw any new light on the reign of Edward the Confessor, but is valuable as a specimen of the Latin poetry of the time. The third, also by an anonymous author, was apparently written for Queen Edith, between the years 1066 and 1074, during the pressure of the suffering brought on the Saxons by the Norman conquest. It notices many facts not found in other writers, and some which differ considerably from the usual accounts.

4. MONUMENTA FRANCISCANA; scilicet, I.—Thomas de Eccleston de Adventu Fratrum Minorum in Angliam. II.—Adæ de Marisco Epistolæ. III.—Registrum Fratrum Minorum Londoniæ. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. 1858.

This volume contains original materials for the history of the settlement of the order of Saint Francis in England, the letters of Adam de Marisco, and other papers connected with the foundation and diffusion of this great body. It has been the aim of the editor to collect whatever historical information could be found in this country, towards illustrating a period of the national history for which only scanty materials exist. None of these have been before printed.

5. FASCICULI ZIZANIORUM MAGISTRI JOHANNIS WYCLIF CUM TRITICO. Ascribed to THOMAS NETTER, of WALDEN, Provincial of the Carmelite Order in England, and Confessor to King Henry the Fifth. Edited by the Rev. W. W. SHIRLEY, M.A., Tutor and late Fellow of Wadham College, Oxford. 1858.

This work derives its principal value from being the only contemporaneous account of the rise of the Lollards. When written, the disputes of the school-men had been extended to the field of theology, and they appear both in the writings of Wycliff and in those of his adversaries. Wycliff's little bundles of tares are not less metaphysical than theological, and the conflict between Nominalists and Realists rages side by side with the conflict between the different interpreters of Scripture. The work gives a good idea of the controversies at the end of the 14th and the beginning of the 15th centuries.

6. THE BULK OF THE CRONICLIS OF SCOTLAND ; or, A Metrical Version of the History of Hector Boece ; by WILLIAM STEWART. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by W. B. TURNBULL, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. 1858.

This is a metrical translation of a Latin Prose Chronicle, and was written in the first half of the 16th century. The narrative begins with the earliest legends, and ends with the death of James I. of Scotland, and the "evil ending of the traitors that slew him." Strict accuracy of statement is not to be looked for in such a work as this ; but the stories of the colonization of Spain, Ireland, and Scotland are interesting if not true ; and the chronicle is valuable as a reflection of the manners, sentiments, and character of the age in which it was composed. The peculiarities of the Scottish dialect are well illustrated in this metrical version, and the student of language will find ample materials for comparison with the English dialects of the same period, and with modern lowland Scotch.

7. JOHANNIS CAPGRAVE LIBER DE ILLUSTRIBUS HENRICIS. Edited by the Rev. F. C. HINGESTON, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1858.

This work is dedicated to Henry VI. of England, who appears to have been, in the author's estimation, the greatest of all the Henries. It is divided into three distinct parts, each having its own separate dedication. The first part relates only to the history of the Empire, and extends from the election of Henry I., the Fowler, to the end of the reign of the Emperor Henry VI. The second part is devoted to English history, and extends from the accession of Henry I. in the year 1100, to the year 1446, which was the twenty-fourth year of the reign of King Henry VI. The third part contains the lives of illustrious men who have borne the name of Henry in various parts of the world.

Capgrave was born in 1393, in the reign of Richard II., and lived during the Wars of the Roses, for the history of which period his work is of some value.

8. HISTORIA MONASTERII S. AUGUSTINI CANTUARIENSIS, by THOMAS OF ELMHAM, formerly Monk and Treasurer of that Foundation. Edited by CHARLES HARDWICK, M.A., Fellow of St. Catharine's Hall, and Christian Advocate in the University of Cambridge. 1858.

This history extends from the arrival of St. Augustine in Kent until 1191. Prefixed is a chronology as far as 1418, which shows in outline what was to have been the character of the work when completed. The only copy known is in the possession of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. The author was connected with Norfolk, and most probably with Elmham, whence he derived his name.

9. EULOGIUM (HISTORIARUM SIVE TEMPORIS) : Chronicon ab Orbe condito usque ad Annum Domini 1366 ; a Monacho quodam Malmesbiriensi exaratum. Vols. I, II., and III. Edited by F. S. HAYDON, Esq., B.A. 1858-1863.

This is a Latin Chronicle extending from the Creation to the latter part of the reign of Edward III., and written by a monk of the Abbey of Malmesbury, in Wiltshire, about the year 1367. A continuation, carrying the history of England down to the year 1413, was added in the former half of the fifteenth century by an author whose name is not known. The original Chronicle is divided into five books, and contains a history of the world generally, but more especially of England to the year 1366. The continuation extends the history down to the coronation of Henry V. The Eulogium itself is chiefly valuable as containing a history, by a contemporary, of the period between 1356 and 1366. The notices of events appear to have been written very soon after their occurrence. Among other interesting matter, the Chronicle contains a diary of the Poitiers campaign, evidently furnished by some person who accompanied the army of the Black Prince. The continuation of the Chronicle is also the work of a contemporary, and gives a very interesting account of the reigns of Richard II. and Henry IV. It is believed to be the earliest authority for the statement that the latter monarch died in the Jerusalem Chamber at Westminster.

10. MEMORIALS OF HENRY THE SEVENTH: Bernardi Andræ Tholosatis Vita Regis Henrici Septimi; necnon alia quædam ad eundem Regem spectantia. Edited by JAMES GAIRDNER, Esq. 1858.

The contents of these volumes are—(1) a life of Henry VII., by his poet laureate and historiographer, Bernard André, of Toulouse, with some compositions in verse, of which he is supposed to have been the author; (2) the journals of Roger Machado during certain embassies on which he was sent by Henry VII. to Spain and Brittany, the first of which had reference to the marriage of the King's son, Arthur, with Catharine of Arragon; (3) two curious reports by envoys sent to Spain in the year 1505 touching the succession to the Crown of Castile, and a project of marriage between Henry VII. and the Queen of Naples; and (4) an account of Philip of Castile's reception in England in 1506. Other documents of interest in connexion with the period are given in an appendix.

11. MEMORIALS OF HENRY THE FIFTH. I.—Vita Henrici Quinti, Roberto Redmanno auctore. II.—Versus Rhythmici in laudem Regis Henrici Quinti. III.—Elmhams Liber Metricus de Henrico V. Edited by CHARLES A. COLE, Esq. 1858.

This volume contains three treatises which more or less illustrate the history of the reign of Henry V., viz.: A Life by Robert Redman; a Metrical Chronicle by Thomas Elmham, prior of Lenton, a contemporary author; Versus Rhythmici, written apparently by a monk of Westminster Abbey, who was also a contemporary of Henry V. These works are printed for the first time.

12. MUNIMENTA GILDHALLÆ LONDONIENSIS; Liber Albus, Liber Custumarum, et Liber Horn, in archivis Gildhallæ asservati. Vol. I., Liber Albus. Vol. II. (in Two Parts), Liber Custumarum. Vol. III., Translation of the Anglo-Norman Passages in Liber Albus, Glossaries, Appendices, and Index. Edited by HENRY THOMAS RILEY, Esq., M.A., Barrister-at-Law. 1859–1862.

The manuscript of the Liber Albus, compiled by John Carpenter, Common Clerk of the City of London in the year 1419, a large folio volume, is preserved in the Record Room of the City of London. It gives an account of the laws, regulations, and institutions of that City in the twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, and early part of the fifteenth centuries.

The Liber Custumarum was compiled probably by various hands in the early part of the fourteenth century during the reign of Edward II. The manuscript, a folio volume, is also preserved in the Record Room of the City of London, though some portion in its original state, borrowed from the City in the reign of Queen Elizabeth and never returned, forms part of the Cottonian MS. Claudius D. II. in the British Museum. It also gives an account of the laws, regulations, and institutions of the City of London in the twelfth, thirteenth, and early part of the fourteenth centuries.

13. CHRONICA JOHANNIS DE OXENEDES. Edited by Sir HENRY ELLIS, K.H. 1859.

Although this Chronicle tells of the arrival of Hengist and Horsa in England in the year 449, yet it substantially begins with the reign of King Alfred, and comes down to the year 1292, where it ends abruptly. The history is particularly valuable for notices of events in the eastern portions of the kingdom, which are not to be elsewhere obtained, and some curious facts are mentioned relative to the floods in that part of England, which are confirmed in the Friesland Chronicle of Anthony Heinrich, pastor of the Island of Mohr.

14. A COLLECTION OF POLITICAL POEMS AND SONGS RELATING TO ENGLISH HISTORY, FROM THE ACCESSION OF EDWARD III. TO THE REIGN OF HENRY VIII. Vols. I. and II. Edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A. 1859-1861.

These Poems are perhaps the most interesting of all the historical writings of the period, though they cannot be relied on for accuracy of statement. They are various in character; some are upon religious subjects, some may be called satires, and some give no more than a court scandal; but as a whole they present a very fair picture of society, and of the relations of the different classes to one another. The period comprised is in itself interesting, and brings us, through the decline of the feudal system, to the beginning of our modern history. The songs in old English are of considerable value to the philologist.

15. The "OPUS TERTIUM," "OPUS MINUS," &c., of ROGER BACON. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. 1859.

This is the celebrated treatise—never before printed—so frequently referred to by the great philosopher in his works. It contains the fullest details we possess of the life and labours of Roger Bacon: also a fragment by the same author, supposed to be unique, the "Compendium Studii Theologie."

16. BARTHOLOMÆI DE COTTON, MONACHI NORWICENSIS, HISTORIA ANGELICANA; 449-1298: necnon ejusdem Liber de Archiepiscopis et Episcopis Angliæ. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1859.

The author, a monk of Norwich, has here given us a Chronicle of England from the arrival of the Saxons in 449 to the year 1298, in or about which year it appears that he died. The latter portion of this history (the whole of the reign of Edward I. more especially) is of great value, as the writer was contemporary with the events which he records. An Appendix contains several illustrative documents connected with the previous narrative.

17. BRUT Y TYWYSOGION; or, The Chronicle of the Princes of Wales. Edited by the Rev. JOHN WILLIAMS AB ITHEL, M.A. 1860.

This work, also known as "The Chronicle of the Princes of Wales," has been attributed to Caradoc of Llancarvan, who flourished about the middle of the twelfth century. It is written in the ancient Welsh language, begins with the abdication and death of Caedwala at Rome, in the year 681, and continues the history down to the subjugation of Wales by Edward I., about the year 1282.

18. A COLLECTION OF ROYAL AND HISTORICAL LETTERS DURING THE REIGN OF HENRY IV. 1399-1404. Edited by the Rev. F. C. HINGESTON, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1860.

This volume, like all the others in the series containing a miscellaneous selection of letters, is valuable on account of the light it throws upon biographical history, and the familiar view it presents of characters, manners, and events. The period requires much elucidation; to which it will materially contribute.

19. THE REPRESSOR OF OVER MUCH BLAMING OF THE CLERGY. By REGINALD PECOCK, sometime Bishop of Chichester. Vols. I. and II. Edited by CHURCHILL BABINGTON, B.D., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1860.

The "Repressor" may be considered the earliest piece of good theological disquisition of which our English prose literature can boast. The author was born about the end of the fourteenth century, consecrated Bishop of St. Asaph in the year 1444, and translated to the see of Chichester in 1450. While Bishop of St. Asaph, he zealously defended his brother prelates from the attacks of those who censured the bishops for their neglect of duty. He maintained that it was no part of a bishop's functions to appear in the pulpit, and that his time might be more profitably spent, and his dignity better maintained, in the performance of works of a higher character. Among those who thought differently were the Lollards, and against their general doctrines the "Repressor" is directed. Pecock took up a position midway between that of the Roman Church and that of the modern Anglican Church; but his work is interesting chiefly because it gives a full account of the views of the Lollards and of the arguments by which they were supported, and because it assists us to ascertain the state of feeling which ultimately led to the Reformation. Apart from religious matters, the light thrown upon contemporaneous history is very small, but the "Repressor" has great value for the philologist, as it tells us what were the characteristics of the language in use among the cultivated Englishmen of the fifteenth century. Pecock, though an opponent of the Lollards, showed a certain spirit of toleration, for which he received, towards the end of his life, the usual mediæval reward—persecution.

20. ANNALES CAMBRIÆ. Edited by the Rev. JOHN WILLIAMS AB ITHEL, M.A. 1860.

These annals, which are in Latin, commence in the year 447, and come down to the year 1288. The earlier portion appears to be taken from an Irish Chronicle, which was also used by Tigernach, and by the compiler of the Annals of Ulster. During its first century it contains scarcely anything relating to Britain, the earliest direct concurrence with English history is relative to the mission of Augustine. Its notices throughout though brief, are valuable. The annals were probably written at St. Davids, by Blegewryd, Archdeacon of Llandaff, the most learned man in his day in all Cymru.

21. THE WORKS OF GIRALDUS CAMBRENSIS. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. Vols. V. and VI. Edited by the Rev. JAMES F. DIMOCK, M.A., Rector of Barnburgh, Yorkshire. 1861–1868.

The first three volumes contain the historical works of Gerald du Barry, who lived in the reigns of Henry II., Richard I., and John, and attempted to re-establish the independence of Wales by restoring the see of St. Davids to its ancient primacy. His works are of a very miscellaneous nature, both in prose and verse, and are remarkable chiefly for the racy and original anecdotes which they contain relating to contemporaries. He is the only Welsh writer of any importance who has contributed so much to the mediæval literature of this country, or assumed, in consequence of his nationality, so free and independent a tone. His frequent travels in Italy, in France, in Ireland, and in Wales, gave him opportunities for observation which did not generally fall to the lot of mediæval writers in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, and of these observations Giraldus has made due use. Only extracts from these treatises have been printed before, and almost all of them are taken from unique manuscripts.

The Topographia Hibernica (in Vol. V.) is the result of Giraldus' two visits to Ireland. The first in the year 1183, the second in 1185–6, when he accompanied Prince John into that country. Curious as this treatise is, Mr. Dimock is of opinion that it ought not to be accepted as sober truthful history, for Giraldus himself states that truth was not his main object, and that he compiled the work for the purpose of sounding the praises of Henry the Second. Elsewhere, however, he declares that he had stated nothing in the Topographia of the truth of which he was not well assured, either by his own eyesight or by the testimony, with all diligence elicited, of the most trustworthy and authentic men in the country; that though he did not put just the same full faith in their reports as in what he had himself seen, yet, as they only related what they had themselves seen, he could not but believe such credible witnesses. A very interesting portion of this treatise is devoted to the animals of Ireland. It shows that he was a very accurate and acute observer, and his descriptions are given in a way that a scientific naturalist of the present day could hardly improve upon. The Expugnatio Hibernica was written about the year 1188, and may be regarded rather as a great epic than a sober relation of acts occurring in his own days. No one can peruse it without coming to the conclusion that it is rather a poetical fiction than a prosaic truthful history.

Vol. VI. contains the Itinerarium Kambriæ et Descriptio Kambriæ.

22. LETTERS AND PAPERS ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE WARS OF THE ENGLISH IN FRANCE DURING THE REIGN OF HENRY THE SIXTH, KING OF ENGLAND. Vol. I., and Vol. II. (in Two Parts). Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A., of University College, Durham, and Vicar of Leighton Buzzard. 1861-1864.

The letters and papers contained in these volumes are derived chiefly from originals or contemporary copies extant in the Bibliothèque Impériale, and the Dépôt des Archives, in Paris. They illustrate the line of policy adopted by John Duke of Bedford and his successors during their government of Normandy, and such other provinces of France as had been acquired by Henry V. We may here trace, step by step, the gradual declension of the English power, until we are prepared to read of its final overthrow.

23. THE ANGLO-SAXON CHRONICLE, ACCORDING TO THE SEVERAL ORIGINAL AUTHORITIES. Vol. I., Original Texts. Vol. II., Translation. Edited and translated by BENJAMIN THORPE, Esq., Member of the Royal Academy of Sciences at Munich, and of the Society of Netherlandish Literature at Leyden. 1861.

This Chronicle, extending from the earliest history of Britain to the year 1154, is justly the boast of England; for no other nation can produce any history, written in its own vernacular, at all approaching it, either in antiquity, truthfulness, or extent, the historical books of the Bible alone excepted. There are at present six independent manuscripts of the Saxon Chronicle, ending in different years, and written in different parts of the country. In the present edition, the text of each manuscript is printed in columns on the same page, so that the student may see at a glance the various changes which occur in orthography, whether arising from locality or age.

24. LETTERS AND PAPERS ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE REIGNS OF RICHARD III. AND HENRY VII. Vols. I. and II. Edited by JAMES GAIRDNER, Esq. 1861-1863.

The Papers are derived from MSS. in the Public Record Office, the British Museum, and other repositories. The period to which they refer is unusually destitute of chronicles and other sources of historical information, so that the light obtained from these documents is of special importance. The principal contents of the volumes are some diplomatic Papers of Richard III.; correspondence between Henry VII. and Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain; documents relating to Edmund de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk; and a portion of the correspondence of James IV. of Scotland.

25. LETTERS OF BISHOP GROSSETESTE, illustrative of the Social Condition of his Time. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1861.

The Letters of Robert Grosseteste (131 in number) are here collected from various sources, and a large portion of them is printed for the first time. They range in date from about 1210 to 1253, and relate to various matters connected not only with the political history of England during the reign of Henry III., but with its ecclesiastical condition. They refer especially to the diocese of Lincoln, of which Grosseteste was bishop.

26. DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE OF MANUSCRIPTS RELATING TO THE HISTORY OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND. Vol. I. (in Two Parts); Anterior to the Norman Invasion. Vol. II.; 1066-1200. By THOMAS DUFFUS HARDY, Esq., Deputy Keeper of the Public Records. 1862-1865.

The object of this work is to publish notices of all known sources of British history, both printed and unprinted, in one continued sequence. The materials, when historical (as distinguished from biographical), are arranged under the year in which the latest event is recorded in the chronicle or history, and not under the period in which its author, real or supposed, flourished. Biographies are enumerated under the year in which the person commemorated died, and not under the year in which the life was written. This arrangement has two advantages; the materials for any given period may be seen at a glance; and if the reader knows the time when an author wrote, and the number of years that had elapsed between the date of the events and the time the writer flourished, he will generally be enabled to form a fair estimate of the comparative value of the narrative itself. A brief analysis of each work has been added when deserving it, in which the original portions are distinguished from those which are mere compilations. When possible, the sources are indicated, from which such compilations have been derived. A biographical sketch of the author of each piece has been added, and a brief notice has also been given of such British authors as have written on historical subjects.

27. ROYAL AND OTHER HISTORICAL LETTERS ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE REIGN OF HENRY III. Vol. I., 1216-1235. Vol. II., 1236-1272. Selected and edited by the Rev. W. W. SHIRLEY, D.D., Regius Professor in Ecclesiastical History, and Canon of Christ Church, Oxford. 1862-1866.

The letters contained in these volumes are derived chiefly from the ancient correspondence formerly in the Tower of London, and now in the Public Record Office. They illustrate the political history of England during the growth of its liberties, and throw considerable light upon the personal history of Simon de Montfort. The affairs of France form the subject of many of them, especially in regard to the province of Gascony. The entire collection consists of nearly 700 documents, the greater portion of which is printed for the first time.

28. CHRONICA MONASTERII S. ALBANI.—1. THOMÆ WALSHINGHAM HISTORIA ANGLICANA; Vol. I., 1272-1381: Vol. II., 1381-1422. 2. WILLELMI RISHANGER CHRONICA ET ANNALES, 1259-1307. 3. JOHANNIS DE TROKELowe ET HENRICI DE BLANEFORDE CHRONICA ET ANNALES, 1259-1296; 1307-1324; 1392-1406. 4. GESTA ABBATUM MONASTERII S. ALBANI, A THOMÆ WALSHINGHAM, REGNANTE RICARDO SECUNDO, EJUSDEM ECCLESIE PRÆCENTORE, COMPILATA; Vol. I., 793-1290: Vol. II., 1290-1349: Vol. III., 1349-1411. 5. JOHANNIS AMUNDESHAM, MONACHI MONASTERII S. ALBANI, UT VIDETUR, ANNALES; Vol. I. Edited by HENRY THOMAS RILEY, Esq., M.A., of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge; and of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1863-1870.

In the first two volumes is a history of England, from the death of Henry III. to the death of Henry V., written by Thomas Walsingham, precentor of St. Albans and prior of the cell of Wymundham, belonging to that abbey. Walsingham's work is printed from MS. VII. in the Arundel Collection in the College of Arms, London, a manuscript of the fifteenth century, collated with MS. 13 E. IX. in the King's Library in the British Museum, and MS. VII. in the Parker Collection of Manuscripts at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

In the third volume is a Chronicle of English History, from 1259 to 1306, attributed to William Rishanger, monk of Saint Albans, who lived in the reign of Edward I., printed from the Cottonian Manuscript, Faustina B. IX. (of the fourteenth century) in the British Museum, collated with MS. 14 C. VII. (fols. 219-231) in the King's Library, British Museum, and the Cottonian Manuscript Claudius E. III., fols. 306-331: Also an account of transactions attending the award of the kingdom of Scotland to John Balliol by King Edward I., 1291-1292, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI., attributed to William Rishanger above mentioned, but on no sufficient ground: A short Chronicle of English History, from 1292 to 1300, by an unknown hand, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: A short Chronicle from 1297 to 1307, Willelmi Rishanger Gesta Edwardi Primi Regis Angliæ, from MS. 14 C. I. in the Royal Library, and MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI., with an addition of Annales Regum Angliæ, probably by the same hand: A fragment of a Chronicle of English History, 1299, 1300, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: A fragment of a Chronicle of English History, 1295 to 1300, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: and a fragment of a Chronicle of English History, 1285 to 1307, from MS. 14 C. I. in the Royal Library.

In the fourth volume is a Chronicle of English History, by an anonymous writer, 1259 to 1296, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: Annals of King Edward II., 1307 to 1323, by John de Trokelowe, a monk of St. Albans from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: A continuation of Trokelowe's Annals, 1323, 1324, by Henricus de Blanford, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: A full Chronicle of English History, by an anonymous writer of St. Albans, 1392 to 1406, from MS. VII. in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge; and an account of the benefactors of St. Albans, written in the early part of the fifteenth century, from MS. VI. in the same Library.

The fifth, sixth, and seventh volumes (which form an entirely separate work), contain a history of the Abbots of St. Albans, and of the fortunes and vicissitudes of the house, from 793 to 1411, mainly compiled by Thomas Walsingham, Precentor of the Abbey in the reign of Richard II., and transcribed from MS. Cotton. Claudius E. IV., in the British Museum; with a brief Continuation of the History, extracted from the closing pages of the Parker MS. No. VII., in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

The eighth volume is in continuation of the Annals, containing a Chronicle supposed to have been written by John Amundesham, a monk of that monastery.

29. CHRONICON ABBATIE EVESHAMENSIS, AUCTORIBUS DOMINICO PRIORE EVESHAMIE ET THOMA DE MARLEBERGE ABBATE, A FUNDATIONE AD ANNUM 1213, UNA CUM CONTINUATIONE AD ANNUM 1418. Edited by the Rev. W. D. MACRAY, M.A., Bodleian Library, Oxford. 1863.

The Chronicle of Evesham illustrates the history of that important monastery from its foundation by Egwin, about 690, to the year 1418. Its chief feature is an autobiography, which makes us acquainted with the inner daily life of a great abbey, such as but rarely has been recorded. Interspersed are many notices of general, personal, and local history which will be read with much interest. This work exists in a single MS., and is for the first time printed.

30. RICARDI DE CIRENCESTRIA SPECULUM HISTORIALE DE GESTIS REGUM ANGLIE. Vol. I., 447-871. Vol. II., 872-1066. Edited by JOHN E. B. MAYOR, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1863-1869.

The compiler, Richard of Cirencester, was a monk of Westminster, 1355-1400. In 1391 he obtained a licence to make a pilgrimage to Rome. His history, in four books, extends from 447 to 1066. He announces his intention of continuing it, but there is no evidence that he completed any more. This chronicle gives many charters in favour of Westminster Abbey, and a very full account of the lives and miracles of the saints, especially of Edward the Confessor, whose reign occupies the fourth book. A treatise on the Coronation, by William of Sudbury, a monk of Westminster, fills book iii. c. 3. It was on this author that C. J. Bertram fathered his forgery, De Situ Britannia, in 1747.

31. YEAR BOOKS OF THE REIGN OF EDWARD THE FIRST. Years 20-21, 30-31, and 32-33. Edited and translated by ALFRED JOHN HORWOOD, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1863-1866.

The volumes known as the "Year Books" contain reports in Norman-French of cases argued and decided in the Courts of Common Law. They may be considered to a great extent as the "lex non scripta" of England, and have been held in the highest veneration by the ancient sages of the law, and were received by them as the repositories of the first recorded judgments and dicta of the great legal luminaries of past ages. They are also worthy of the attention of the general reader on account of the historical information and the notices of public and private persons which they contain, as well as the light which they throw on ancient manners and customs.

32. NARRATIVES OF THE EXPULSION OF THE ENGLISH FROM NORMANDY: 1449-1450.—Robertus Blondelli de Reductione Normanniæ: Le Recouvrement de Normendie, par Berry, Hérault du Roy: Conférences between the Ambassadors of France and England. Edited, from MSS. in the Imperial Library at Paris, by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A., of University College, Durham. 1863.

This volume contains the narrative of an eye-witness who details with considerable power and minuteness the circumstances which attended the final expulsion of the English from Normandy in the year 1450. The history commences with the infringement of the truce by the capture of Fougères, and ends with the battle of Formigny and the embarkation of the Duke of Somerset. The whole period embraced is less than two years.

33. HISTORIA ET CARTULARIUM MONASTERII S. PETRI GLOUCESTRÆ. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by W. H. HART, Esq., F.S.A., Membre correspondant de la Société des Antiquaires de Normandie. 1863–1867.

This work consists of two parts, the History and the Cartulary of the Monastery of St. Peter, Gloucester. The history furnishes an account of the monastery from its foundation, in the year 681, to the early part of the reign of Richard II., together with a calendar of donations and benefactions. It treats principally of the affairs of the monastery, but occasionally matters of general history are introduced. Its authorship has generally been assigned to Walter Froucester, the twentieth abbot, but without any foundation.

34. ALEXANDRI NECKAM DE NATURIS RERUM LIBRI DUO ; with NECKAM'S POEM, DE LAUDIBUS DIVINÆ SAPIENTIÆ. Edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A. 1863.

Neckam was a man who devoted himself to science, such as it was in the twelfth century. In the "De Naturis Rerum" are to be found what may be called the rudiments of many sciences mixed up with much error and ignorance. Neckam was not thought infallible, even by his contemporaries, for Roger Bacon remarks of him, "this Alexander in many things wrote what was true and useful ; but he neither can nor ought by just title to be reckoned among authorities." Neckam, however, had sufficient independence of thought to differ from some of the schoolmen who in his time considered themselves the only judges of literature. He had his own views in morals, and in giving us a glimpse of them, as well as of his other opinions, he throws much light upon the manners, customs, and general tone of thought prevalent in the twelfth century. The poem entitled "De Laudibus Divinæ Sapientiæ" appears to be a metrical paraphrase or abridgment of the "De Naturis Rerum." It is written in the elegiac metre ; and though there are many lines which violate classical rules, it is, as a whole, above the ordinary standard of mediæval Latin.

35. LEECHDOMS, WORTCUNNING, AND STARCRAFT OF EARLY ENGLAND ; being a Collection of Documents illustrating the History of Science in this Country before the Norman Conquest. Vols. I., II., and III. Collected and edited by the Rev. T. OSWALD COCKAYNE, M.A., of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1864–1866.

This work illustrates not only the history of science, but the history of superstition. In addition to the information bearing directly upon the medical skill and medical faith of the times, there are many passages which incidentally throw light upon the general mode of life and ordinary diet. The volumes are interesting not only in their scientific, but also in their social aspect. The manuscripts from which they have been printed are valuable to the Anglo-Saxon scholar for the illustrations they afford of Anglo-Saxon orthography.

36. ANNALES MONASTICI. Vol. I. :—Annales de Margan, 1066–1232 ; Annales de Theokesberia, 1066–1263 ; Annales de Burton, 1004–1263. Vol. II. :—Annales Monasterii de Wintonia, 519–1277 ; Annales Monasterii de Waverleia, 1–1291. Vol. III. :—Annales Prioratus de Duns-tapia, 1–1297 ; Annales Monasterii de Bermundesceia, 1042–1432. Vol. IV. :—Annales Monasterii de Oseneia, 1016–1347 ; Chronicon vulgo dictum Chronicon Thomæ Wykes, 1066–1289 ; Annales Prioratus de

Wigornia, 1-1377. Vol. V. :—Index and Glossary. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, and Registry of the University, Cambridge. 1864-1869.

The present collection of Monastic Annals embraces all the more important chronicles compiled in religious houses in England during the thirteenth century. These distinct works are ten in number. The extreme period which they embrace ranges from the year 1 to 1432, although they refer more especially to the reigns of John, Henry III., and Edward I. Some of these narratives have already appeared in print, but others are printed for the first time.

37. MAGNA VITA S. HUGONIS EPISCOPI LINCOLNIENSIS. From Manuscripts in the Bodleian Library, Oxford, and the Imperial Library, Paris. Edited by the Rev. JAMES F. DIMOCK, M.A., Rector of Barnburgh, Yorkshire. 1864.

This work contains a number of very curious and interesting incidents, and, being the work of a contemporary, is very valuable, not only as a truthful biography of a celebrated ecclesiastic, but as the work of a man, who, from personal knowledge, gives notices of passing events, as well as of individuals who were then taking active part in public affairs. The author, in all probability, was Adam Abbot of Evesham. He was domestic chaplain and private confessor of Bishop Hugh, and in these capacities was admitted to the closest intimacy. Bishop Hugh was Prior of Witham for 11 years before he became Bishop of Lincoln. His consecration took place on the 21st September 1186; he died on the 16th of November 1200; and was canonized in 1220.

38. CHRONICLES AND MEMORIALS OF THE REIGN OF RICHARD THE FIRST. Vol. I. :—ITINERARIUM PEREGRINORUM ET GESTA REGIS RICARDI. Vol. II. :—EPISTOLÆ CANTUARIENSES; the Letters of the Prior and Convent of Christ Church, Canterbury; 1187 to 1199. Edited by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Vicar of Navestock, Essex, and Lambeth Librarian. 1864-1865.

The authorship of the Chronicle in Vol. I., hitherto ascribed to Geoffrey Vinesauf, is now more correctly ascribed to Richard, Canon of the Holy Trinity of London. The narrative extends from 1187 to 1199; but its chief interest consists in the minute and authentic narrative which it furnishes of the exploits of Richard I., from his departure from England in December 1189 to his death in 1199. The author states in his prologue that he was an eye-witness of much that he records; and various incidental circumstances which occur in the course of the narrative confirm this assertion.

The letters in Vol. II., written between 1187 and 1199, are of value as furnishing authentic materials for the history of the ecclesiastical condition of England during the reign of Richard I. They had their origin in a dispute which arose from the attempts of Baldwin and Hubert, archbishops of Canterbury, to found a college of secular canons, a project which gave great umbrage to the monks of Canterbury, who saw in it a design to supplant them in their function of metropolitan chapter. These letters are printed, for the first time, from a MS. belonging to the archiepiscopal library at Lambeth.

39. RECUEIL DES CRONIQUEES ET ANCHIENNES ISTORIES DE LA GRANT BRETAGNE A PRESENT NOMME ENGLETERRE, par JEHAN DE WAURIN. Vol. I., Albina to 688. Vol. II., 1399-1422. Edited by WILLIAM HARDY, Esq. F.S.A. 1864-1868.

40. A COLLECTION OF THE CHRONICLES AND ANCIENT HISTORIES OF GREAT BRITAIN, NOW CALLED ENGLAND, by JOHN DE WYVYN. Albina to 688. (Translation of the preceding Vol. I.) Edited and translated by WILLIAM HARDY, Esq., F.S.A. 1864.

This curious chronicle extends from the fabulous period of history down to the return of Edward IV. to England in the year 1471, after the second deposition of Henry VI. The manuscript from which the text of the work is taken is preserved in the Imperial Library at Paris, and is believed to be the only complete and nearly contemporary copy in existence. The work, as originally bound, was comprised in six volumes, since rebound in morocco in 12 volumes, folio maximo, vellum, and is illustrated with exquisite miniatures, vignettes, and initial letters. It was written towards the end of the fifteenth century, having been expressly executed for Louis de Bruges, Seigneur de la Gruthuyse and Earl of Winchester, from whose cabinet it passed into the library of Louis XII. at Blois.

41. POLYCHRONICON RANULPHI HIGDEN, with Trevisa's Translation. Vols. I. and II. Edited by CHURCHILL BABINGTON, B.D., Senior Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1865-1869.

This is one of the many mediæval chronicles which assume the character of a history of the world. It begins with the creation, and is brought down to the author's own time, the reign of Edward III. Prefixed to the historical portion, is a chapter devoted to geography, in which is given a description of every known land. To say that the Polychronicon was written in the fourteenth century is to say that it is not free from inaccuracies. It has, however, a value apart from its intrinsic merits. It enables us to form a very fair estimate of the knowledge of history and geography which well-informed readers of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries possessed, for it was then the standard work on general history.

The two English translations, which are printed with the original Latin, afford interesting illustrations of the gradual change of our language, for one was made in the fourteenth century, the other in the fifteenth. The differences between Trevisa's version and that of the unknown writer are often considerable.

42. LE LIVRE DE REIS DE BRITTANIE E LE LIVRE DE REIS DE ENGLETERE. Edited by JOHN GLOVER, M.A., Vicar of Brading, Isle of Wight, formerly Librarian of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1865.

These two treatises, though they cannot rank as independent narratives, are nevertheless valuable as careful abstracts of previous historians, especially "Le Livre de Reis de Engleterre." Some various readings are given which are interesting to the philologist as instances of semi-Saxonized French.

It is supposed that Peter of Ickham must have been the author, but no certain conclusion on that point has been arrived at.

43. CHRONICA MONASTERII DE MELSA, AB ANNO 1150 USQUE AD ANNUM 1406. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by EDWARD AUGUSTUS BOND, Esq., Assistant Keeper of the Manuscripts, and Egerton Librarian, British Museum. 1866-1868.

The Abbey of Meaux was a Cistercian house, and the work of its abbot is both curious and valuable. It is a faithful and often minute record of the establishment of a religious community, of its progress in forming an ample revenue, of its struggles to maintain its acquisitions, and of its relations to the governing institutions of the country. In addition to the private affairs of the monastery, some light is thrown upon the public events of the time, which are however kept distinct, and appear at the end of the history of each abbot's administration. The text has been printed from what is said to be the autograph of the original compiler, Thomas de Burton, the nineteenth abbot.

44. MATTHÆI PARISIENSIS HISTORIA ANGLORUM, SIVE, UT VULGO DICITUR, HISTORIA MINOR. Vols. I., II., and III. 1067-1253. Edited by Sir FREDERIC MADDEN, K.H., Keeper of the Department of Manuscripts, British Museum. 1866-1869.

The exact date at which this work was written is, according to the chronicler, 1250. The history is of considerable value as an illustration of the period during which the author lived, and contains a good summary of the events which followed the Conquest. This minor chronicle is, however, based on another work (also written by Matthew Paris) giving fuller details, which has been called the 'Historia Major.' The chronicle here published, nevertheless, gives some information not to be found in the greater history.

45. LIBER MONASTERII DE HYDA: A CHRONICLE AND CHARTULARY OF HYDE ABBEY, WINCHESTER, 455-1023. Edited, from a Manuscript in the Library of the Earl of Macclesfield, by EDWARD EDWARDS, Esq. 1866.

The "Book of Hyde" is a compilation from much earlier sources, which are usually indicated with considerable care and precision. In many cases, however, the Hyde chronicler appears to correct, to qualify, or to amplify—either from tradition or from sources of information not now discoverable—the statements which, in substance, he adopts. He also mentions, and frequently quotes from, writers whose works are either entirely lost or at present known only by fragments.

There is to be found, in the "Book of Hyde," much information relating to the reign of King Alfred which is not known to exist elsewhere. The volume contains some curious specimens of Anglo-Saxon and Mediæval English.

46. CHRONICON SCOTORUM: A CHRONICLE OF IRISH AFFAIRS, from the EARLIEST TIMES to 1135; with a SUPPLEMENT, containing the Events from 1141 to 1150. Edited, with a Translation, by WILLIAM MAUNSELL HENNESSY, Esq., M.R.I.A. 1866.

There is, in this volume, a legendary account of the peopling of Ireland and of the adventures which befell the various heroes who are said to have been connected with Irish history. The details are, however, very meagre both for this period and for the time when history becomes more authentic. The plan adopted in the chronicle gives the appearance of an accuracy to which the earlier portions of the work cannot have any claim. The succession of events is marked, year by year, from A.M. 1599 to A.D. 1150. The principal events narrated in the later portion of the work are the invasions of foreigners and the wars of the Irish among themselves. The text has been printed from a MS. preserved in the library of Trinity College, Dublin, written partly in Latin, partly in Irish.

47. THE CHRONICLE OF PIERRE DE LANGTOFT, IN FRENCH VERSE, FROM THE EARLIEST PERIOD TO THE DEATH OF EDWARD I. Vols. I. and II. Edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A. 1866-1868.

It is probable that Pierre de Langtoft was a canon of Bridlington, in Yorkshire, and that he lived in the reign of Edward I., and during a portion of the reign of Edward II. This chronicle is divided into three parts; in the first is an abridgment of Geoffrey of Monmouth's "Historia Britonum," in the second, a history of the Anglo-Saxon and Norman kings, down to the death of Henry III., and in the third a history of the reign of Edward I. The principal object of the work was apparently to show the justice of Edward's Scottish wars. The language is singularly corrupt, and a curious specimen of the French of Yorkshire.

48. THE WAR OF THE GAEDHIL WITH THE GAILL, or, THE INVASIONS OF IRELAND BY THE DANES AND OTHER NORSEMEN. Edited, with a Translation, by JAMES HENTHORN TODD, D.D., Senior Fellow of Trinity College, and Regius Professor of Hebrew in the University, Dublin. 1867.

The work in its present form, in the editor's opinion, is a comparatively modern version of an undoubtedly ancient original. That it was compiled from contemporary materials has been proved by curious incidental evidence. It is stated in the account given of the battle of Clontarf that the full tide in Dublin Bay on the day of the battle (23 April 1014) coincided with sunrise; and that the returning tide in the evening aided considerably in the defeat of the Danes. The fact has been verified by astronomical calculations, and the inference is that the author of the chronicle, if not himself an eye-witness, must have derived his information from those who were eye-witnesses. The contents of the work are sufficiently described in its title. The story is told after the manner of the Scandinavian Sagas, with poems and fragments of poems introduced into the prose narrative.

49. GESTA REGIS HENRICI SECUNDI BENEDICTI ABBATIS. THE CHRONICLE OF THE REIGNS OF HENRY II. AND RICHARD I., 1169-1192; known under the name of BENEDICT OF PETERBOROUGH. Vols. I. and II. Edited by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, Oxford, and Lambeth Librarian. 1867.

This chronicle of the reigns of Henry II. and Richard I., known commonly under the name of Benedict of Peterborough, is one of the best existing specimens of a class of historical compositions of the first importance to the student.

50. MUNIMENTA ACADEMICA, OR, DOCUMENTS ILLUSTRATIVE OF ACADEMICAL LIFE AND STUDIES AT OXFORD (in Two Parts). Edited by the Rev. HENRY ANSTEY, M.A., Vicar of St. Wendron, Cornwall, and lately Vice-Principal of St. Mary Hall, Oxford. 1868.

This work will supply materials for a History of Academical Life and Studies in the University of Oxford during the 13th, 14th, and 15th centuries.

51. CHRONICA MAGISTRI ROGERI DE HOVEDENE. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, and Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. 1868-1870.

This work has long been justly celebrated, but not thoroughly understood until Mr. Stubbs' edition. The earlier portion, extending from 732 to 1148, appears to be a copy of a compilation made in Northumbria about 1161, to which Hoveden added little. From 1148 to 1169—a very valuable portion of this work—the matter is derived from another source, to which Hoveden appears to have supplied little, and not always judiciously. From 1170 to 1192 is the portion which corresponds with the Chronicle known under the name of Benedict of Peterborough (see No. 49); but it is not a copy, being sometimes an abridgment, at others a paraphrase; occasionally the two works entirely agree, showing that both writers had access to the same materials, but dealt with them differently. From 1192 to 1201 may be said to be wholly Hoveden's work: it is extremely valuable, and an authority of the first importance.

52. WILLELMI MALMESBIRIENSIS MONACHI DE GESTIS PONTIFICUM ANGLORUM LIBRI QUINQUE. Edited, from William of Malmesbury's Autograph MS., by N. E. S. A. HAMILTON, Esq., of the Department of Manuscripts, British Museum. 1870.

William of Malmesbury's "Gesta Pontificum" is the principal foundation of English Ecclesiastical Biography, down to the year 1122. The manuscript which has been followed in this Edition is supposed by Mr. Hamilton to be the author's autograph, containing his latest additions and amendments.

53. HISTORIC AND MUNICIPAL DOCUMENTS OF IRELAND, FROM THE ARCHIVES OF THE CITY OF DUBLIN, &c. 1172-1320. Edited by JOHN T. GILBERT, Esq., F.S.A., Secretary of the Public Record Office of Ireland. 1870.

A collection of original documents, elucidating mainly the history and condition of the municipal, middle, and trading classes under or in relation with the rule of England in Ireland,—a subject hitherto in almost total obscurity. Extending over the first hundred and fifty years of the Anglo-Norman settlement, the series includes charters, municipal laws and regulations, rolls or names of citizens and members of merchant-guilds, lists of commodities with their rates, correspondence, illustrations of relations between ecclesiastics and laity; together with many documents exhibiting the state of Ireland during the presence there of the Scots under Robert and Edward Bruce.

WORKS PUBLISHED IN PHOTOZINCOGRAPHY.

DOMESDAY BOOK, or the GREAT SURVEY OF ENGLAND OF WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, 1086 ; fac-simile of the Part relating to each county, separately (with a few exceptions of double counties). Photozincographed, by Her Majesty's Command, at the Ordnance Survey Office, Southampton, Colonel SIR HENRY JAMES, R.E., F.R.S., &c., Director. 35 Parts, imperial quarto (1861-1863) boards. Price 4s. 6d. to 1*l.* 1*s.* each Part, according to size ; or, bound in 2 Vols., 18*l.*

This important and unique survey of the greater portion of England* is the oldest and most valuable record in the national archives. It was commenced about the year 1084 and finished in 1086. Its compilation was determined upon at Gloucester by William the Conqueror, in council, in order that he might know what was due to him, in the way of tax, from his subjects, and that each at the same time might know what he had to pay. It was compiled as much for their protection as for the benefit of the sovereign. The nobility and people had been grievously distressed at the time by the king bringing over large numbers of French and Bretons, and quartering them on his subjects, "each according to the measure of his land," for the purpose of resisting the invasion of Cnut, King of Denmark, which was apprehended. The commissioners appointed to make the survey were to inquire the name of each place ; who held it in the time of King Edward the Confessor ; the present possessor ; how many hides were in the manor ; how many ploughs were in demesne ; how many homagers ; how many villeins ; how many cottars ; how many serving men ; how many free tenants ; how many tenants in soccage ; how much wood, meadow, and pasture ; the number of mills and fish-ponds ; what had been added or taken away from the place ; what was the gross value in the time of Edward the Confessor ; the present value ; and how much each free-man or soc-man had, and whether any advance could be made in the value. Thus could be ascertained who held the estate in the time of King Edward ; who then held it ; its value in the time of the late king ; and its value as it stood at the formation of the survey. So minute was the survey, that the writer of the contemporary portion of the Saxon Chronicle records, with some asperity—"So very narrowly he caused it to be traced out, that there was not a single hide, nor one virgate of land, nor even, it is shame to tell, though it seemed to him no shame to do, an ox, nor a cow, nor a swine was left, that was not set down."

Domesday Survey is in two parts or volumes. The first, in folio, contains the counties of Bedford, Berks, Bucks, Cambridge, Chester and Lancaster, Cornwall, Derby, Devon, Dorset, Gloucester, Hants, Hereford, Herts, Huntingdon, Kent, Leicester and Rutland, Lincoln, Middlesex, Northampton, Nottingham, Oxford, Salop, Somerset, Stafford, Surrey, Sussex, Warwick, Wilts, Worcester, and York. The second volume, in quarto, contains the counties of Essex, Norfolk, and Suffolk.

Domesday Book was printed verbatim et literatim during the last century, in consequence of an address of the House of Lords to King George III. in 1767. It was not, however, commenced until 1773, and was completed early in 1783. In 1860, Her Majesty's Government, with the concurrence of the Master of the Rolls, determined to apply the art of photozincography to the production of a fac-simile of Domesday Book, under the superintendence of Colonel Sir Henry James, R.E., director of the Ordnance Survey, Southampton. The fac-simile was completed in 1863.

* For some reason left unexplained, many parts were left unsurveyed ; Northumberland, Cumberland, Westmoreland, and Durham, are not described in the survey ; nor does Lancashire appear under its proper name ; but Furness, and the northern part of Lancashire, as well as the south of Westmoreland, with a part of Cumberland, are included within the West Riding of Yorkshire. That part of Lancashire which lies between the Ribble and Mersey, and which at the time of the survey comprehended 688 manors, is joined to Cheshire. Part of Rutland is described in the counties of Northampton and Lincoln.

FAC-SIMILES of NATIONAL MANUSCRIPTS, from WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR to QUEEN ANNE, selected under the direction of the Master of the Rolls, and Photozincographed, by Command of Her Majesty, by Colonel SIR HENRY JAMES, R.E., Director of the Ordnance Survey. Price, each Part, double foolscap folio, with translations and notes, 1*l.* 1*s.*

Part I. (William the Conqueror to Henry VII.). 1865.

Part II. (Henry VIII. and Edward VI.). 1866.

Part III. (Mary and Elizabeth). 1867

Part IV. (James I. to Anne). 1868.

The first Part extends from William the Conqueror to Henry VII., and contains autographs of the kings of England, as well as of many other illustrious personages famous in history, and some interesting charters, letters patent, and state papers. The second Part, for the reigns of Henry VIII. and Edward VI., consists principally of holograph letters and autographs of kings, princes, statesmen, and other persons of great historical interest, who lived during those reigns. The third Part contains similar documents for the reigns of Mary and Elizabeth, including a signed bill of Lady Jane Grey. The fourth Part concludes the series, and comprises a number of documents taken from the originals belonging to the Constable of the Tower of London; also several records illustrative of the Gunpowder Plot, and a woodcut containing portraits of Mary Queen of Scots and James VI., circulated by their adherents in England, 1580-3.
